

HAMBURG SCIENTIFIC FOUNDATION
RESULTS OF
THE SOUTH SEAS-EXPEDITION 1908-1910

EDITED BY
PROF. DR. G. THILENIUS
DIRECTOR OF THE HAMBURG MUSEUM OF ETHNOLOGY

II. ETHNOGRAPHY: B. MICRONESIA

AUGUSTIN KRÄMER

PALAU VOLUME 2

HAMBURG
L. FRIEDRICHSEN & CO.

1919

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

PRINT BY AUGUSTIN IN GLÜCKSTADT AND HAMBURG

Information To Users

This translation is digitally released on July 01, 2014. This is a work in progress where ongoing edits are still being made before its final publication at the end of 2015. For edits and comments please email to kramerpalau@yahoo.com.

Disclaimer Statement

This translation is a product of the Ethnographic Translation Project funded through a Germany government grant in partnership with the Krämer Ethnographic Translation Committee based in Palau. The contents and information contained herein do not necessarily reflect the views of the German Government. The rights for the publication, as a whole or in parts, of all the volumes of the Results of the South Seas Expedition 1908 – 1910 resting solely with the Hamburg Scientific Foundation in Germany. The Krämer Ethnographic Translation Committee would like to thank the Hamburg Scientific Foundation and the Hamburg Ethnological Museum for their assistance and continued support toward this project.

Watercolor by E. Krämer
Diraingeáol from Goréör and Kélebil from Melekéiok View from Blai No. VII a Ingeáol in Goréör towards the gogeál-rocks Songél a Lise in the south

Foreword.

This Volume presents part III and IV of the index in Vol. 1 p. XIII.

New for monographs of people is the exact recording of settlements; of nearly every one a description of the place, its industriousness, privileges, history, constitution and village-god have been indicated next to a map of the village. Mr. H. DENYS., graphic artist at the Deutschen Seewarte in Hamburg executed the drawings with much devotion. An explanation for the map is found on p. XII. The records were obtained by counting steps and bearings with the compass in a plane table procedure. This seemed to be the best way in Palau where there were stone paths and pavements for the bai, trailheads, seats for the chiefs, bathing-pools, etc. All consisted of loosely assembled stone heaps and therefore deserved to be recorded. During these surveys each house, etc. was visited; therefore many things were noticed, which might have been overlooked otherwise, and this was an additional advantage. I am of the opinion that even studying the most primitive people a record of the settlement should be made.

Just like on Samoa, I took special care in the genealogical chart, this time following the example of KIEFER. The historical results have been noted down on p. 224 and the demographic ones on p. 295.

The last part informs about the exceptional difficulties with the studies of the language.

The index of the general literature is in an appendix of this volume. Due to the slow progress of the printing, it seemed an advantage, as there are many references in the text. The Spanish literature has already been mentioned in Vol. 1. To repeat it at the end might be considered.

The nowadays prevalent oppression and condemnation of our colonial ventures by our enemies cannot stop the German spirit of research. The current new order cannot be a lasting one. May the reports of the Hamburger Südsee-Expedition be evidence of how Germany developed its colonies.

Stuttgart, 27th August 1919

AUGUSTIN KRÄMER

	page		Page
Foreword	V	Distr. II. Ngarárd. Political Groups
Part III. The Settlements	1	Geography	45
Division in Areas and Districts	1	History.	48
Setting of the Settlement	4	1. Ngabúkěd	49
History of Settling	5	Ngěóng	50
History of the Land	6	History, Title Mad	52
Industriousness	8	2. Ngaramedeĩ	56
Distr. I Ngaregolóag. Political Groups		3. Galáp	56
Geography	9	4. Ngěsáng	61
Industriousness, History	13	5. a Ulimáng	61
1. Mangal'lang	15	6. Ngarepkeĩ	63
2. Ngěúngěł	20	7. Ngaramelíl	63
3. Ngarametóng	21	8. Ngaradermáng.	64
4. Ngrĩl	22	9. Ngaregobatáng	64
5. Ngabiúl	25	10. Ulangaráng	64
6. a Iebúkũl	29	11. Kekláu	65
7. Ngarabāu	31	12. Ngaradepsú +	69
8. Góleĩ	32	13. a Idelúi +	69
9. Ukál +	38	14. Táog +	69
10. Ngarakëam +	38	15. Kloultáog +	69
11. Dúbog +	38	16. Ngarakësang +	69
12. Ngartól +	38	17. Desóngong +	69
13. Ngaregebáb +	38	18. Ngaratelúáng +	70
14. Kiok +	38	19. Ngartúkũr +	70
15. Nggúi +	38	20. a Urúong +	70
16. Ngatmél +	38	21. Ngatagëróng +	70
17. Melekeĩ +	38	22. Ngaskerás +	70
18. Ngarapesong +	39	23. Ngúrang +	70
19. Uriúl +	39	24. Ngarenggóng	70
20. Ngartmóng +	39	25. Ngarietët +	70
21. Ngesūd +	39	26. Ngarblūd +	70
22. Delbóng +	39	27. Ngaramedáng +	70
23. Ngarekekłáu +	39	28. Ngarapelang +	70
24. Ngaregúr +	39	29. Kélebid +	70
25. Nggěiangěł	40	30. Górabag +	70

Ngardíms	43	31. Utáoër +	70
Ngardílong	44	32. a Gol	71
26. Ngáruangěł +	45	Distr. III. Gongodogül.	73

//VII//

	page
(1.) Ngardmaũ	74	20. Ngapedegál +	119
1. Gurdmaũ	80	Ngivál-Kivelül	119
2. Ngërutói	82	21. Ngaremegáu	121
3. Ngatpúiěg	83	22. Ngarsngai	122
4. a Irúr +	84	23. Ngaragelūk.	122
5. Ngaragatáng +	84	24. Ngel'lau	123
6. Gomelátěg mólog +	84	25. a L'lególog +	124
7. Ugeráel +	84	26. a Imakáng +	124
8. Ngaradekús +	84	27. Ngareböcü +	124
9. Ngaragëdag +	84	28. Ngerüg +	25
10. Ngareksóng +	84	29. Ngaruét +	125
11. Ngaramásăg +	84	30. Gomekátł udóng +	125
12. Dalngóbol +	85	31. Ngěsměsoáng +	125
13. Ngaramisóng +	85	32. a Ibüg +	125
14. a Goáng +	85	33. a Oíms +	125
15. Ngëuósog +	85	34. Ngërair +	125
16. Ngesebei+	85	35. Táog +	125
17. a Iméngěł +	85	36. a Dékěl +	125
Distr. IV. Ngatěłngál. Polit. Groups	85	37. Ngarekerú +	125
Geography.	86	Goldiáis +	125
History	87	38. Nggësar +	125
1. Melekéiok	87	39. Ngaráus +	127
Industriousness, Privileges		40. Ngarekesóu +	128
History	92	41. Ngarengasáng +	129
Title a Răklai	99	42. a Ibút +	130
Constitution	102	43. Ngămingěł +	130
Families	103	44. Ngardiól +	130
Genealogical chart	108	Bung l kelau	130
2. Ngërupesáng.	110	45. Ngarsúl +	130

3. Ngërámës.	112
4. Ngarameléğ	113
5. Ngëruliang	113
6. Ngëbúrëğ	114
7. Ngarevikl	115
8. Ngarekuteling +	117
9. Golivëğ +	117
10. Ngëvarâi +	117
11. Ngëruláng +	117
12. Ngaragolil +	117
13. Ngatëlngál +	117
14. Ngëriváng +	117
15. Ngíptál +	117
16. Blissang +	117
17. Ngakr (Ngkár)+	118
18. Ngarëmörag +	118
19. a Imólog +	118

46. Meróng +	135
47. Kerdë u +	136
48. Ngardórok +	136
49. Ngád vad +	136
50. Bitang +	136
51. Ngarebekál +	136
52. Ngaregemerákl +	136
53. Ngaragëbúkl +	136
54. Ngasuás +	136
Distr. V. Ngaramlungúi	136
1. a Imeúngs	138
2. a Ulegetóng	142
3. a Nglabáng	143
4. Ngërutegêi	143
Families.	144
5. Ngaremeténgël	149
6. Nggamaséd.	150

//VIII//

7. Ngareklngóng.	152
8. Ngatamedángep	152
9. a Uluáng +	153
10. Gorul'l +	153
11. Ngarbagéd re ngul +	153
12. Ngúkl +	154
13. Ngkebedül +	154
14. Ngátmadei +	154
15. Metëgerákl +	154
16. a Idëgór.	154
17. Ngaremeskáng.	154
18. a Rois +	156

15. Ngardâi +	178
16. Ngarderár +	178
17. Gomáog +	179
18. Ngaragamér +	179
Distr. VII. Ngaragúmëlbai	179
1. a Irai	181
2. Goikúl	188
Madál	191
a Iúáng.	193
3. Nggasagáng	193
6. Ngarsúng.	194
7. Ngurusár	194

page

page

19. Tegebóug +	156	8. Ngërulóbě̀l	197
20. Ngaridě́óngě̀l +	156	9. Ngatkíp	198
21. Ngesisě̀g +	156	10. Tuápě̀l +	200
22. Ngaramagaroáng +	157	11. Goltabád l keáp +	200
23. Ngërutóě̀l +	157	12. Ngaradesúm +	200
24. Ngadesiúr +	157	13. Ngediáol +	200
25. Ngesúg +	157	14. Ngerikīl +	200
26. a Irisóng +	157	15. Ngarduāis +	200
27. Ngátpang.	157	Distr. VIII. Ngarkldéu	200
28. Ngimís	158	Island Gorě̀or.	201
29. Ngardúbog +	160	Island Ngarekobasáng	202
30. Ngërugóp +	160	Island Malágal	204
31. Gě́uáng +	160	1. Gorě̀or.	205
32. a Ikid +	160	History.	211
33. a Ikrpelú +	160	Title a Ibédul	213
34. Ngabekāi+	160	Costitution.	216
35. Ngắdăsákěr +	161	Clubs.	218
Distr. VI. a Imelik	161	Family bl. I	222
1. Ngarekeāi - a Imig.	163	Genealogical chart	225
Title Rűngŭlbai	167	bl. II.	228
Genealogical chart.	168	bl. III	230
2. Mekér-Ngaramidár	170	bl. IV a. V.	231
3. a Imŭl.	170	bl. VI a. VII.	232
4. Galě̀gúi	171	bl. VIII, IX a. X.	234
5. Ngapedég.	172	bl. 11—13.	235
6. Gámliangě̀l.	173	bl. 14—20	236
7. Medórŏm.	176	bl. 21, 22, 23, a. 24	237
8. a Lmŭt +	178	bl. 25 a. 26.	238
9. Makáěp +	178	bl. 27—35.	239
10. Ngardebotár +	178	bl. 36—41.	240
11. a Itáoğ +	178	2. a lebúkŭl.	242
12. Ngaraklemádě̀l +	178	3. Ngaregamāi.	244
13. Ngaraberúŏğ +	178	4. Ngarekesauáol.	245
14. Ngaragabáb +	178	5. Ngarbagéd.	246

	page
6. Ngariéleb	250
7. Ngarebóděł.	250
8. Ngarmíd.	252
9. Ngarbagéd ē sâu +	256
10. Ngarekobasáng	257
11. a Meúngs.	260
12. Ngeritáng	260
Gogeál-Places +
Ngarenggól +	261
Ugél pelú +	261
Ngaremedíu +	261
Ngaláls +	261
Goikúl +	261
Ngaramiěg +	261
Pelúgauár +	261
Magaragard +	261
a Ulong +	261
Ngëregóng +	261
Ióu lomakáng +	261
Bablomakáng +	261
Ngemelís +	261
Ngaregěu +	261
Distr. IX. Pelíliou	261
History	263
1. Ngardolólok.	264
2. Ngariáp +	269
3. Ngatanggâu	271
4. Ngeríkl +	271
5. Ngarabesul.	271
6. Ngasiás.	271
7. Ngarakeukl	275
8. Pkúlapěłú	277
9. Ngaregól	279
10. Gomiótěł +	280
11. Gámilangěl +	280

	page
13. Ngarsióu.	281
14. a Oét	281
15. Ngaremangiaû +	281
Distr. X. a Ngeaur	281
1. Ngarapelâu	285
2. Rois	287
3. Ngaběángěđ.	288
4. Ngaramásăg	289
5. a Í +	290
6. Garítm +	290
7. Medórřom +	290
8. Golugâu +	290
9. a Kíděł +	290
10. Ngarkóngei +	290
11. Ngatkebúi +	290
12. a Debós +	290
Part IV. Demography, Anthropology, Language	291
a. Demography.	291
Reasons for Decline	293
Marriages and Children	295
b. Anthropology	298
Mentality	305
c. Language	310
I. Sound and Writing	316
II. Article.	319
III. Noun.	320
IV. Adjective.	330
V. Numbers.	331
VI. Pronouns	333
VII. Verbs.	339
VIII. Adverbs.	336
IX. Prepositions	337
X. Conjunctions.	338
XI. Interjections	339

12. a Imelógēl +	281
13. Ngarsióu.	281

XII. Affirmative and Negation . . .	339
Index of Verbs	361
Appendix: General Literature	362

//X//

INDEX OF TABLES, PICTURES, FIGURES OF VILLAGES AND GENEALOGICAL CHARTS

a. Index of Plates.

(my own photographs; two foreign ones, see figure 12)

between pages

between pages

Plate 1 (colored) title

Diraingéaol and Kélebil, in the background the gogeál rocks Songel a Lise (watercolor after life by E. Krämer).

Plate 2. 24 a. 25

1. Blai Kedámang, bai a Ilemāu and the boathouse in Ngěúngēl.
2. Western gable of bai Gosobulnāu next door a shrine in a Iebúkūl.
3. Shrine at the rúbak-bai Gosobulngāu and Bilekélēk in Ngabiú! (from the east)
4. Rub. nr. I Ngiraurékēd on the stone path in Ngabiú!, next to his blai and spirit hut.

Plate 3 40 a. 41

The coral island Nggeāngēl.

1. East coast at low tide.
2. Western beach at high tide.
3. Rubak-bai in Ngardíms.
4. Bád Golakáng.
5. Blai nr. I Ngardókou in Ngardíms.

Plate 4 (colored) 48 a. 49

The two rúbak-bai in Ngabúkēd (water color by Elisabeth Krämer).

Plate 5 72 a. 73

1. Rubak-bai in a Ulimáng.
2. Bai a Húlk with stone path in Ngērutói.
3. a Ikrebāi with trailhead Galsāu in Gurdmau.
4. Blai nr. VIII Meltált in Ngatpúieg.

Plate 6 88 a. 89

1. Rubak nr. I a RāklaiSoilókōl and his wife Bilung in Melekéiok.
2. Family Rul in Melekéiok with its 10 children (2 are missing) in the background the 3

Plate 9 144 a. 145

1. Bai Bungaru^{au} and the rubak-bai in a Imeúngs.
2. Blai nr. I a Klang in a Imeúngs.
3. Rubak-bai Geisau with shrine in Galēgúi.

4. Blai nr. I Delangabiáng (in form of a bai) in Ngimīs-Ngát pang.

Plate 10 184 a. 185

- a* Irāi:
1. Bai rairāi with the goutáng bai.
 2. Bai rai rāi and Medūlbai.
 3. Blai nr. III Ngerekíu.
 4. Galid-objects at bai a Iedegādēgil.

Plate 11 208 a. 209

Goréör:

- I. Rubak-bai Meketi and the corner Geibokíl.
2. Landing place and boathouse a Delúi.
3. Bai and boathouse Sāgāmús in 1907.
4. Blai 26. Milong.

Plate 12 222 a. 223

Goréör:

1. Rub. nr. I a Ibēdul
2. Blai nr. I a Idíd photograph 1876 by G. Riemer (see lit.)
3. Blai 36 Golngabáng with a Regúgēr and Rois.

Plate 13. 228 a. 229

Goréör:

1. Rub. nr. V Tern Góbak.
2. Nr. VIII Moāi Rekesiváng.
3. Nr. II Ngiraike!au and his brothers a Tekél and Golegeríl.

Plate 14 240 a. 241

1. Girl from Ngērupesáng.

rúbak-bai.
Plate 7 96 a. 97
 Melekéiok:

1. a ilíud-pavement Ngaramelekeióng.
2. The 3 rubak-bai from the south.
3. Bai Gádes i gëbíl from the west.
4. Compound of blai nr. III a Lúkëd

Plate 8 128 a. 129
 1. Ngirtemēi in Nggësár.
 2. Bai a Dok and boathouse in Nggësár.
 3. Bai Debí, boathouse, Bai Besós and bl. nr. I in Ngarsúl.

2. a Tkelgáng from Goréör.
3. Ngeribóngël and Diragóng Táldil from Goréör.
4. a Isikl from Goréör with daughter and Ritong from Merír.

Plate 15 256 a. 257
 1. Boathouse and Baia Itáog in Ngatkíp.
 2. Rubak-bai Raksíd in a Iebúkùl.
 3. bai l dort a Magáng in 1783 in Ngarmíd.
 4. Rubak-bai Galángël in Ngarekesauáol.

//XI//

INDEX OF TABLES, PICTURES, FIGURES OF VILLAGES AND GENEALOGICAL CHARTS

and bl. nr. I in Ngarsúl.

4. Rubak-bai Galángël in Ngarekesauáol.

between pages

between pages

Plate 16 272 a. 273
 Pelíliou:

1. Rubak-bai in Ngardolólók.
2. Rub. nr. I Gobakraluíl on the stone seat Gomisógöl.
3. Galid-blai 24 Baukësbógop in Ngasiás.
4. Blai nr. I Ngatapālaū in Ngarekeúkl.

Plate 17 (colored). 276 a. 277
galsbóng-ostentatioun hut nearby bl 14 Tamarikél in Ngarakeúkl on Pelíliou (water color by Elisabeth Krämer).

Plate 19 272 a. 273
 Goréör:

1. Ngitegóp from Blai 24 a Iivotóng
2. Siábal from blai 13 Tamarikél

Plate 18 304 a. 305

1. Women from Melekéiok.
2. Old Palauan woman with a piece of money as decoration.
3. Two Palauan girls.
4. Woman from Mangal'láng.

Plate 20 (colored). 276 a. 277

Dark-brown (after life) and ligh-brown Palauan men (after sketch) from the south and the north (water color by Elisabeth Krämer).

Index of Pictures.

(A.B. = Adolph Bannow †; E.K. = Elisabeth Krämer; A.K. = Augustin Krämer)

	page
Figure 1. The 3 mountains, Ngermongót, Galeós, and Ngádek seen from the South with the place I' of the stone from Figure 2 (A. K.) . . .	11
Figure 2. The stone of Delangerík, the god of Ngaregolóng, called Ugul a gëtfú on the mountain Galeós (E.K after A. K.)	12
Figure 3. The stone úlei , food for the galíd at Bai Ngërsóng (A. K.)	15
Figure 4. Stone seat with a back for the high chief nearby the rúbak-bai in Mangal'lang (A.K.)	16
Figure 5. Mast bearing stone for the sailboat of the galíd from Delbóng (A.K.)	16
Figure 6. House post made of stone in Ngarametóng táng l bad (A.K.)	21
Figure 7. Face without a mouth in Ngabiúl (A.K.)	27
Figure 8. The landing place Mmetëulogól in Gólei (E.K. after a photo.)	33
Figure 9. The rooster of Boi, seen from the side (A.K.)	33
Figure 10. Map of the setting of the legend stones 11—15 at the rubak bai of Gólei (A.K.) . . .	35
Figure 11. Goddess a Iluógël (A. B. after a photo.)	35
Figure 12. Her son Sokodiáng (A. K.). .	35

	page
Figure 21. The legend stones at Bai Ngaramesíkt in Kekláu.	65
Figure 22. The two storey galid-house a Iegól in Kekláu (E. K. loco)	66
Figure 23. The stone pavement in Desóngonong + (A.K.)	69
Figure 24. Stone seats at the eastern gable of bai G. a Ikrëbai in Gurdmaü (E.K. after a photo)	75
Figure 25. Blai nr. II Ngedengól in Gurdmaü (E.K.)	79
Figure 26. Bathing place and well Dio ra ikëam in Gurdmaü (E.K. after a photo)	77
Figure 27. Rubak-bai Goldiáng, seen from the south with its stone table in Ngërutói (E.K. after a photograph).	78
Figure 28. The stone bridge Ngaragelúg in Melekéiok, behind Bai le gasau is situated, on the right side on the sandy beach is the house where Kubary lived in 1883, which no longer exists (A.B. after Kubary's phot.)	88
Figure 29. blai nr. I a Udës in Melekéiok (E. K. after a water color)	89
Figure 30. The stone image of the god Golekéiok (E.K.)	90
Figure 31. The bersóiog -Schlange in Melekéiok (E.K.)	90
Figure 32. Bai and trailhead Gádës i

INDEX OF TABLES, PICTURES, PLANS OF VILLAGES AND GENEALOGICAL CHARTS

	page		page
Figure 40. View from the hill Túkūr, on Goréör, to the West (E.K. after a photo.)	201	Figure 48. Blai nr. VII in a Ingeáol; (drawn by A. B. after a water color by E. K.)	231
Figure 41. View from the hill Túkūr, on Goréör, north (E.K. after a photo.)	201	Figure 49. View from Ngaregamaito the bridgehead Ngarekamais (E. K. loco)	243
Figure 42. Goréör: bai G. a Dngöróngěr (E.K. after a photo.)	206	Figure 50. The bathing place Ngatúrur in Ngarbagéd (E. K. loco)	248
Figure 43. Boathouse and bai H Săgămús, seen from the north, from the sea in 1910 (after a colored drawing by E. K.)	207	Figure 51. The stone Běkēu rebódél in Ngarebódél (E.K. after a drawing by A.K.)	251
Figure 44. The three rubak-bai Meketí in Goréör, seen from the east (A. B. after a watercolor by E. K.)	208	Figure 52. The lake of Ngarmíd (E.K. after a photo.)	253
Figure 45. Goréör's eastern trailhead Ptelúl a Dmėsóngöp (E. K. loco)	210	Figure 53. The stone Dirangarekesauáol in Ngarmíd (E. K. loco)	254
Figure 46. Bai nr. I a Idíd's gólbed - stone pavement in Goréör	222	Figure 54. Galid-blai nr. I Gomũgtókói in Ngardolólók (A. B. after a watercolor by E. K.)	265
Figure 47. The aged a Ibédul 11 Gókēbai on his sickbed in 1910 (E. K. after a photo)	223	Figure 55. The interior of Figure 54 (E. K. after a photo)	269
		Figure 56. Ngēdelóg, the beach of the souls, seen from Ngaramúdél, maritim boat (E. K. after a photo)	284
		Figure 57. Very old, bald man (E. K. after a photo)	303

c. Index of the Plans of Villages.

Explanation of the signs in the map. village	1 a. Mangal'lang	14
a. house	b. Ngeũngěl and Ngaremetóng	19
[b.] blai with gólbed -pavement	c. Ngrīl	22
c. cooking house	d. Ngabiúl, Iebúkūl and Ngarabau	26
d. spirit hut	2. Gólei	36
boathouse diangěl	3. Nggeĩangěl	40
bai club house	4. a. Ngabúkěd	49
house of the priest	b. Galáp and Ngēsáng	57
tet shrine with four legs	c. Ulimáng	64
stone pavement	5. Kekláu	65
stone	6. a Gól	71
bai	7. Ngardmāu	81
on a galdúkl -pavement	8. Melekéiok with Ngērupesáng, Ngērámēs, Ngaremelég and Ngēruliáng	86
a gádēs stone path	9. Ngarevíkl
stone path with trailhead	10. Ngivál	119
ptelúl a gáng	11. Nggěssár	125
stone path with a ilíud pavement	12. a. Ngarsúl and Meróng	131 for rubak	b. Ngardórok channel	131

diong bathing pond deserted or abandoned former compound meséi taro patch mangroves edge of the reef sandy beach

13. a Imeúngs	139
14. Ngaremeténgěl	149
15. Nggamaséd	151
16. Ngaremeskáng	154
17. Ngímis (Ngatpang)	158
[18.] a. old Ngarekeai	164
b. new Ngarekeai	164
19. Galëgúi	171
20. Gámliangěl	173
21. Medórõm	176
22. a Iraĩ (with blai 16)	182
23. Goikúl	189
24. Nggasagáng	193

INDEX OF TABLES, PICTURES, PLANS OF VILLAGES AND GENEALOGICAL CHARTS

	page		page
25 a. Channel of Ngurusár	196	29. Pelíliou	262
b. Ngurusár	196	30. a. Ngardolólók	267
c. Ngëruluóběĭ	198	b. Ngariáp	270
d. Ngatkíp	198	31. Ngasiás	272
26 a. Goréör and secondary villages	205	32. Ngarekeúkl	276
b. Ngarbagéd	247	33. Pkulapelú	278
27. Ngarmíd	252	34. Ngeaur, overview	282
28. a. Ngarekobasáng Island, overview		35. Plans of the 4 villages	286
.	258
b. Ngarekobasáng-Village	258
c. Meúngs-Village	258

d. Index of the Genealogical Charts.

Melekéiok Mel. At. 1—3	p. 108
Ngarekeāi Ngk. At. 1	" 168
" " " 2—3	" 169
Goréör Gor At. 1—5	" 225

Abbreviations

(explanations of the words p. 3 and Vol. I p. XVI)

Abb.	= picture	Kub.	= Kubary (Litt. p. 364)
Abt.	= part	L. ed.	= lettres edifiantes (Litt. P. 362)
Anm.	= footnote	lit.	= literature, p. 362
At.	= genealogical chart	Loco	= in situ
B.	= mountain	log.	= logúkl "story board" in part. VII
Bez.	= district	v.M.M.	= v. Miklucho-Maclay (Litt. p. 364)
bl.	= blai	Mel.	= Melekéiok, p. 87
C=K	= point	Mü.	= Müller (Litt. p. 367)
D.	= village	Ngk.	= Ngarekeāi p. 163
E.	= entry	Rub.	= rubak chief
E.K.	= Elisabeth Krämer, member of the expedition	s.	= see
		S.	= page
G.	= Gogeál	Sarf.	= Saftert, member of the expedition
Gald	= gálděbegěl	Sem.	= Semper (lit. p. 364)
Gen.	= generation	Sp. Litt.	= Spanish Literature, Vol. 1 p. 175
Ges.	= chant (in part VII)
Gesch.	= story (in part VII)	Taf.	= plate

Gor.	= Goréör	Tlb.	= volume
H.	= house	R.M.A.	= Reichsmarineamt (lit. p. 366)
Ha.	= Hambruch, member of the expedition	S.-K.	= Schmeltz-Krause (lit. p. 365)
He.	= Hellwig, member of the expedition	Verf.
Hlbd.	= part-volume	Verz.	= index
I.	= island	Vgl.	= compare
K.	= point	Wall.	= Walleser (Litt. p. 366)
Kr. (A.K.)	= Krämer (Litt. p. 367)	Wils.	= H. Wilson (Litt. p. 363)

∞ means in the genealogical charts "married with ...", in the verbal conjugation pointing to "many", in contrast to "it" (1) one thing.

Errata

(Destroy After Insertion)

p. 8 line 26, instead of the German Word Bootschaft put Botschaft, [which means message.]

- p. 41, after 71 (last line) add 169
- p. 43 line 14, instead of gumerëu u put kumerëu
- p. 43 footnote 1, instead of deuteput deuted
- p. 50, instead of (footnote) 4 a. 3 put 1 a. 2
- p. 64 line 16, instead of story 75 put story 74
- p. 70 line 5, instead of story 75 put story 61 and 74
- plate 5², instead of Gurdmäu put Gongodogül
- p. 80 line 31, instead of Dir'rungül put Dir'rungülbai
- p. 91 at Figure 32, instead of Gádës put Gádës i gëbil.
- p. 153 line 17, instead wnrdeput wurde
- Figure 36, instead of C. put K.
- p. 165 line 4, delete the comma behind 1909
- p. 191 line 23, instead of her put his
- p. 203 line 32, instead of "Spitzfisch" put "Spritzfisch"
- plate 11⁴, instead of ulangáng put galsbóng
- p. 221 lowest line, instead of 4 put 5
- plate 12³, instead of "Kothaus" put "Kochhaus"
- plate 12³, instead of Sang put Láug
- Plate 13³, instead of Ikél and Golegerīb put Tkél and Golegeríl
- p. 229 line 35, delete the former
- plate 14², instead of Ikelgáng put Tkelgáng
- p. 246 line 24, instead of south eastern put south western
- plate 15¹, instead of Nathip put Ngatkíp
- plate 15⁴, instead of Ngarekesanáol put Ngarekesauáol
- p. 281 line 17, instead of pan put plan
- plate 19², instead of Giabal and bai put Siabal and blai
- p. 334 line 27, instead of fate put fale

The Settlements.

Division of the Natives into Areas and Provinces

Geography, History, Constitution and Maps of Provinces and Villages.

In part II. it was established that the name of Palau comprises the whole archipelago, but that the natives call the volcanic land Pela u, and the lime rocks Gogeál. They distinguish 4 areas:

1. Northern reef-area. The northern reefs and islands, Nggeíangel next to Ngáruangěl, are called Bigákět. This word comes from omigáket "to spread the legs", which can only refer to the two reefs, which point to the north just like two legs. (Vol. 1, plan 2)
2. Northeast-area. Bab l dáob¹"Over the Sea" is the name of the northern area of the main island that is mostly under the influence of the northeast trade wind. Due to the influence of the white people this word was used for the whole island and correlates with the Polynesian mata fanúa or "the land above the wind". The actual Bab l dáob stretches from the northern tip to the line Ngivál–Ngardmáu.
3. Mid-area. Gogal'legútũm²"the high land", because on the mid- and southern part of the island are the highest elevations. I only found this word indicated on a sketched map from 1903 of the Reichsmarineamt as Logallogutum for the main island (see Vol. 1, page 250).
4. Southern-area. Everything to the south of the main island - the southern part of this is often included - is called Ióuldáob³"lower sea"; in Polynesian mulifanúa "the Land in the lee side"; in the back. The southernmost part of the main island is often considered part of it, as for example seen in story 16 of Ugelsúng.

Because of the prevailing eastern winds the natives call the entire eastern part despadál'l or *bitaliángěd ra despadál'l*⁴ at the same time this is considered to be a name of honor for the landscapes NgatěIngál and Ngaregolóng; the western part is called keúkl.

From the north to the south there are 10 districts. In order to remove any doubts I note that this division is untouched by any European influence and is thus purely Palauan.

In Bigáket and the north east area there are:

District I. Ngaregolóng; takes up the northernmost half of the long peninsula where the island of Babeldáob ends towards the north, together with the uninhabited islands of Ngarekeklau⁵ and Ngaregúr and the coral island Nggeiangěl which lie outside of the barrier reef. The former Ngáruangěl was nearby but has disappeared. Main settlement: Mangal'lang. Leader: a Guóng.

Distr. II. Ngarárd in the south of the above-mentioned peninsula.

Main settlement: Ngăbúkěd. Leader: a Mad.

Distr. III. Ngardmau also called Gongodogúl in the northwestern area of the wide main part.

Main settlement: Gurdmau. Leader: Beóug.

In the middle area Gogal'lěgútũm there are:

Distr. IV. Nagtělngál, which is the main part of the east coast of the wide land. This was the main area in the old days.

Main settlement: Melekéiok. Leader: a Ráklai.

Distr. V. Ngaramlungúi exactly west of Ngatělngál on the western coast.

Main settlement: a Imeúngs. Leader: Ngirturóng.

to this belongs

Ngát pang on the great cleft of the west coast; called Uleul'l.

Main settlement: Ngimís. Leader: Rekămesikt.

Distr. VI. a* Imelĭk, taking up the southwest coast of the main island.

Main settlement: Ngarekeai. Leader: Rúngŭl bai.

Distr. VII. Ngaragúmělbai on the southern tip of the main island.

Main settlement: a Irai. Leader: Ngirakéd.

Finally, to the southern area Ióuldáob belong:

Distr. VIII. Ngarkldéu an important district in the middle of the group. The island Goréör belongs to it, the island Ngarekobasáng, the island Malágāl and the village Ngatkíp on Babeldáob that is lying between Ngaragúmělbai and a Imelĭk.

Main settlement: Goréör. Leader: a Ibědul.

Distr. IX. Peliliou, pronounced Pelĭlju; island on the southern corner of the great barrier reef. Main settlement: Ngardolólók. Leader: Gobakraluíl.

Distr. X. a Ngeaūr, the Angaur of the white people; an island outside of the reef in the south; at the moment exploited for phosphate.

Main settlement: Ngaramásăg. Leader: Ugéramásăg.

For the understanding of the description of the settlement a few comments beforehand.

Politically the Palauans divide their archipelago into a series of districts (deteút ra pelú). Each has a high chief (rubukúl⁶ pélau) living in the main settlement (klóul pelú). Otherwise the village mayor is called ptelúl⁷ a pelú, the village pelú and a smaller village or part of a village kékerei pelú. Each district, each village, each family has their god called galíd, the priest has the same name. Each bigger village has 10 chiefs (arúbak) whose society (klóbak) has a name; the same applies to the 10 women (ardil) of the village.

Always one chief and one woman — his relative from the same clan (keblīl), not his wife — belong to one house (blai), of which there are usually 10 in existence. The chiefs and the women are numbered from I-X and have the titles of their houses. Otherwise there can be any amount of houses without any title that are also called blai.

The dominant role in the village have blai nr. I and II and in this sense the male and female titleholder of both blai. The other 8 blai are divided into two halves and owe fealty to the two leading ones. Thus, two sides bitang are distinguished, which are called bital blai ma bital blai. The halving can be I, III, V, VII, IX and II, IV, VI, VIII, X but this does not always have to be the case, as the before mentioned main settlement Mangal'áng shows where number VII holds second place and thus rules the other side.

Where no blai was standing on a traditional place for a house I made a cross +. A house is indicated by a black rectangle, always a blai, a house for living, when a pavement is in front of it (see source for the maps). The front side of a blai where doors are is always indicated in the maps by a white or dotted rectangle, which represents the stone pavement gólbed, the burial place of the family. In contrast to it the bai is completely framed, because it is standing on a pavement galdúkl. In addition it has on each gable side a dot for the entrance posts. Rectangles or circles with a dot in the middle represent bathing ponds díong. Rectangles on the course of a village road are the sitting places a illud of the chiefs. Next to the actual chiefs (rúbak) there are "secondary chiefs" uriúl rúbak who usually are the messengers and assistants of the first ones.

1-3 "village houses" bai l pelú are usually standing "in the middle of the village" (gelsél a pelú), of which the first and the second are nearly always called Gosobúlŋgā⁸ ("warming place on the fire") and Bilekélěk ("also big). But each men's club (gáldēbegěl) has a clubhouse (bai l gáldēbegěl), too. Each village of a certain significance has at least two clubs, and, according to its size, may have up to 10 clubs, so there are usually several bai, which are standing somewhere along the village road, the stone path (a gádēs) or on the head of the streets (ptelúl a gáng) or next to the boathouses (diángěl), or even on the landing bridges themselves.

Usually there are two boathouses, one for each side, to each of which a channel(táog) leadsthrough the mangrove bushes.

According to these the clubs and the respective bai, just like the blai, are divided into two "channel sides" bital táog ma bital táog. Each side has in their respective canoe house a war canoe kabékl, with which they go to war on their own táog.

This is the general political and social organization, as far as it is necessary for the following listing.

The Setting of the Settlements is based on a division in two, as can be deduced from the previous chapter. The reason of this division can be seen in atotemistic basis, as will be explained in part. VI. The Polynesian village setting is decisive for the mapping, the Polynesians' central position of the marae determines the "village house" bai l pelú, which is always situated gelsél a pelú inthe "middle of the village". There can be up to three village houses (Goréör, aIraĩ, Melekéiok); often they are situated on vast stone platforms, called galdúkl. During meetings and festivities they house the guests; just like the Samoan Malae, only these are not paved. In Palau, the village-streets are also paved with loose stones, something that can be considered to be quite extraordinary. Usually there are always two. They start from the enormous pavement and lead preferably in opposite directions, ending at the two landing places. According to the size of a place and its topographical circumstances, other stone paths will lead from the big platform (Melekéiok) or from the village road (Goréör) as can be seen in the maps. The stone paths are often grandioseconstructions erected in the memory of victorious war enterprises, as for instance the southern path in Melekéiok or the incomparable eastern road in Ngabúkěd, which has sometimes a width of more than 10 steps. At the end of the stone path there is usually a club-bai as an entrance sentry and as a safety device against an enemy attack. The residential houses are situated along the stone paths, though not in rows on the road itself but a little bit aside from the path, sometimes quite hidden in the vegetation and scattered around.

The houses from nr. I to nr. X usually have the best locations. Mostly nr. I and nr. II are located in the immediate neighborhood of the village house. Right next to the village there are some taro patches, which usually belong to the first ten families. The property circumstances are explained in more detail in the section about Goréör.

History of the Settlement.

It is a curious fact, which derives from countless stories and traditions, that in former times the high lime rocks in the south had been settled, which are now uninhabited. Only on the flat island Pelíliōu and a Ngeaur there are still some villages. Though what is lying between these two islands and the northern volcanic Pelau-land is now without any exception free of all settlements. When visiting these areas you will not be surprised by this fact as everywhere the porous rocks jut out of the water and are covered with dense woods. A few small, flat islets with sandy beaches are there, which could well be lived on, such as Ngaiángēs (Vol. I, plan 2, j 7° 12'), Ngēregóng and Ngemlís (j 6'), Ngaregéu (j 4') and so on, but it could be only a few people. On the first two are some shelters, but fishermen visit them only for short periods of time.

This shows clearly that in former times natives lived in this waterless Gogeál only when forced to, when continuous feuds and nonexistent organization made subsistence difficult. As soon as possible they moved over to the volcanic land where flat or hilly countryside was in abundance, where there were springs and streams and where swamp taro could be cultivated. First they settled on the heights and the main settlements Melekéiok, Mangal'áng, a Imeúngs and Gurdmau are still today situated on the hill, whereas the moving to the coasts of Ngarekeai was done in front of my eyes⁹. In former times Ngasiás on Pelíliōu was on the hills, too. I could not find out if next to Gogeál the land of Pelau was in former times settled, though it might be assumed to be so. But a big population was certainly only possible after the emigration from the lime rocks. Especially the south western coast of Babldáob, the countryside a Imelík all the way up to Ngardmau had a lot of immigration from there. The villages Medórōm, Ngátmadēi and Ngaramásăg were formerly situated on a Ngeaur, and the people from Gámliangēl owned the mountain in the north of the island Pelíliou until they found a similar one in a Imelík. Certainly Ngergói and Ngemelís on the Olobetápēl-Islands were inhabited (Vol. 1, p. 199) that moved to Nggamaséd, then Ióu- and Babloma káng (it. p. 200) and Ngēregóng (it. p. 199) whose inhabitants moved to Ngaregamai on Goréor, following the inhabitants of Pelúgoár and Magaragárd. Though in former times, people from a Meúngs on Ngarekobasáng lived on a Ulóng (it. p. 202) where the shipwrecked from the "Antilope" were sheltered, as story 17c from Gosilék (part VII) shows. The former places of Ngaramiēg and Goikúl were situated north of the before mentioned island Ngaiángēs on the southern rim of Gogeál Ngurukdápēl (it. p. 201), and in former times people from Melekéiok lived not faraway on the high Point Ngaramedíu, as has been shown in the story 17^a of Tipētipakmīēg. Finally it will be mentioned that in former times the inhabitants of a Iraī lived on Gogeál Ngarduāis (j 21') where even today a plot of flat plain is shown as "the Land of Semdīu" – Peluál a Semdīu (see story 14 and 197 of Medegēipélau, who destroyed him). However, the place Ngaragūmēlbai (see distr. VII) is supposed to have been the mother of all places from where everything started. Later on, this historical proof will have to be brought by researching the sites, where walls and other excavated remains of the former settlers should be found; my remaining time here does not suffice to do so. The proof will not be such an easy one, because of withering limestone in such a rainy area, the lush covering with vegetation, and little remaining soil, and finally because of the amount of time that has passed. Concerning a Ulong we know that the shipwrecked men did not find any inhabitants there in the year 1783, even though there were traces of former habitation in the west (Vol. I, p. 111), thus it must have been already abandoned at this time.

Even though it may no longer be possible to see evidence the continuation of the laws of settling – moving from the fortified high places to the empty plains while state-like organizations were developing – prove the correctness of the oral traditions. These teach us how the Palauans imagine the development of their constitution and society.

The History of the Land

derives mainly from collections of legends and fairytales in part VII. Stories 1 and 2 report the geographical creation of the archipelago by the galíd and the fall of the giant a Guáp, who especially represents Babldáob. a Guáp is supposed to be the founder of the first villages Ngarsúl, Ngarepkēi, Ngurusár, and a Imūl on the main island who are called the children of a Guáp (male or female). Then further galíd develop. Two brothers, a Síēg, "wealth" and Galebūl "poverty", soon came to Babeldáob, and the first one founded the villages of the north Gólei, Ukál, Ngardmāu, etc., whereas Galebūl founded the villages Ngabiúl, a Gól, Ngabúkēd, Ngaradermáng, Melekéiok, Ngarsúl, Ngēruluóbēl etc. After the burial of "wealth" in a Imelīk the village Goréör was created. Therefore, even today the proverb of the rich north and the poor south prevails, and the blai of the South have their doors always towards the north. Story 48 also gives a reason for this contrast¹⁰. As it was still night in those old times, the ghosts of the north and the south made the magic of getting together (story 4), which made the palms bend towards each other and the spirits could ride along the stems in order to meet each other and have a conference. The galíd, who wanted to settle in the north took stone slabs used as house post with them (story 5), but they lost most of them on the way or could not put them together. These ghosts could only work at night therefore, the great god Jagád re ngél created the sun on the tip of the land Ngél near Gámliangel on the west coast (story 6), in order to prevent that stone houses would come to the people. Thus, the ghosts had to stop their work, left the posts lying around and turned them into stone. This is the reason that there is such a big amount of stone pictures and posts in Ngaregolóng; for instance on the mountain Ngadég in Gólei, in Ngarametóng and so on. Jagád re ngél and his sister from Ngarsúl also formed the sexes of the people, and thus created the people themselves (story 7). The name Pélau is supposed to come from him, too. Story 8 tells about the immigration of a Ugelkeklāu¹¹ who came with his entourage from the east, from Kusáe, the Matáng re ngós, the Palauans' "Fork of the East". The foreigners first came to Ngeaur, then to Peliliöu; they founded Goikúl on the Gogeál Ngurukdápél, which was already mentioned above on page 5. Then, from Ngaranggól they supported poor Goréör against Ngarekobasáng, just as other parts helped the village Tuápél near Nugurusár against Ngarmíd. Their way led them over Makáep in a Imelik to Toágél mlungúi, then to the island Ngamólei and later on to Ngardmāu, from where some of the people moved to Ngivál, whereas the other ones moved to Ngěúngel where they created the 10 Gádlbai-titels. Some of them even came to Ngríl; though the biggest part went to the island Ngarekeklāu, where they had to be fed by Ngatmél and Gólei. Story 9, "How money came to Palau", starts on Ngarekeklāu. The floating island Ngorót is here of great importance: On this island the money-giving curlew was born that created the names Ngaremangiāu and Gomūg tokói in Ngardolólok, the name a Idíd on Goréör, Ngarturóng in a Imeúngs, Túblai in Ngabúkéd, finally Mangal'lákl in Ngaregolóng. Even Nggeiangél and the perished Ngáruangél became very rich; the myth of the rich north is thus well founded. Ugelkeklāu went from Nagraekeklāu, because of the destruction of the place, to Keklāu, which received its name by him. He is supposed to then have caused the move of the settlers, mentioned earlier, from Gogeál to the Pelāu-land. Thus, Ugelkeklāu is supposed to be the founder of the Pelāu State, as this one could only be established once the inhabitants had their first settlements on the main island Babeldáob.

More about this subject in the history of the land, district VII Ngaragúmēlbai.

a Ugelkeklāu established the connection with the east, and in due course it was developed as the end of story 9 shows, where Mógemog or as the Palauans say Uekeuíd, the 70 islands, are mentioned the first time. This is also the case in story 10 where the just mentioned Matáng re ngós is visited by two people who drifted there, this time from Pélau, from Ngatmél, which just like Ngaregolóng is considered to have been settled very early. Other Carolinian islands are also mentioned, a sign that, as is evident in the letters of father Clain and Cantova (Vol. I, p. 16 and 103), as well as in the report of Kadu in CHAMISSO (Vol. I, p. 133), in former times Palau seems to have had contact with the other Carolinian Islands and has been strongly influenced by them. Part of story 11 about galíd Boi takes place in Ngatméł. He was infamous, because of his "spears", called lild. The "Children of the Bamboo" – ngalekél a lild — are also supposed to have come from there, and they are Mangal'láng, Ulimáng, Galáp, Nggësár, and a Iraĩ.

It was in Galáp where the young man Tmēłógod, who has been often mentioned in the course of this story, brought land with the help of a hook from the depth of the sea (story 14); this made Babeldáob bigger.

But the greatest influence on the construction of the State of Palau is supposed to have been the woman Milad, after she had been the only one spared by the great flood. Her five children are considered the founders of the five main places of Palau, of a Imeúngs, Ngarakeaĩ, Goréör, Melekéiok and Ngabiúl, as it is said towards the end in story 19. In the beginning of the story the well-known myth of the breadfruit tree on Ngíptál is reported, and how a storm and a flood have destroyed the islands. The same happened to Ugél pelú (story 195) when the inhabitants, who could escape, had great influence on those from Goréör, and the coral island of Ngáruangěł that is laying in the far north; its inhabitants due to their wealth and skillfulness received leading roles in the villages of Babeldáob, as is mentioned in story 20.

About the newer history since 1783 see Vol. I. Thus, Melekéiok achieved power and prestige due to its ruling house a Udēs, and Ngatěłngál became the biggest and most powerful district in the archipelago. The districts Ngaragúměłbai and a Imelĩk came under its power until Goréör brought both of them to its side with the help of English firearms and thus weakened the power of Melekéiok. Even Ngaregolóng which has been fighting with Ngarárd for a long time took sides with Goréör as well as Ngaramlungúi; thus Ngatěłngál lost more and more allies. KUB.I p. 15 says about the circumstances and the industry of the people: "With the help of the white people Korrer suppressed the people in the north and partly wiped them out even though these people had a higher status than the natives from Korrer. Traces that can be seen even today prove this but most of all the circumstance that the lazy and indolent Korrer is kept alive only by our ships as it never had any industry on its own. Money, clay pots, canoes, nets, oil, syrup, pigs and so on all came and is still coming from the north." — More in detail see at the respective villages.

District I. Ngaregolóng

Also pronounced Ngaragëlóng, and called Golokl; probably Cantova's Ngarool (Vol. I, p. 103), MC CLUER: Arakalong, CHEYNE: Urrakalong, SEMP.: Arakalong, KUB.: Arekolong, v. M. M.: Narekoloju, COELLO: Orocolong.

The Mission attests 440 inhabitants for Ngarecholong¹², excepting Nggeiangël, which has an additional 93 inhabitants. Number of villages: 9 (including Nggeiangël)¹³, uninhabited ones 17.

klól pelú (main village): Mangal'lád, rubukúl (its chief): aGuóng, armeâu (people): Geuíd regolóng (see below),

galíd (god): Ngira ngaregolóng.

Political Groups:

Gëuíd regolóng "the Seven from Ngaregolóng: Mangal'lád, Ngëúngël, Ngarametóng, Ngabiúl, a Iebúkúl, Ngarabâu and Gólei. Ngríl is only considered the eastern harbor of Mangal'lád.

Except for the Federation of the Seven, there are the following special federations: Gólei, Kiok-Ukál, Ngrametóng, and Ngëúngël as the "4 Channels" Gëoá táog.

Though Delbirt¹⁴ was a federation of six villages, such as Gólei, Kíok, Ngaregabáb, Nggúi, Ngatmél and Melekëi.

Finally, the big extinguished a Ukál was understood as one a Ukál North, such as Ngartól, and a Dúbog, and one Ukál South, such as Ukál and Ngarakëam.

Geography.

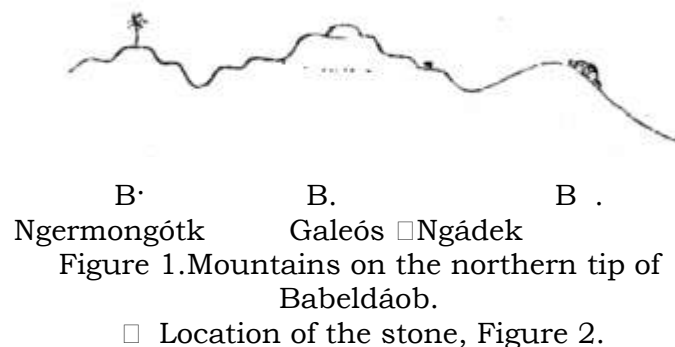

When you are standing on the 130 m high step mountain Ngamedú near Ngabúkëd, you can overlook the entire landscape Ngaregolóng (Vol. 1, p. 229, Figure 36), which forms the northern part of the 10 km long peninsula. The middle part of the peninsula with the stump south of the narrowing is formed by Ngabúkëd from the district II Ngarárd.

The country is hilly; nowhere is a flat plain. Everywhere it mounts slightly from the coast. As already mentioned above (see part vol. I p. 166 and 230, see also plan 3) the peninsula has three narrowings. In my work (Kr. II. p. 183) in 1907 the following was mentioned about this region: Three narrowings are there. The southernmost is the one of Ngabúkëd. It is about 1 km wide, and especially in the east where there are many tarofields it is very flat.¹⁵ Only a small mound of 10 m height separates the eastern part from the long mangrove channel of the western side. North of it is the narrowing of Ngarblūd, which is only 150 m wide and about 7 m high and the most northern one, the one from a Gól, therefore DelóbokaGól "the Narrowing of Gól," is about 15 m high and 300—400 m wide. — At the same point I have already mentioned that the Bezirksamtsmann's cutting through the last isthmus was a mistake; indeed in 1909 I found the work abandoned. According to rough estimations, the necessary earth movements at a Gól should be the same as in Ngabúkěd, which would have offered the best benefit for traffic, whereas the earth movement at Ngarblūd is seven times less. Had the latter one been done, the enterprise definitely would have been finished. This way, however it remains unfinished. Plan 3 in the scale 1:100 000 shows the distances. Between Ngabúkěd and Ngarblūd the treeless hills mounting from south to north are at their highest and fill the entire width of the peninsula. The Pěbúl Ngúrang, the Ngětěgulang and the ked Ngarapelík (see Vol. I p. 229, draw. 37). A trail follows the eastern coast from Galáp in the direction N to E along the beach, after 1 km it arrives at point Pkul a mlongúiěs, where rocks are at the seaside. On the other side there is again a sandy beach where the trail turns from N to W, after passing the rock *a*Ingás, after 1 km in the direction N to W it arrives at the 15 m high and 500 m long set of rocks Ngarapelík at the foot of the mountain with the same name. These are traversed. They are also mentioned in story 150 Ngartágaběap, because the rat stopped here and was then killed at the sandy point Pkulaběap. On the other side of Ngarapelík lies the long curved sandy beach of a Gól, its end the sandy point Pkulaběap¹⁶ or a Ulúgöl, in the north of Ngarapelík, is a distance of 4-5 kilometers. Halfway there is the landing place of a Gól called Remágěl, from which you reach the village in a few minutes. The village lies in a big swampy plain, which has developed behind the sandy beach as a backwater lagoon nearly filled with brackish water. On the western side the village leans towards a smooth range of hills that is half a kilometer south at the before mentioned isthmus of Ngarblūd, only 7 m high and a few steps wide. The hills that stretch from here towards the north are covered with forest and not higher than 20 m. North of a Gól where there is no more wood (place Górabag, see a Iebúkūl) and the landscape drops down only a few meters to the 3-400 m wide and approximately 15 m high isthmus of a Gól (see above) that is covered with mangroves in the east and in the west. These cover in the east and in the west the entire peninsula. North of the just before mentioned isthmus the landscape climbs, first quite steep to the ca. 40 m high hill a Réngěd from where you have a good view over the south. Towards the north there are only lowhills, Rois raMangal'íang, Ngamílěg at Ngrīl, Kerděu, Delóbog (see p. 11), Bukl kěraī, Ngětmeláod (a Kelěos near Ngatmél) and so on. From the southern to the northern point the land mounts slowly and in the middle is a wide, roof-like ridge from where you have nice views over the east- and west coast, because except for the small wood around and in Mangal'lang, trees are entirely missing on the top¹⁷. Only in one spot further north does the forest reach up high from the plains, when you arrive south of the northern tip at a crater of approximately $\frac{1}{2}$ km in diameter, whose steep inner walls are about 50 m high and in the east are entirely covered with wood, whereas in the west there is an exit to Gólei (see there). I heard the following names for this basin at the bottom of which are the taro patches of a Gólei: Ngiúkūl in 1907, whereas in 1910 it was Ngareke. Outside of the crater's rim is wasteland like everywhere else. On the southern rim you can walk on top on a resounding ground that seems to have been build from lava, as if here is a thin cover over a huge cavity. The place is called Morúruk. Quite near to it in the south is the place a Iksíd¹⁸ where a stone pavement is situated and from where a winding footpath leads to the entrance of the crater, as the walls of the crater do not allow any descent. The northern part from the exit continues towards the west as a steep wall of a few meters in height, which looks over the south. In the green-baked wall of tuff there are several holes which sound in the wind just like shell trumpets, therefore they are called Debúsög (more at Gólei).

Towards the north of this crater on the northern end of the peninsula there are three hills, of which the middle one is 110 m high and called Galeós and is closest to the northern point Gëtitóik (see Vol. 1, 228, Figure 35). Like its western neighbor Ngermongótk, which is half as high and in 1907 had a single palm tree at its top; it has many ledges and steps. Indeed, on the eastern flank of the Galeós, 5 m under the top there stood once on a terrace the house of a priest, and in 1907, there was still next to in the east the legend-stone (65 cm high and 85 cm wide) of the galíd Delangerík¹⁹ whose face looks south over the landscape Ngaregolóng; more and in detail below at the section 'History'. A few steps from it towards the east lies the hill Ngádek²⁰, where on his eastern flank is a small covering of wood on the top. It is 5 m smaller than Galeós, from where you can enjoy a beautiful view to all sides and especially towards the south.

In the north in a distance of about 3 km in N to NE you can see two islands, Ngarekeklaū and Ngaregúr which are separated by a small strait Magédagei²¹ which runs dry at low tide (Vol. 1, p. 228, Figure 33). The first of these islands is covered with palm trees and has a barrow of about 10 m height at its southwestern side. Ngaregúr has two hills that have been mentioned several times in the 'History of the Discovery'. They are connected by a small isthmus, but again and again seafaring people saw them as two separate islands (see Vol. 1, p. 78 85). The northern one is Koitáp and the southern one Ngardík²².

Further away you can see the wreck of a steamship on a small isolated reef (part vol. 1, p. 153 and 220) in N 20° W, and the coral island Nggēiangēl in N 10° E missw. East of this the reef Ptil a nagabárd is said to be. This is where

Figure 2. The legend-stone of the galíd Delangerik,

Captain O'KEEFE is 65 cm high, 85 cm wide on the mountain Galeós. supposed to have lost a ship. Though only the Ngáruangēlreef in the northeast of Nggēiangēl is known, so that it seems to have been confused with the above-mentioned wreck.

The bays and points of the peninsula remain to be mentioned as the description from the sandy point a Ulúgöl onwards moved inland. North of this point is a mangrove bay at the east side of the isthmus of a Gol, which is called Metkerél Ngamagáng. Towards the north, near Ngrīl, the bay is called Klail mangerengér apparently where the channel a Idóng flows into it. The mangrove point Galípēl (plan 1 c) separates this one from the bay a Imogoáng, with the channel Ngatmadei (plan 1 d). The protruding steep tongue of land Gartēbiáng, which is about 10 m high represents the east point of Ngaregolóng, the Pkulatáp ra Ngaregolóng. From here the coast continues toward the northeast and here follow each other (Vol. 1, p. 228, Figure 34 and plan 3):

Bay of Ngarabau

Point Ngaruösöng

Metúker²³ a Iplóng

1. Point aImetáng

here were once the villages: Ngartmóng-

2. Point Ngat kúd

Ngartmúiel, Uriúl +, Melekei +, Ngesúd +.

Metkerél Ngarapesóng

(village Ngarapesóng +)

1. Point Ngabúdēl

2. " Pkul a Medórom

where the village Ngatmél, aNgél and more in the north Nggúi was situated.

1 northern tip Gētitóik opposite of Ngarekeklaū (plan 3 Pkul Babeldáob)

2. " Ngategebóiet

more in the west.

Here was once the village Ngartól + and a little bit more inland Ngaregabáb +.

Toward the east follows point Medóng, also called Pkul a medós, which, together with point Ngaripekpúk, forms the great NW Point Pkul aipelau. Between both tips of land lies the bay of Gólei. The land recedes towards the east forming the bay a Ilangaláng where the villages Dúbog +, Kíok+, Ukál+, Ngarekēam etc. used to be. In the south it is bordered by Point Taprkēam, which is at the same time the northern border of Metkerél a begód, the bay of Ngarametóng (also called Ngarametúker) and Ngēúngēl; towards inland Delbóng +. Further on, point a Itungelí, Metkerél ng kekáp, into which the channel Goketól leads, in former times a landing place for Mangal'áng, and it is mentioned in chant 204 of a Ugél re gulsíang. Point Ngkedíng borders this small bay towards the south. There is a bay Metkerél in the west, short for Metkerél Ngamagáng where the channel of the isthmus Delóbok a gól is said to lead. Towards the south near point Ngaróngor the hill Górabag is situated, in story 13 of Gorágēl, it has been made unsafe by a bersóioḡ-snake (Palau boa)(see also the story at a Iebúkūl). Though this place already belongs to Ngarárd.

Prohibition of wearing dugong bracelets, which are dedicated to the god of the land, see the following page.

Privilege: About the galáng-ceremony see death cult in part VII.

Diligent Craftsmanship.

Dugong bracelets, containers made of turtle shell and lime pestles (Gólei), sails (Kub. VIII, p. 297), tobacco, oil, syrup, jewelry, food (auléld) (Kub. I, p. 34).

History.

As has been emphasized in the 'History of the Land' (p. 6) this district was among the first settled ones in Palau, and it was important due to its galíd. The rich north is proverbial versus the poor south. The festivities in Ngaregolóng are paid only in kluk or half kluk, as reported in story 30 about Ngiratei.

Originally, there were seven villages, seven²⁴ cities, the Gëuídregolóng, which were considered rich (see Gëuíd l golókl in the song of Gadabedei and Gersói, story 193) and they were Mangal'áng, Ngëúngël, Ngarametóng, Gólei, Ngarabâu, aLebúkúl and Ngabiúl. Mangal'áng ruled over the others and as a sign of its dominance it set a sail on a big mast on the mountain Galeós above the legend-stone of Delangerík, mentioned before. It was called a Úgul a gëtíu, which is supposed to mean "the bed of the mast"²⁵, the shallow part, in which the mast gorákl of the canoe Pélau is standing. Therefore, the god depicted in the stone was called Galíd ra gorákl or Galíd ra úgul a gëtíu²⁶.

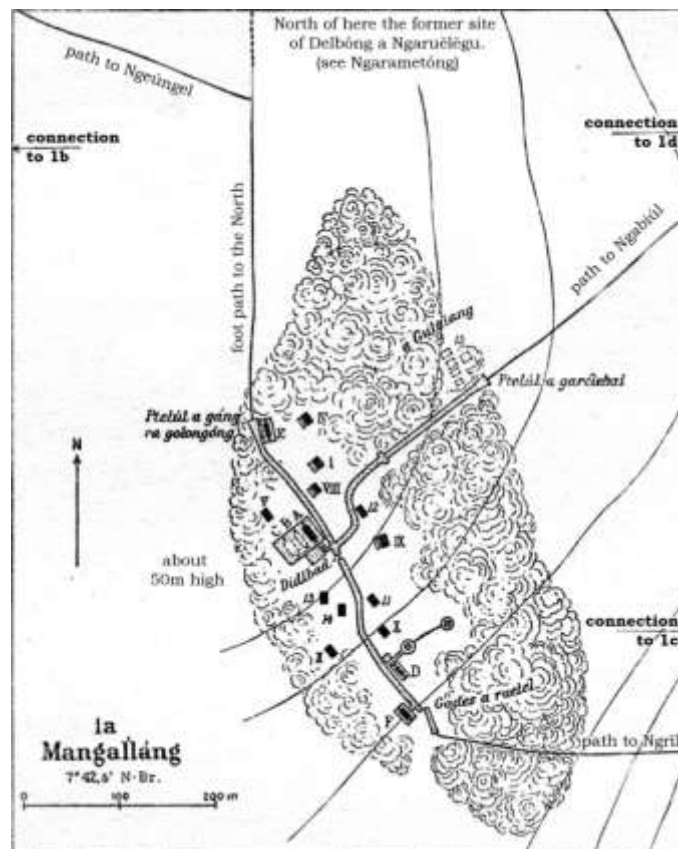

Figure 1^a.

This dominance of Mangal'áng has not been confirmed by stories. KUB. II p. 116 also says that the 8 (!) municipalities of Ngaregolóng were closely connected and that by this constant contact the original equality was preserved. These municipalities had the Kasarsarak, the reciprocal smoothing out of the bed or the sleeping mat and they marry among each other. Politically they have no leader. – Concerning the kilt-privileges KUB.VIII p. 176 says: "In the eight countries of Arakalon the inhabitants offered the bracelet they were wearing in former times to the god of the land. This happened in the course of great misfortune during a war when they nearly lost their former power and independence."

The misfortune probably refers to the defeat of Ngarárd as it is told in story 50. SEMPERII p 213 talks about the constant enmity, too (see also Ngrīl).

That Ngaregolóng had to suffer much under Ngarárd can also be deduced from story 36; it is also mentioned concerning the rooster of Gólei (see there).

Before 1900 explorers did not notice Ngaregolóng's landscape, because it is situated on the northern tip of Babeldáob. Before us there were probably government officials that came to this region. (see KRÄMER's diar. Vol. I, p. 166 and 172.)

1. Mangal'lád,

also called Mangal'lád²⁷ (compare M. M. and KUB. Mangalakl, however both did not visit). The main place of Ngaregolóng and one of the seven cities.

Description of the place (see plan1a): Situated inland approximately 40 m high on a hill that is called Rois ra Mangal'lád, about 1 km from the east coast (Ngrīl) and the west coast (Ngěúngěł), and about 1/2 km north of the isthmus of a Gól as already described at the landscape. On the west coast is also the channel Goketól, which has been frequently mentioned in chant 204 by Ugél re Gulsiáng.

The northern part of Mangal'lád is situated on the highest spot (about 50 m) and is covered with tall growing forest so that the spot, which is well hidden in the green, is marked from afar. Towards the east, the village is leaning towards a wood, which can be traversed in a few minutes in order to reach via the wasteland the trailhead of Ngrīl. The south eastern part of the trailhead a Gádēs a ruelē²⁸ is strangely bent off the main trail. A few steps north from the ledge a small stone path called Ubailkesúk leads a little bit upwards to a stone platform where bai F. Ngěrsóng stood. In 1907, the bai had still been standing, but in 1909 it was no longer there. At the southern end of its front gable a stone named úlei lay (Figure 3). In former times, food of coconut kernels and syrup for the galíd was meant with this. Nearby was also a stone ball, supposedly representing an ulogóug-roasted nut, similar to the one in blai 20 a Irágěl in Goréör. Before, the nut in Ngěrsóng was supposed to have been in a blai in the woods and was supposed to have represented the food for the 7 galid. A little bit further north on the eastern side of the stone path, bai D. Jórmang²⁹ is situated, which together with bai E Golongóng, which is located on the northern trailhead Ptelúl a gáng ra golongóng represents the right side of the village, whereas both bai of the left side have already collapsed. The rubak bai called Bai 1 Mangal'láng are situated in the middle of the main path and in the middle of the village (-gelsél a pelúl!), almost at the highest elevation of about 50 m. The extended stone construction on which they are laying is a few meters high towards the south, whereas it levels with the ground towards the north. There near the main path, a more than 2 m high monolith stands at the northern gable, at the backside of the only still standing main bai A. Gosobulngáu³⁰. In 1907, only big wooden parts remained of the 2.

Figure 3. The mythical stone úlei.

Figure 4. Sitting stone with a backrest in Mangal'láng.

bai Bilekélěk, from the 3. Gomesóngěl'l súld nothing was left. The plank-like monolith of about half a meter had been broken in the middle during the war with Ngabúkěd by the intruding enemies, later on it had been put together again. Apparently this is a large backrest (ptangg) obviously for a god. A smaller one not more than 2 feet high stands near the front gable on a stone table, that used to be a seat for a paramount chief (Figure 4).

Finally there is also a stone plate with four holes similar to halfcoconut cups, which are supposed to have been used as mast hollows, Ugul a gětú (see above page 14). It is said that the stone had been in the boat of the galíd from aDelbóng during the competition of the 7 galíd³¹. An ancestor of rubak Ngirasumáng brought it here as booty from the war (Figure 5). On the southern side of the great stone terrace is another stone pavement. Stairs (?) lead there and a small path at an angle to the street. Just there it is interrupted by a crack that allows the rainwater to run through. A stone plate leads over it like a bridge, therefore the name Did 1 bad³² ("Stone Bridge"). Opposite of this place where the small meandering path arrives, a wide stone path forks towards the north, forming a head after about 100 m. A street elongation has been added to this, ending after another 120 m with the Ptelúl a gareiebai. On its northern side you can see 5 former places for houses, the compound of a Ugél re gulsiáng (see stories and song 204) who made his home village famous. From the trailhead, crossing the wasteland, you can reach in 5 minutes on a footpath the stone path of Ngabiúl.

Figure 5. Mast bearing stone for the sailboat of the galíd

Privileges: During big feasts celebrated by all Palau the rubak of Mangal'lang has the privilege to make the first cut (see story 148.)

History: In the oldest stories Mangal'lang is only called 'The Child of the Bamboo' (story 15). It seems to have been founded only after Gólei, Ngatméi, Ngabiúl and so on. Tracing the name Mangal'lákl from galalákl "quiet, not moving" refers to the money-bird, standing over the place, which is considered the bearer of money in story 9 of Ngorót. It seems the money (see part vol. 3) has been introduced to Palau not so long ago. But according to the law of settlement the high-situated place should have been settled before all the other ones. Maybe this place has not been mentioned so often in the history, because it has never been of special importance. a Guóng has also never been recognized as the head of Ngaregolóng (see above the history of Ngaregolóng. The city became most famous for its winged hero a Ugél re gulsiáng (story 204). Mangal'lang had a friendship bond with Goréör, as shown in story 49 from Ngirakaderáng. Hero Ngirailangaláng lauded in song 205 also comes from Mangal'lang. Hero Madlútk from Ngabúkēd (song 203) also stands in close connection with the main village, because he married Dira mangal'lákl, also called Dalálail'lói and Dalai a galíl, who had been living in the no longer existing blai Umerëu. The last name appears also at Ugél re gulsiáng, but in a Jebúkūl she has been living in blai Makāu.

Constitution: Concerning the village constitution one has to mention that in former times only 8 rubak were in existence and, concerning the later amount of ten rubak, nr. VII, whose title had belonged to the old I. blai *a*Ikrebāibecame the leader of another village, what generally nr. II used to do.

I want to point out that the local god got the last place among the secondary chiefs, the 20th place among the rubak; more about this in the chapter about galíd in part VI (compare for instance with Goréör).

Constitution of Mangal'lang

bai l pelú (village houses): Bai l Mangal'lang	A. Gosobulngāu
galíd (god): (KUB. Kolgigl)	B. Bilekélěk +
armeāu (people): ar Telūl	C. Gomesóngěl'súld + ³³
klóbak (council): Ngaramangal'lang	women's council: ar Bóket l mí

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang	kieblil (clan):	ardil
I	a Guóng	Gēteĩ (a Ikrebāĩ+)	nr. I	Gaugēláol	a Kldĩl
II	Gád I bai ra iuósog	a Iuósog	to I	Ngadbárs	Gēbil
III	Gád I bai ra tepláng	Tepláng +	" II	Ngēsagád	a Kldĩl
IV	Gádlbai ra gólbed	Gólbed	" II	Gērapelú	Gēbil ra iuáng (see bl. IX)
	Ngiraipeľau	a Ipeľau	" II	to IV.	Nr. V.
I	Gádlbai ra tabēlóng	Tabēlóng+	" I	to I.	Nr. VI
VII	Gádlbai ra mesekseĩ	Mesekseĩ+	nr. II	a Ugélkeúkl	a Guódēl'ľágád
VIII	Góbak ra ngěáng	Ngěáng	" I	—	—
IX	Ngíraimeténgēl	a Iuáng	" II	to III.	—
X	Ngíraulegóng	a Ulegóng	" II	to IV.	—

blai Gēteĩ is nr. I and Mesekseĩ (VII) holds the II. rank. In former times, Mesekseĩ was nr. I and had the title a Guóng, which, however, was taken away from Gēteĩ; the ♀title remained. In 1910, nr. VII, Ngirasumáng was my informant and a candidate for nr. I³⁴; the ♀title II belonged before to a Ikrebāĩ (I).

nr.:	uriúl rúbak (secondary chiefs):	further blai :
11	Ngiragobuóng to bl. IX lives in Ngrĩl	11. Tegeúgēl
12	Rimírēg to bl. IV " Ngeúngel	12. Balateĩ
13	Ngirailangabóng " Ngarabāu	13. Gókebai
14	Ngiragelkáng " Ngabiúl	14. Gomangérd
15	Góbakraiebukũl " s. a Ibúkũl	15. + Gulsíáng ³⁵
16	Golapelú " a Ulimáng	16. Mengelekláng + ³⁶
17	Ngiratepelāu " Ngabiúl
18	Ngiragoleúl in 1910 banned to Saipan
19	a Remegeséngēl +
20	Golengĩl (the galíd)

Nr.:	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaragomanggél	D. Iórmang ³⁷	Iórmang	Right
II ♂	Ngaramatál	E. Golongóng	"	"
I ♀	Ngaramelepép
II ♀	Ngaragolútk
I ♂	Ngaramedú	F. Ngërsóng + ³⁸	Ngërsóng	Left
II ♂	Ngarasekól	G. Gomakáng +	"	"

Incidentally Ngrīl is virtually considered the harbor place in the east and on the west coast it is Ngëungēl; as both the old mentioned channels as well as the landing place Goketól (see above p. 13) are no longer much in use.

Figure 1b.

2. Ngěungěł

(KUB. Eúngl) one of the 7 cities, it also belongs to the federation Gěoá táog, now the harbor place of Mangal'lang on the west coast. In 1910 there were only 6 houses.

Description of the place (see Figure 1b): When you have walked to the north about 300 m from Ptelúl a gáng ra golongóng (see Figure 1a), then the bay of Ngarametúkěr is exactly in the west. On the southern part is Ngěungěł. From the wasteland you step on the stone path Ngasagáng shaded by trees, you pass the rubak-bai A. Naruóng from where it leads down to the water, to the bay filled with mangroves. On its edge the stone path continues, partly even in the water, to the south over the ledge a Veikóng finally it bends at a steep angle in front of the canoe house and the small bai B. a Ilemāu (figure 2). From there it continues as a landing pier about 100 m into the mangroves, which do not allow a view over the water.

History: Once upon a time, Ngěungěł was ker (slave) of Melekēi. Rimírěg nr. I punished the violent ones and promised the helpers from Ngasiás on Pelíliou the delivery of mongol (see story 38). On the log to this story a stone pavement of the galidhouse Ngaruělěgāu (see Ngarametóng); also story 42 of Dileáoldil and Galibosáng 43 takes place here. Though it is very important that the people of a Ugélkeklāu are supposed to have created the 10 Gádłbai-titles as story 8 shows.

Constitution of Ngěungěł.

bai l pelú (village house): A. Ngaruóng galíd (god): Medegēi pélau

klóbak (council): Ngaraiكد female council: ar Guóděł'lagád

nr.:	arúbak (chief):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Rimirěg	a Iúngěl	Guóděl'lagad raiúngěl
II	Godáol	a Iklói	"	raiklóí
III	Kekerél Lodáol	a Ibaî	"	ráibai
IV	a Rdelegėsóng	Ngaruėsóng	"	rěngáruėsóng
V	Gád l bai	a Iegėsél +	"	rěngelepedág
VI	Gád l bai	Ngatagár +	"	rě medú
VII	Klai ngerákl	a Iksáng +	»	raiksáng
VIII	a Regēmėkaî	Búikmangai + ³⁹	»	nr. VIII
10		Kedámang
Nr.:	galděbegěl (club):	bai (clubhouse):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I	Ngaratúiog	B. a Ilemāu	a Ilemāu	Right
I	Ngaragorkūl	a Baigóng +	a Baigóng	Left

3. Ngarametóng

also called Ngarametúkër (KUB. Ngarametúkul); one of the 7 cities, it also belongs to the federation Geoa táog, directly north of Ngéungël, located in the same bay.

Description of the place (see plan 1^b): Like there you step down from the high plane on the stone path, but then you come to the centrally located pavement Ngarametelíng where both village-bai are situated A. Gosobulngâu and B. Bilekélëk. The house-post (tang), made of stone, with a length of about 90 cm, stands on the big pavement, on its top is a groove for inserting the frame (Figure 6). A bigger and thicker one, about 2 m long, lies further up, on the eastern flank about half a kilometer north of Malangal'lang a little bit to the east of the trail, near to the small mound Delóbok, halfway from Malangal'lang to a Iksíd (see above and plan 1). The place where in former times a house with stone posts was supposed to have been standing is called Ngaruëlëgâu. Concerning the respective legends see story 5 and Delbóng.

Figure 6. Post of a house, made of stone tang l bad.

A road forks to the south from the stone quadrangle; on its western side is the platform of the crumbled clubhouse C. *a*Íou, which can be reached by a small side trail. A little bit further to the south the road forms a hook where bai D. Meliâi liessideways.

Towards NW a third stone path forks from the chief's platform leading through the taro patches to the bathing site Meteúldíong.

History: see story 34.

Constitution of Ngarametóng.

bai l pelú (village house): Ngarametelíng A. Gosobulngâu galíd (god): Medegei pélau klóbak (council): Ngarametelíng

female council: *ar*Iebíl

nr.:	arúbak (chief):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Riúngël	Tungelél	Diriúngël
II	a Gëúpedeî	Dmágel	Dilegëúpedeî
III	a Mad re ngërarúëbak	Ngarüëbak	Dilmád
IV	a Madra siábang	a Ngeáol +	Dilmád raidúp
V	Buikriúngël	a Ingós	Dilbuikriúngël
VI	Gad l pelú	Bélëlai	Dilgadlpelú
VII	a Rengáis	a Mádlbai	Direngáis
VIII	a Rengatáoăg	to IV +	nr. VIII

Further blai are: 9. Gulei, 10. Baulbai, 11. Siábal, 12. a Gobosél, 13. a Isebóng, and 14. Ngabói.

Nr.:	gáldebegēl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I.	Ngarabelebálāg	C. a Ióu +	a Ióu	Right
I.	Ngarautekóngel	D. Meliāi	a Meliāi	Left

4. Ngrīl

(spoken Ngrīēl) (Kub. Riyl) does not belong to the "Federation of the Seven". On the site of the former village a Ulengevāl on the east coast about 1 km from the main place Mangal'lang that is situated centrally, located on the height. Now it is its harbor place in the east.

Description of the place (see plan 1^c: An about 400 m long mangrove channel leads from outside to the landing place a Ulōgōtóng⁴⁰, on its inner half it is bordered by a stone dam. The boathouse with the same name and bai D. are situated there. From here a stone path leads inland first 100 m toward the west then abruptly towards the south, mounting to the "Upper Village" bab l pelú. It meets the chief's pavement of the two village-bai Gotołóí, of which in 1910 only the main bai A. Gosobulngāu was standing. On this especially low stone platform between the bai and the road stood a small ghost house (tet) and in the bai a sick-boat was lying as an offering for galíd a Ugél'lēgalíd (see draw. in Vol. 3)

Plan 1c.

On the other gable side of the bai is an even smaller stone pavement, and next to it a bathing place, a stone path leads to it, forking from the formerly mentioned road (see plan.) The bathing pool served the female workers of the taro patch, because big fields are situated from here toward the sea. A small rivulet supplies the pool. It comes from a nearby mound, approximately 15 m high, on which blai 17 Pēbúlaī "On the Grotto" stands.

Indeed the slowly mounting hill in the west drops overhanging in the east, forming the roof of an about 10 m high and just as wide grotto colored by green tuff spotted with basalt rocks.

This elevation extends to the west, bordering in the south the plane of the taro fields where the rubak-bai stands. Opposite of this bai on the slope of the hill the club bai F. Gaspóng stands. From here a stone path leads after a sharp bend to the west. After crossing a wooden bridge it climbs 450 m and mounting 20 m under the trees it leads to the rim of a ked, the ptelúl a gáng (trailhead) Melekeóng, from where you reach the woods of Mangal'áng in 20 minutes following a trail over the grassland. (Plan 1^a). 40 m inland from a Ulogotóng another stone path forks from the main road to the north and reaches in a curve at the before mentioned bridge the long west road. Numerous houses of the village section bítal pelú (village side) are situated on this curved road, whereas the other, the already mentioned bab l pelú is also called Bitaleóbok.

Toward the north Ngrīl borders the big taro patches of Ngabiúl to where the next road leads, though it is a rather tiring one.

History: The name seems to come from rīl, which means the "Plant-Area of the Beach", as chant 204 verse 36 shows; further proof is missing. People of a Ugél'keklaú participated in settling the village (story 8).

The horned Gougelúiep, who for a long time bothered people from Ngarárd, lives in Ngrīl (see story 50) until they called Bekēu re bódēl from Ngarebódēl in district VIII Ngarkledéu for help and he killed him.

Story 195 gives more information about the galid of the village a Ugél'lēgalíd.

Story 98 tells about galíd Ngirateī, who has the form of a water snake. Its tail remained in Ngrīl after it had been killed, tells story 98. The other parts drifted to Ngaráus, to Ngarbagéd, and Ngērupesáng, all villages of a Ugél'lēgalíd so that we may assume that both are one or related. My informants did not know how they were connected.

In former times a two-story goutang-baifor god a Ugél'lēgalíd stood where today the rubak-bai Gotołói in Ngrīl are situated.

Ngiragoleúl was the galid of this place. Then rubak a Iegád ra Klúpěd lived in Gólei but a Ugél'lē galíd brought him to Ngrīl and made him the priest and rubak nr. II. He lived in blai No. VII Gētumāi and took the goutáng-bainearby. Behind bai Gaspóng blai 23 Pdek was situated, and further south behind the bathing place blai Ngaragalás, where the rubak nr. I had been living. It was situated in the land Moāi; because of this even today the female title of blai I is called Gēbi ra moāi (see Ngira Moāi, chant 199).

An old blind woman lived in this house. One day, in order to make fun of her, the children of the house gave her a mangerengér-sea snake instead of an eel. The blind woman cut the snake in pieces and at the time when a woman of blai Pdek came to her house, in order to get some fire; she invited her to eat. The invited lady was surprised and said: Are you eating mangerengér? — Now the blind lady was surprised and said to the other one to cover her food. Then the unknown woman left with the fire.

After a short while the blind one formed a roll of betelnut leaves in order to place them on top of the head. Then she went with it on a stick to the backside of blai Pdek. Those in the house called to her to come to the front but she refused and asked that the back wall of the house should be broken down, so that she might enter from there. Finally they did as she wanted. When she was in the house she placed the roll of betelnut leaves on the floor. The people who were present asked her about its meaning. Then she said: I am bringing you the great title a Iegád of blai Ngaragalás and my children shall have nothing! — No, they replied, if you are bringing your title then you should take ours.⁴¹ — The blind one said: Good, thus it will be, and when you have an almond-fish you place one hand on it and cut a hand's width out of the middle as a golegúl-roll. Just the same when taro is heaped up during a feast then you take a small tóluk-bank for us⁴². When there is fish the head and the neck belong to us, just as the head of the pig with its bones and skin is ours. — Thus it was for a long time. Only when the uncle of Ilemasáng Ngiragórak, rubak nr. I married a woman from Ngaragalás the food portions became bigger.

Constitution of Ngril.

galíd (god): a Ugél'lëgalíd (KUB. Buullo) bai l pelú (village house): Gotolói klóbak (council): Ngaragotolói A. Gosobulngau

B. Bilekélëk

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	kleblil (clan):	ardil (women):
I	a Iegád ra bútlbai	Bútlbai	Pdek	Gëbiramoai
II	a Iegád ra klúpěd	Klúpěd ⁴³	Suóng	Gëbiraklúpěd
III	a Iegád ra gápsang	Gápsang	Galmdú	Gëbirapdek
IV	a Iegád ra ultengeriáng	Ultengeriáng	"	Gëbirgalmedú
V	Imedóp	Gobuóng	—	—
VI	Rukróis	Garmáng +	—	—
VII	a Regetúk	Gětumai	—	—
VIII	a Utevitég	Tagukál +	—	—
X	"

//Krämer, Palau Vol. 2, Plate 2.//
District Ngaregolóng

1. Blai Kedámang, bai a Ilemaũ and boathouse in Ngěũngēl.

2. Western gable of bai Gosobulngaũ next to it a shrine in a Iebúkũl.

3. Shrine at the rubak-bai Gosobulngaŭ of Bilekélĕk in Ngabiŭl (from the east).

4. On the stone path the rub. no. 1 Ngiraurékĕd with his blai and an spirit house in Ngabiŭl

Nr. III was formerly called a Igád ra Gëtumái (see blai VII).

In former times Gápsang nr. III was nr. II. Both changed titles with each other. delásëg (totem) of clan I is the black tipped reef shark matukeál.

nr.:	uriúl rubak (second class chiefs):	blai (house):
11	Ngirangeáng	(bl.a Ngeáng-Mangal'lang)
12	a Monglóí	bl. Teklóu a Iebúkūl
13	a Rimírëg	bl. a Iúngel-Ngëúngël
14	a Guóng	bl. Gëteí-Mangal'lang
15	Gádlbai	bl. Balateí-Mangal'lang
16	Ngirangarbád	bl. Ngarbád-Ngabeí
17	Golëtáng	Pëbúlaí
18	Ilemasáng ⁴⁷	Górak
19	Ngirateóbog	Teóbog
20	a Ugel'las	a Imeleí

Further blai : 21. Gobegetáng. 22. Ngedëlemóng. 23. Pdek. 24. Ngaraptageí.
25. Mageloál (?)

nr.:	gáldëbegël (club)	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bítang (side):
I ♂	Ngaratogedí	C. Bailëgesáu +	a Ulogotóng	Right
I ♀	Ngarabakungór
II ♀	Ngaraprekórk	E. Ngëruaráüed +	Gaspóng	Left
I ♂	Ngaratogodulík
II ♂	Ngaramedeómel	F. Gaspóng
I ♀	Ngaradegëdeg
II ♂	Ngaragokelóut

one further taog a Idóng see map and footnote on the previous page and p. 22.

5. Ngabiúl

(Kub. Ngabiul and Ngabyjul) also called Ngabeí. The god of the village was the strong Ngiraidemái, who made Ngabiúl into a very important place; this is why Kub called Ngabiúl the capital of Ngaregolóng⁴⁸.

Description of the place (see Plan 1^d): The place is situated north of Ngrīl, and separated from it by a huge taro patch. It is connected with a Jebúkūl and Ngarabáu, in the front of which it is, connected by a long stone path.

Plan 1^d.

They all occupy a plateau that forms the eastern point, Pkulatáp ra Ngaregolóng, of Ngaregolóng. You can only reach the landing sites of all three villages by climbing down short and steep stone paths. The easiest one is in Ngabiúl, where on top on the rim the club-bai E. a Peláu is situated. From here you climb down to bai Ngátmädeî where not even a boathouse existed. From bai a Peláu the stone path leads 200 m to the west, in order to end there suddenly. There was the poor-looking blai nr. I a Urékěd beautified by a nearby small spirit house (see plate 2⁴). Next to it was the galid-house a Idemâi, of which no more than a stone platform was left, on which the priest had erected bai aPeláu as his working place. But the German government had it replaced on its original place.

Not far away is the platform of the village with the 2 Bai relíd A. Gosobulngâu⁴⁹ and B. Bilekélěk. On the SE corner of the pavement, near to the first one, there is an offering shrine for the village-god (plate 2³). From here a long stone path leads to north west, halfway to ked Sarói⁵⁰ it meets the trail from Mangal'lád. Finally it reaches the creek a Imelobáng where it stops. From the village house the big road leads to the northeast to a Jebúkúl, but its borders are already reached after 200 m. The borderline is indicated by a half-foot wide fissure in the stone path. On the side of Ngabiúl the stepping stone a Isngél a Oi has a face without a mouth on the side of the ditch. The myth tells that once upon a time a man called a Oi from Ngabiúl was lying very much; this was the reason that the galíd cut away his mouth and turned him into stone (see Figure. 7).

Figure 7. The face without a mouth

History: The name Ngabiúl is supposed to have come from the woman Milad whose placenta⁵¹ had drifted there after the great flood. This is the reason this place was counted as one of the 5 children of Milad, as told in story

19. On the contrary to the rich Gólei, it belongs to the places that were founded by poverty (see history of the land p. 6.) Story 71 about the lost dead-body-bundle is told in Ngěsáng as well as Ngabiúl. Because of this its family Ngaraingós had strong ties to Nggeiangěl. Galíd Medegeî pélau (story 197), who is called here Ngirai demâi, made the place especially important. Kub. VI p. 37 informs us: "Iraydemay in Ngabiúl has in front of his house a huge square angular basalt rock about 1 m wide and 2,5 m high, it is also his Kingelél⁵². In former times it was the custom that the man who pretended to be possessed by the Madahéy pélau could come here and prove his calling by jumping on top of the stone without using his hands. When he achieved it, he was legitimate; he was a bodókol⁵³ Kalid." —

Because the gai-barracuda was the god's favourite fish, he became a privilege of the house aIdemāi (see story 3 and end of story 14). Like in Gólei, Ngardmāu and Ngarsúl as well as in Ngabiúl there was also a priestess (mlagél or mlageī). Kub. VI p. 34 writes about it, while he emphasizes II p. 31 that the high chief and priest are one and the same person in Ngabiúl just like in Gólei, aGól, Galáp, Ngardmāu, Ngarsúl and on Pelíliou in Ngardolólók, Ngasiás and Ngaregól. Here was also a goutáng-baijust like in a Iraī, etc.

Constitution of Ngabiúl.

2 parts: Bital pelú and Gesél a pelú

bai l pelú (village house): Bai rilíd A. Gosobulngāu

B. Bilekélēk

galíd (god): Ngiraidemāi and priestess Mlagél (KUB. Iraydemay and Eyluay) armeāu (people): ar Gabagáp

klóbak (council): Ngarilíd

female council: ar Iebíl

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang	klebīl (clan):	ardil (women):
I	Ngiraurékēd	a Urékēd	I	Sils	a Iegád ragaiós
II	Ngirdimāu	Doultáng +	to II	Ngesngís	a Rtelúgēl
III	aRegeirēi	a Tkēdám +	" I	a Ugelióu	a Rúgēl legú
IV	a Regeirēi ra ngabárd	Ngarbád	" II	a Iríkl	nr. V
V	a Ipldúl ra lēi	a Lei +	" I	to I	Gebiraleī
VI	" ra ngarkebés	Ngarkebés	" II	" IV	nr. VI
VII	" ra galkáng	Galkáng +	" I	" III	nr. VII
VIII	a Psis	Ngérdimāu +	" II	" II	nr. VIII
IX	Ngirmangángēr	Ngarmangángēr	" I	" I	nr. IX
X	Ngiratepelāu	a Tepelāu +	" II	" II	nr. X

In former times bl. nr. VIII was in the place of Doultáng nr. II; but rubak nr. VIII a Psis lived in Ngérdimāu nr. II; therefore, it dropped to the VIII. position. Nevertheless Ngérdimāu has remained the leader of the other bitang.

uriúl rubak (secondary chiefs): ¹¹*a Rdegór* of Iebúkūl, ¹²*Ngiragolegeril* of Ngarabāu, ¹³*a Iegád rareī* of Iebúkūl, ¹⁴*a Sueī* nr. III, ¹⁵*Ngirasúlei* of Ngarēmetúkēr, ¹⁶*Géóel rengersmeī* of a Iebúkūl, ¹⁷*Ngiramerīl* of Ngéungēl, ¹⁸*a Guóng* of Mangal'lang. But it is said that Medegeī pēlau (see story 107) did not want to have any secondary chiefs here.

The other blai are: 11. a Igeróu. 12. a Tkesāu. 13. Ngarueliúl. 14. a Rikang?

15 Vun? 16. Derebeī. 17. Barák. 18. Gasibóng. 19. a Silang? 20. Gobuli? 21. a Idemāi (see above).

Nr.:	gáldebegēl (club):	bai (clubhouse):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaraiús	C. Melók +	Ngátmadeĩ	Right
II ♂	Ngarailáod	D. Ngátmădeĩ
I ♀	Ngaradildengí
II ♀	Ngaragamaióng
I ♂	Ngaragolútk	E. a Peláu	a Peláu	Left
II ♂	Ngarabilís	F. a Ipegád +
I ♀	Ngaragomesúrog
II ♀	Ngaramatál

6. aJebúkŭl

one of the seven cities; lives in friendship with its neighbor Ngarabáu; the federation is called Gēiikes pelú⁵⁴. A similar federation connects a Jebúkŭl and Ngaregamāi on Goréör. About this the following story: There is a grassland called Tagatáu near Ngarabáu that has been inhabited by many devils of the wood, the so-called bel'lek. When the people of Ngarabáu and a Jebúkŭl went there with fish these were snatched away by invisible hands. Then people ran away in fear. One day some inhabitants of Ngaregamāi on Goréör came to visit and they were told about the evil deeds of the bel'lek. They decided to help and they did: they took bent bamboo sticks (gogádu) in order to drag goálăg-sea-urchins out of the holes in the reef. They packed these animals into baskets and walked over the devil's grassland. Soon the bush ghosts came and chased the fishermen who threw their baskets away. Looking for fish the devils put their hands into the baskets and hurt their fingers. They ran away. Quickly the fishermen took coconut fronds beating the ground behind the escapees. On the mountain a Réngěd⁵⁵ they begged their pursuers to spare them and fled to Górabag⁵⁶ where the bush of a Gól starts. There they remained and bothered the inhabitants of a Gól until galid a Jegád ra pelás chased them away. They then turned to the mountain Garségěl near Kekláu where the big Callophyllum tree stands, which harbors them to this day.

Description of the place: Situated as sketched at Ngabiúl. The main road comes from there from the SW. Before it turns to the north a stone path forks to the east leading after a few steps to the tall village pavement where of the two village-bai, Bai raiebúkŭl, A. GosobuIngāu is still standing. In 1907 the northern B. Bilekélěk was already in shambles (plate 2²). The eastern part of the pavement is as high as a man and stands on a steep slope where a stone path with high walls leads down just like magnificent small stairs, similar to picture 32 or plate 5³.

Below at the waterfront there is a singular sight where on a small plane four bai-platforms are situated. In 1910 only two bai F. a Melós and C. a Gum were still standing; the last one was already in decay. Next to them a big bathing pond and a boathouse.

A colorful life must once have taken place at this landing place. Something similar could not even be found in the kingly Melekéiok or Goréör! Only in Ngarabāu can you see something similar, where the main road coming from Ngabiúl and going through a Jebúkūl ends, there high up the Bai rabāu are situated, of which only A. Gosobulngāu is still standing. In 1907 B. Bilekélĕk was already in ruins. From the village platform a stone path leads over a special pavement straight down the hill. On the right and left side of the road two bai are situated alongside the road, but only the two northern ones D. Bagadēi and E. Ngamólēi are still intact. Just like in a vineyard there are generally 2 trenches on each side of the middle road. Above, there is another big magnificent pavement. The planes are constructed on several high build walls. Through a small slit you reach the narrow beach where a boathouse is immediately encountered. Some harbor constructions are further south, like the bathing pool a Iás and on the landing bridge Gongríuer that is already located in the tide waters a fishpond and a fishermen's bai. Halfway up from the bathing water there stood even a fifth bai, C. a Belék; a sure sign how populous these villages must have once been! It has to be mentioned that whereas long channels lead through the mangroves to the landing places of Ngrīl, Ngabiúl and a Jebúkūl, in Ngarabāu there were only a few bushes in front, so that the view to the eastern sea was partly free. From there to the landing tip Pkulatáp are hardly any mangroves at all and the tip Gartēbiáng is completely free. There the land drops steeply. On the beach below a stone pavement is erected on the roots of a stone dam, where a fishermen's house stands that has been mentioned above.

History: Nothing is known about the origin. A relationship with Jebúkūl on Goréör seems to exist, at least with the neighboring Ngaregamāi as just mentioned.

Home of a Ugél re gulsíáng (story 204). Blai *a*Imogoáng is no longer there. The hero married a woman of blai 17 Makāu, who is also called Diragalīl.

Constitution of Iebúkūl.

bai l pelú (village house): Bai raiebúkūl A. Gosobulngāu

B. Bilekélĕk +

galíd (god): a Guódĕl (KUB. Kwodol)

klóbak (council): Ngaraiebúkūl female council: ar Uasĕgĕlúp

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang	klebil (clan):	ardil (women):
I	Góbak rai búkūl	Gorukil'l	I	Mieg	Gourót
II	a Gëoél (gëōél)	Narebogóng +	II	a Ugelíou	Gebilagëoél
III	Rubásăg	a Imëóng	to I	Ngapkëram	a Gekldúi
IV	Kësang ⁵⁷ (kësáng)	a Ibóng +	" II	to I	a Bilëdáng
V	Gobagád r tebëgël	a Dái	" I	" II	a Guódël'lagád
VI	Iegád rë ngaruëlëgâu	Ngaruëlëgâu	" II	" III	nr. VI
VII	Iegád ra reî	a Ibung lëgáng	" I	" IV	"VII
VIII	Iegád ra ngarebögóng	to II +	" II		" VIII

Further blai: 9. Barebogóng. 10. Ióurebogóng + 11. Ngersmeî. 12. a Ivëreóng. 13. Ngarevíkl. 14.

a Idegóng. 15. a Imangutgáp. 16. Nggarâu. 17. Makâu. 18. Teklóu. 19. Baliau.

nr.:	gáldëbegël (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I	Ngaradeságel	C. a Gúm	a Gúm	Right
II	Ngaraubíreg	D. Galablápl +
I	Ngarabénged	E. Garítm +	a Melós	Left
II	Ngaramelós	F. a Melós

In addition there is a táog Geróng.

7. Ngarabâu

(KUB. Ngarbau) one of the seven cities.

Location and construction already explained at a Iebúkūland Ngabiúl. With the first one the grassland Tagataû has also been mentioned (see Plan 1^d).

History: The squeezing of the money-bird for money by Gobakrabâu is supposed to have happened here in the bai (story 9). But only waste (bagadei) came and thus bai D. got its name. blai nr. I Metáui has been visited by Diragorosg, the clan mother of the people of Ngáruangël (story 20). Concerning the war canoe Gorogorói see story 49; see also the rooster of Gólei.

A part of story 51 about the beautiful Rëgëké takes place in Ngarabâu. See also the antiphonal chant in Ngarabâu, story 37.

Concerning the constitution it is remarkable that Klotráol, belonging to a Idíd in Goréör (see bl. V) also had the title Góbak rabâu, now a Regúgër nr. III.

The similarities of the names of the rubak with those of the friend a Iebúkūl are here mentioned. Both institutions of rubak have once been one.

Constitution of Ngarabau.

bai l pelú (village house): Bai rabau A. Gosobulngau B. Bilkélék + galíd (god):

Medúogil (KUB. Amedúk kohil)

klóbak (council): ar Ngarabau female council: ar Uasëgëlúp

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang	kleblīl (clan):	ardil (women):
I	Góbakrabau	Metáui	I	a Tëgäláem	a Rtik
II	a Gëoél	Ngarakongeráng	II	a Blák	Gëbilagëoél
III	Rubásăg ra golkúl	Golkúl	to I	Gomisáol	Klerubăsăg
IV	Kësáng	Medáies +	" II	a Iáus	Klësáng
V	a Iegád ra iríkl	a Iríkl	" I	to I
VI	a Iegád ra ilangăbóng	a Ilangăbóng	" II	" II
VII	Ngirangeáng	a Ngěáng +	" I	" II
VIII	Tet	lives in IV or	" II	" IV

Rub. Kësáng IV and Tet VIII can also be found in Gólei. Golkúl III was a galíd-blai (house of the priest). One Ngirangeáng see story 74.

Further blai: 9. Gomauelólók. 10. a Iráiel. 11. Ngerkitelél. 12. a Desóng.

nr.:	gáldëbegël (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bítang (side):
I	Ngarageiróger	C. a Belék +	Bagadēi	Right
II	Ngarakongebeli	D. Bagadēi
I	Ngaragoludód	E. Ngamólei	a Tparseróu	Left
II	Ngaratangádík	F. a Tparseróu

Further taog: Ngerde sáol.

8. Gólei⁵⁸

also called Golékl (Semp. Rollek1, Kub. Kolékl) belongs to the 'Federation of the Seven', to the 'Federation Gëoátáog', and to the 'Federation Delbirt' (see above p. 9). It has two bital pelú (sides of the village); a Júngël up in the north and Metëulögól down at the landing place.

Description of the place (see Plan 3): Gólei lies on the northwestern tip of the peninsula of Ngaregolóng, on the tip of the beak pointing to the west. There is a small bay with a northern rocky point Pkul a medós; in former times the boathouse Goraderúl was situated on its southern side and one in the south, Pkul Ngaripekpúk. The inner part of the bay was free of mangroves; on its beach was enough space for the construction of the landing place Metëulögól⁵⁹. A stone rectangle allows one to land at high tide. A small entrance between two stone walls leads to the beautifully situated boathouse (Figure 8) where in front of the wall two legend-stones are situated. A rooster on a hexagonal rooster

Bai a Iluóng

Figure 8. Landing place Metëulögól ' in Gólei.

basalt column (Figure 8. and 9) and a column like human figure, about which we could not learn anything⁶⁰. The story about the rooster of Boi (see story 11) is the following: first the rooster with its column was in Ngatmé1. When this one was abandoned it was brought to Ngarabâu. When Ngabúkëd attacked, both pieces left as victory-booty and the stones were loaded on a bamboo raft. To everybody's utter astonishment the rooster started to crow in Ngabúkëd. The voice is supposed to have come from the inside of the stone. Out of fear the rooster was brought on a raft to Goketól near Mangal' lán (see p. 19) and then to Gólei. — South of the boat-house, the landing-bai G. Bai ra Metëulögól, also called *a*Iluóng, because once upon a time it stood in a Iluóng and was a galid-bai. From the landing place a 300 m long stone path leads between the two houses from the landing place to the village. There it meets sideways the road that leads at its southern end to bai

Figure 9. Bai's rooster (on Figure 8) from the side

D. Săgarsâi, next to which in former times had been a second bai with the same name.

In the north are the village houses Bai ra derebēi⁶¹, of which the southern one A. Gosobulngau was still standing, whereas B. Bilekélěk had already crumbled. From the NE corner of the pavement a short and small stone path leads to blai nr. 1 a Iluóngbai, being the house of the priest it has this rare privilege; more about it below. The main road leads from the NS segment of a sideways path inland to the west. Nearly all family houses are situated along it to the north and the south. On the trailhead is the clubhouse E. Bágěšělēgúr and next to it, further inland, separated from the stone path bai F. Gongěluátěl. As there is no bathing pool in the village, such a díong has been erected in the nearby river *a*Ibesáng, also called Ngategúr. From the trailhead a small 200 m long stone path leads to it. The river is lying in green tuff, whereas the footpath in the east of here is hewn into yellow tuff. In a few minutes you can reach the crater Ngarekēi where the taro patches of Gólei are located . Altogether, from Gongěluátěl you can reach the high point a Iksíd, mentioned above on p. 11, in a quarter of an hour

Several legend-stones are in front of the bai on the village pavement (see Plan 10), especially the west-facing face of the goddess a Iluógěl (Figure 11) who brought taro to the people of Palau. She is also the mother of Sokodiáng (Figure 12), who is standing in form of a 120 cm high stone on the SE corner of the rubak-bai. It is the well-known Golungīs of Ngeaur(see story 170), who married the daughter of rub. I. Tegógo. A container lies in front of B. Bilekélěk's gable, looking like a baking trough; it is 1 m long (Figure 13) and was brought there from Ngabúkěd. It is called mlil a galepúgěp, the "Boat of the Money" (see story 30). East of it, on the edge, there is a stone pillar *táng l bád*⁶²(Figure 14); a similar one is also in Ngaremetóng, etc. (see story 5). Finally, south of it on the corner of the platform, there is a stone a Kíok, for the "Cat's Cradle", galíd ě bád; it has the form of a heart and has a hole in it (Figure 15). Cat's cradles are mentioned, for instance, on the trip of a Ugélkeklāu (story 8). But a context with this stone is not known. The name a Kíok was also not explained to me. Maybe it comes from the abandoned village Kíok nearby Gólei.

People are very industrious here. The long pestles for betelnut, made of Tridacna shell, are produced in Gólei. In addition, during my second visit of the place on June 11th 1910, I saw the production of turtle shell plates. Also, the valuable kau-belts are supposed to have been produced only here (KUB. VIII p. 186).

History: Gólei, which means "Magic", is a famous place in the history, and numerous legends partly or entirely take place here. The stone pillar referred already to it story 5 and the stone-boat in story 30. Then, on the plot of land Bertmák stood the almond tree where Gorágěl's mother, the snake bersóio, lived (story 13). Further stories about this place are:

Figure 10. Place of the legend-stones, Figure 11—15 in Gólei.

Figure 11. Stone of the goddess Iluógěl.

12. Sokodiáng

13 mlil a galdebúgép moneu-hoot

14 tang l bad stone post

15 a Kiol . . .

The dispute about the dead body (story 31); the rich one who fell in-between (story 32); Dinga ladúi and Dupsgasél, through whom the houses Ukál in Gólei and a Kláng in Ngurusár were closely connected (story 33); the children of the breadfruit tree who reached all the way to Ngurusár (story 34); the man from Gólei, who found his brother while fishing (story 35); how Ngaruáú escaped from Gólei (story 36); the snobbish Ngedekéî (story 39). These are all local stories.

Plan 2.

The extensive legends where Gólei plays a part are more important, such as Golungīs (story 170), Boi (story 11), Medegēipélau (story 197). The last one was already mentioned in Ngabiúl where he was called Ngiraidemáî whereas here he is named Ngirailuóng after blai nr. I aIluóng and he stands in close connection to rubak nr. I of the village Tegógo, who was at the same time also a priest and who had a priestess mlagél at his side (see story 3).

Men and women of house nr. I aIluóngbai are supposed to have taken the god out of blai a Ukál, which was situated behind aIluóngbai. rubak nr. II received his name Tet, because, as a messenger, he always carried the money of the god in his tet-basket, therefore he became nr. II. In former items rubak nr. V a Ramagaséngél has been the messenger of the priestess who had the title Gëbitegógo (nr. I). The still existing family a Ukál belongs to keblīl nr. II; but their men can not become II rubak, they can only become the head of the club.

Constitution of Gólei.

bai l pelú (village house): Bai raderebeĩ A. Gosobulngau

B. Bilkélëk

galíd (god): ♂ Ngirailuóng (KUB. Irailuo), ♀ Mlagél

klóbak (council): Ngaraderebeĩ female council: name ?

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang	keblīl	ardil (women):
I	Tegógo	a Iluóngbai	I	a Rageingás	Gëbitegógo
II	Tet	Tegēĩ vód	II	a Rageiróro	Gorákidil
III	a Bedúl	a Ipdeĩ	to I	to I	a Ruegádraipdeĩ
IV	a Ugér' rëngós	a Ilíd	" II	" II	a Ruegádrangarabál
V	a Ramagaséngël	a Tkerdëu	" I	" I	nr. V
VI	a Rtrúig	a Tuél +	" II	" II	" VI
VII	nr. VII	Pelaiëgúr	" I	" I	" VII
VIII	nr. VIII	Goiláng	" II	" II	" VIII
nr.:	uriúl rúbak (secondary chiefs):	blai (house):	further blai
9	Ngiraitilúgel	Gongrángër	17. Galdēĩ
10	Ngiratmakeúng	Tagabrák	18. Merekí
11	Gubeseĩ	Gabelóng	19. Tmakeúng
12	a Riúngël	(in Ngaremetóng)	20. a Sói
13	Ngiraurékëd	(in Ngabiúl)	21. a Ikeláu
14	Ngiraiuesekóel	a Iuesekóel	22. Golep
15	Ngiramadálabai	in Ngarametóng
16	a Ugulabád	Keséngemau
nr.	gáldëbegël (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaragoi vedí	C. Săgarsai +	Săgarsai	Right
II ♂	Ngara mangadóged	D. Săgarsai
I ♀	Ngarameskáng
I ♂	Ngaradëel	E. Bagësëlēgúr	Bagësëlēgúr	Left
II ♂	Ngarasegóu	F. Gongëluátël
I ♀	Ngaratutmadiaĩ
II ♀	Ngaraperálm

Uninhabited Villages.

9. Ukál +situated on the beach between Gólei and Ngarametúkěr. Together with the following three villages it forms the Ukál-Federation, as already mentioned above on p. 9. Founded by the wealthy Siěg (story 3).
10. Narakěám + south of Ukál, near to Point Taprekěám.
11. Dúbog + to the north of Ukál, already quite near to Gólei.
12. Ngartól +north of Gólei situated on the beach, see story 39 where also the places a Meltól and a Ilemasáng are mentioned (see rub. 18 Ngrīl); kér of Kíok.
13. Ngaregabáb +east of Ngartól on the northern rim of the crater Ngarekēi. Belonging to the Federation Delbirt. (see page 10).
14. Kíok +on the south western rim of the crater Ngarekēi, on the northern foot of the small hill Rois ng Kíok, from where a stone path is supposed to have led to the stone quad a Iksíd (see page 11). It belongs to the Federation Delbirt. Rubak nr. I Gareóměl (see story 13), it is also considered as bital pelú of Gólei. Here the story takes place of the man who wanted to steal a bai in Ngartól, but was surprised. Then he wanted to pay for it. When the people refused, he took it away, because Ngartól was kér of Kíok (see log in bai Ilemau in Ngéungěl.)
15. Nggúi + on the eastern coast quite near to Pukl a medórom (Plan 3); belongs to the Federation Delbirt. Here the story 25 about the screaming boy takes place, see also Jegád ě gúi in Ngatmél.
16. Ngatmél⁶³ + south on Nggúi on the eastern coast on the foot of the mountain Ngadég (see plan 3), with a channel Těru lekebíl (see story 9). Belongs to the Federation Delbirt. In 1910 a settlement of Chamorro from the Marianas was here. In former time this was one of the most important galíd-places. The god of the place was called Ugél t mel, the goddess Gobagád l tmél. She is the mother of Boi, who is even today called upon by fishermen and palm-wine-cutters. Rubak nr. I was Kěrorumáng, as mentioned in story 10 where the drifted bamboo pole is also mentioned, just like with the rainbow god Gorekím, who, by the way, also has his home in Ngatmél (see story 15 and 48, KUB. II p. 121). Ugéltmél is considered the inventor of navigation. In Ngatmél or better in Nggúi rubak Jegád ě gúi lived, who had the best rooster, as can be read in story 11 about Boi who won his fish swarms here. More about the rooster of Ngatmél at Gólei. Here the deraú-hand-held-nets have been invented (see story 10). Finally the story of the louse of Ngatmél, story 42 of the Dileáol dil. and story 128 have to be mentioned.
17. Melekei + situated south of Ngatmél, on the east coast near point a Imetáng (on plan 3 it is indicated too far in the south); belongs to the Federation Delbirt. To here drifted some of the magic bamboo from Galáp (see story 15). Story 38 also takes place here where people of this place are depicted as rather high-spirited, which is why they had to be punished. They oppressed Ngëúngël, Ngarakëam, and Ngesūd.

18. Ngarapesóng +situated north of Melekei, on the bay Metúker (metkerél) Ngarapesóng.

19. Uriúl +situated south of Melekei in the bay Metúker a Iplóng.

20. Ngartmóng +also called Ngartmúiël, see story 26. Apparently the inhabitants were deep-sea fishermen, as can be deduced from story 26 and 46.

21. Ngesūd +mentioned at Melekei (story 38), its exact location is unknown.

22. Delbóng +further inland from Point Ngaruosogóng (plan 3), also not far from Uriúl, situated on the NE slope of the hill Delóbok. It is important because of its stone pillars, the tang l bád of bai Ngeruëlëgāu, which are mentioned in story 5 and have already been mentioned concerning Ngaremetóng. In 1907, I visited the place and saw a two meter long, hexagonal basalt pillar laying there. KUB. II p 121 mentions a Delbodk (KUB. VIII p. 269 written Delpotp). Its inhabitants had angered all Ngaregolóng with their high spirits; therefore, they had to flee (see story 19 about the bamboo). People from Nggësár are supposed to have come from here. They came via Ngërutói in Ngardmāu where even today kleblil Ngatagabáng and Këselsīl are supposed to have come from Delbóng. galid a Ugélkeklāu supposedly punished them; he destroyed the place and brought the inhabitants to Nggësar. In story 16 about the sailing competition the galid of Delbóng is also mentioned, who has the stone with the holes for the mast in his boat; the stone is now in Mangal'láng (see there).

23. Ngarekeklāu +(see above p. 7). The island opposite of the northern point of Babeldáob (see Vol. I p. 231). Especially known because a Ugélkeklāu has settled it (story 8 and 9). It is supposed to have been completely paved.

Also story 18 of Klubudsingál takes place there, see also animal story 189.

24. Ngaregúr +island is situated north of Ngarekeklāu (with the 2 separated mountains (Vol. I pp. 128 and 228). The middle part has been taken away (story 14); it now forms the island Malágäl. How the island had been separated, see story 20. Probably the name comes from gur "tongue" as the island has the form of a tongue. Without any doubt it has once been inhabited, it seems that on the southern point Ngardík a village with the same name has once been situated. The name of a cat's cradle "The Rock Wall of Rkiklau Slid Down and Destroyed the Village Ngartik« indicates this, mentioned in P. RAYMUNDp. 55. I also heard that the house nr. IV Túblai in Ngabúkëd comes from blai Ngurusoklúk in Ngaregúr. See also story 27 of Túrang re gur. Furthermore family nr. I Udës of Melekéiok (see there) is said to have lived there for some time. Ngaregúr is known because of Típetipakmfég who is supposed to have discovered the fire there (story 17). There also was a cave (story 40).

and further on the island is known because of its abundance of turtles (reason story 191). The white Alik has lived here, and, as far as I have heard, also in Ngarekeklāu. Compare the tree palau re gur in story 203, which carried kluk — pieces of money.

25. Nggeiangēl.

Plan 3.

(MC CLUER: Kyangle, SEMP.: Kreiangel, KUB: Kayangl and Kajangle, v. M.M: Kadjangle, COELLO: Kianguel, Mission: Chaiangel) a coral island further in the north of Babldáob from where it is about 15 sea miles away (Vol. I plan 2). Between both of them lies the reef Ngkesól that has no island. This is a great place for fish. It is structured in several parts that are mentioned in section II (Vol. I, p. 220-21).

Like Ngeā ur from Pelíliou, Nggeiangēl is separated from these reefs by a strait called Geiúgēl. For the northern arm the name Klou Legmúgēl is also mentioned and the southern strait is called Makáep, thus Geiúgēl just like Uleul'i (Ngátpang and a Irāi) seem to be general names.

Description of the place (Plan 3): Nggeiangēl consists of four reef islands with the names Nggeiangēl, Ngariúngs, Ngarapalás and Górak⁶⁴. From north to south they form the eastern wall of a reef bank which is about 2 sea miles wide (Plan 2). Only Górak in the south is situated more in the west. On the western side of this island is a passage for boats, another one is also on the western side of

// Krämer, Palau Vol. 2, Plate 3//
The Coral Island Nggeiangël.

4. Bathing pond Golakáng for the rubak.

5. Blai nr. I Ngardókou in Ngardíms

the reef and leads through a channel⁶⁵ that has mainly been dug to the main island Nggeiangěl , the only inhabited one. However, to pass here with a boat during low tide is rather difficult or even impossible. There is no lagoon, as has been already mentioned above (Vol. 1 p. 215) (plate 3^{1 and 2}).

All islands have coconut palm trees and other vegetation. Giant taro (br'arak) is planted. The main island has the form of a boomerang: the village Ngardílong is situated in the northern part, in the southern part is Ngardíms. A stone path connects both. Nearly halfway there is the beautiful bathing pond Golakáng (plate 3⁴), which is so important on a coral island. It belongs to the southern Ngardíms but can be used by both parts. There are also only 2 clubhouses: B Pipiroi (has no stone platform) in Ngardíms and D a Ulugól in Ngardílong. Therefore there are also only two so-called táog, here they are called "landing places", aBád and Malangláng. On the other side each section has its own rubak-bai in Ngardíms A Ngaruróu (plate 3³), in Ngardílong C. Ngarabasáng; nearby there was a grove (túngěl) for galíd Duói (see below). Even today, one side in Ngardílong is called Medūlbai+, once the name of a third village; a fourth, Ngesebūl+, has also disappeared. Maybe there also was a fifth one, Ngaregopkáng+, which is now no more than the name of one side of Ngardíms. On the southern head of the stone trail is bl I Ngardókou. (see plate 3⁵)

The industry the island was well known for: its sails and kaberuōg-boats (see part V boats). See also Goldegól's songs (story 196).

History: Where the name comes from is not known. ng can only be regarded as a demonstrative particle, gēiis "The Plane of the Reef"; the meaning of ángěl that also appears in Ngáruangěl etc. is unknown.

The island has been created by coral gravel and is considered to be very old, as story 4 shows. The natives think the same, and it is expressed very well at the end of story 13 of Gorágěl, where Dirabakerús, the daughter of Gobagád saved herself from drowning by scattering the ashes that her mother had given her. In this way she created this coral island, which was later planted with trees by the same woman. a Tkedlúkl, which turned into stone, is still standing on its outer side. A branch of the Casuarine that grows there was the victory sign of the galíd who fought over supremacy, as story 16 relates.

In story 9 and 21 it is told how great wealth came to Nggeinangel though this could not prevent it from getting dependent on the powerful Ngáruangěl. Like this one Nggeiangěl was frequently hit by typhoons as mentioned below and as it is also accounted in story 22. But it remained in existence.

Further occurrences on the island see story 11, 21, 22, 23, 35, 63, 71, etc.

In 1788 Meares already discovered the island (Vol. 1, p. 127), then it became known by SEMPER's visit, II p.155, in 1862 and by KUBARY's, I p. 5, in 1871 and 1883.

KUB. II p. 139 tells us that in 1883 he found Nggeiangěl uninhabited. Already during his first visit people from Nggeiangěl wanted to free themselves from the people of Goréör, who had suppressed and forced them to deliver courtesans (such a place is called ker). They even managed to get their women back and they successfully fended off further attacks. Then people from Goréör convinced the captain of a Spanish schooner to transport them on his ship to the coral islands. The islanders, intimidated by the foreign ship, did not dare to resist, thus people from Goréör easily took the islands, killed seven natives and dragged all inhabitants away in order to settle them on Ngarekobasáng. We hear from v. M.M. (see Vol. I, p. 150) that this happened at the end of 1875 or in the beginning of 1876 and that the name of the schooner was "Rosario".⁶⁶ Only in 1885 the inhabitants were returned to their islands! a Ibēdul nr . I of Goréör took the epithet Ngirailengelekéi according to a bai in Nggeiangěl.

About the above mentioned typhoon, in part II (Vol. 1 p. 208), the 'Deutsche Kolonialblatt' reports the following:

"The situation on Kaijangle is not as bad as one could have presumed according to the damage done in the north of the island Babeltaob. But here, too, all houses except two boathouses have collapsed. However, the coconut plantation did not suffer as badly as the ones in the north of Babeltaob. The main plantings are still standing. Also most of the brack-plants⁶⁷ have survived, so that at this moment the inhabitants are in no need. Nobody perished even though heavy seas inundated about half of the island. The storm surge has completely washed away about a fourth of the island. Nothing is left from the small offshore islands to the east except bare coral rock. The fact that the flood came from the east can be considered a lucky circumstance. Thus its main force broke on the small offshore islands. Everything that stood on this island has been washed away and thrown against the main island. The sea even ripped a good piece off the main island carrying it ahead of it. The uprooted trees, the stones and the sand finally built a huge barricade, which halted the waves pushing further inland. This must have saved the island from complete inundation."

The last census showed about 100 inhabitants, of these were 30 men (see also my visit, Vol. I, p. 170).

The oldest legend tells:

Dúkeram⁶⁸ was the god of Ngardílong. He is said to have come from the east on the back of a turtle (auél). It was low tide, when he arrived in front of the reef. Thus he left his animal outside and stepped on shore in order to call some people to bring in the animal . But when they arrived it had turned into stone . Therefore on Nggeiangél only the assembled chiefs together with the priest are allowed to eat turtle , but they can not catch it themselves.

In former times the god lived in Medūlbai, the bai l pelú (the village house), which is now a blai (house).

Duói was the goddess and the mother of Medegeipélau (see Ngabiúl and Gólei and story 197). A gumerëu-fishing pole had been erected for her on the platform of bai C. Ngarabasáng, in Ngrdílong. It had the form of a small sun house, but was not made of wood but of stone. The door opening was a hole where offerings for catching ketau-fish, also called karamlál, the red Myripristis, were deposited. Therefore the stone was also called Bad l ketau . Close nearby there was a túngël-grove that had been laid down in 1909. (Figures and more about it in the chapter about fishing, and galíd-cult, part V and VI). Concerning the goddess Mlagél see the chapter about Melekéiok, dist. IV.

Also a Ugélsagál, the god of Ngardíms, came from far away. He also honors the turtle.

Blai nr. I Ngardókou was supposed to be a wealthy house (KUB. I. p. 50). Story 9 tells how it obtained its wealth. Concerning the family Ngaraingós see story 71.

Constitution of Nggeiangél.

Ngardims.

2 bital pelú (sides of the village): Ngesebáiél S

Ngarakopkáng N

bai l pelú (village house): A. Ngaruróu galíd (god): a Ugélsagál⁶⁹ armeāu ("people" of both places): Ngedebūl

klóbak (council): Ngaruróu

female council: ar Ibil

nr.:	arubak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Rdëgór	Ngardókou	Gëbil
II	a Spis	a Mílong	Guódě'l'lagád
III	Gádlbai	Ngaragaoái +	Góbilăgádlbai
IV	"	a Rikél	a Ilúkl
V	Búik rdëgór	Ngardidegúr	Kěmëdángěl
VI	Búikspís	Kráir + " 12. Baimár	"

Ngardílong.2 bital pelú: Ngarabasáng, S

Medūlbai N

bai l pelú (village house): Bai C. Ngarabasáng galíd (god): Dúkeram*klóbak* (council): Ngarabasáng*armeāu* (people): Ngaregopkáng

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Góbakrusóng	Ngurusóng	Guódel'lăgád
II	Góbak ra kelāu	a Kelāu	a Uagád
III	Gádlbai	Gobagetél	Góbil a gádlbai
IV	Góbak ra kămsóng	Ngeriëgasáng +	Goreóměl
VI	a Ulonggóng	to I +	Góbil ulonggóng
VII	a Mád	to II +	a Ulebeluáol
VIII	Nr. VII-X	(VII) a Róro	a Ilúkl

rub. nr. III knows magic against typhoons.Further blai: 11. Ngësagăsáu. 12. a Rikáng. 13. a Ulúgol. 14. a Proto. 15. Gogíp.

16. Odriáng. 17. Bad e kekáu. 18. Medūlbai.

nr.:	gáldëbegěl (club):	bai (club house):	taog (channel):	pelú (village):
I ♂	Ngaragabákl	B. Pipirói	a Bád	Ngardíms
I ♀	Ngaratetedúi
I ♂	Ngaragëkíl	D. a Ulugól	Melangláng	Ngardílong
I ♀	Ngaratangadík

26. Ngáruangě̂l+once upon a time it was situated about 15 km⁷¹ northwest of Nggêiangě̂l . In 1700, according to estimates based on story 20, it was destroyed by a storm surge, just like Ngíptál (story 19) and a Ugé̂lpêlú (story 195), whereas Nggêiangě̂l remained intact despite strong afflictions. Story 20 (see also 9) tells us about it and names the families which moved from Ngáruangě̂l to the mainland. In many places they came into power⁷², just like Nggêiangě̂l had been subject to the proud community and had to deliver tribute of fish . It is well known from the older legends that galíd Terkelél married a woman Segelái from there, who seems to have come from blai Ngamedú (see story 19). Nothing is known about where the name comes from (see Nggêiangě̂l). In 1800 Ibargoitia discovered the shallows (see Vol. I p. 128).

District II. Ngarárd.

CANTOVA called it Yaláp, whereas Galáp (see there) was called Ngarárd in former times; MCCLUER: Angerarth, CHEYNE and SEMP: Ngirrarth, KUB: Angarard.

On the 1. 1. 1911 the mission counted 478 inhabitants.

Amount of villages 12, deserted 20.

klóul pelú (main village): Ngabúkě̂d.

rubukúl (its chief): a Mad.

armeāu (people): Ker'ráděl.

galíd (god): a Ugér'rěrák.

Polictical Groups:

Ngeringál'l (people: ar Ingál'l or Těngal'l): a Ulimáng, Ngarepkêi, Ngaragamelíl, Ngaradermáng, Ngaregobatáng.

Gěseibitáng: Ngarekěsáng, Kloultáog, Ngateluáng, a Desóngóng, Ngartúkūr.

Geography.

As already mentioned at district I it takes up the northern part of the peninsula, whereas district II takes up the middle and the southern part, the stump. It starts more or less at the isthmus of a Gól. Standing on the hill a Réngě̂d, in the north of this isthmus (plan 3 j 42'), you can overlook nearly the whole landscape (see Figure 46 in Vol. 1, p. 239). The area from here to Galáp has been already mentioned in district I p. 10. Up to this point there were still some hills, but at the isthmus of Nagbúkě̂d, south of the hill Pěbúl Ngúrang⁷³, the land drops to 10 m, thus forming a rise between the taro patches in in the east and the deep cleft of a Urúng in the west. But when walking on this riseto the south, passing through the shadowy place Ngabúkěd, you reach a wasteland mounting to the 130 m high step-mountain Ngamedú where the geographical description of the first district started. When looking south from this mountain, which is already situated on the stump, you can see a row of hills stretching to the south, leading deep into the main body of Babeldáob, into the area of the village Keklāu that is situated on the east coast and still belongs to Ngarárd. There are massive mountains, as for instance Ngulítěl, the wide Kerděu etc. that do not allow a view of the high mountain of Ngaramlungúi from Ngamedú. Just behind the trees of Keklāu, only a few steps from the stone trailhead Goragesúg, there lies one of the remarkable treeless pudding-hills. It is rectangular and steep; its top is quite flat, except for two warts on both diagonal corners. Its top is approximately 50 m above sea level and from here you have a beautiful view (see Figure 47 and 48 part Vol. I p. 240 and 241). It is called Ngarepkēi. From here you have an especially magnificent view of the broad back of the mountain of heaven⁷⁴ Ngulítěl (see Vol. I p. 238 Figure 43). In 1907 the house of a priest was said to be located there. The mountain is situated at 290°, therefore in WNW. South of it, in its whole width, is the Kerděu, 237°—265° (SW to W—W). Further south on the other side of the mangrove bay of Ngaradepsú, where a village with the same name and the settlement a Idelúi + were situated, there in SW is the mythical mountain Ngělúkěs. There the holy Calophyllum tree stands and many Tridacna shells are said to be lying in the wood, the leftovers of the food of the cannibalistic Tekīlmaláp devils. In the extreme south you can see the hill Ngarségěl⁷⁵ (196° in S to W) next to Ngivál. In the north you can overlook about 3 km coast line, first the mangrove bay Ngápsang⁷⁶, then a point with mangroves, which is formed by an island, similar the Pkul ng rīl bei near a Imeúngs. Here it is called Kekerél Doremégól, whereas Klóul Doremégól is situated further north in a big passage (plan 3 j 37' and Figure 47 in -Vol. I p. 240). Inland from the mangrove belt, about 1 km from Keklāu, the small hamlets a Ulangaráng, and a few steps further Ngaregobatáng, are situated. One more kilometer further on, next to Klóul Doremégól, are the formerly grandvillage Ngaradermáng and not far from it Ngaramelíl. More inland behind this one you can see a pudding-mountain Ngarala garěróng. Ngarepkēi is one km further north; it is said to once have been a part of a Ulimáng, which comes soon afterwards.

The mountains recede already behind Ngarepkēi, offering space for a plain of about 100 hectares where mostly taro is cultivated. This plain of Ngaramedēi, as I call it according to the small settlement north of Ulimáng, stretches to the bay of Ngēsáng, where a beautiful sandy beach and the mouths of some rivulets please the eye. The village Ngēsáng is situated on the south flank of the hill, where Galáp is located and this forms the northern edge of the bay and of point Pkulangēsáng (see plan 4^b). This hill of Galáp is about 30 m high and stretches from south to north. In the north it merges with the hills of the middle part of the peninsula. Towards the west the stone path of the village drops a little bit and when you step onto the wasteland from the western stone-trailhead of Galáp, called Ngaragúsēm, the trail continues to the west on the above-mentioned (p. 9) rise, slowly dropping towards the village Ngabúkēd. On the whole above-mentioned distance from Ngēsáng to Ngabúkēd the Galáp-hill forms the northeastern and northern boundary of the taro patches of Ngaramedēi (see Plan 4^{ab c} of Ngabúkēd, Galáp, and a Ulimáng). But on the west and south side are the foothills of the mountains Ngamedú (130 m) and Roisingáng, about 50 m smaller,⁷⁷ towering over the village Ulimáng. This Roisingáng with its remarkable top (see Vol. 1 Figure 46 a. 47) is one of my bearing points and is situated at 352,5° from the Keklāu -mountain Ngarapngei, therefore more or less in the north of it. From Roisingáng you have a wonderful view to the south and to the west coast, but also to the north over Ngabúkēd etc. (see Figure 37 in Vol. I p. 229). Between Ngulítēl and Roisingáng is a red earthen mound called Gobagád. This is the name of a goddess who used to live on the wooded mountain Roisingél, which must be a Uluóng⁷⁸ (plan 3 j 37'). The directions of the natives is diverse. This mountain a Uluóng, covered with wood, is situated quite near to the west coast. A big stretch of wood reaches all the way down to the coast, where just like in a fairy tale the stone paths and chiefly platforms of the uninhabited village Desongóng are situated. Gobagád wanted to rebuild it, before she turned her attention to Ngabúkēd. Several villages were once situated there on the beach: Kloutáog, Ngarakēsáng, Ngarateluáng, and Ngartúkūr, which are all included in Gēseibitáng. In the north already near to point Ngēvíu of a Urúng are the táog of Ngaskerásand Ngeskís; the main village Ngabúkēd formerly used the last one. Two enormous rocks are lying above the coast; they are the couple Gēbil ma legád (KUB: I p. 15), which turned into stone. Looking from Roisingáng towards northwest there are two more hills that catch your attention; Ngardelúngg (293°=WNW) and the double mountain of a Urúng; its point Ngēvíu is formed by the western side and the 1 1/2 km long cleft of a Urúng. On the northern side of this point is the steep rock-wall Ngēóng made of green tuff with big inlayed lava pebbles. At its foot, on a small piece of land called Tabát Idil⁷⁹, SEMPER had his house; a few coconut trees still indicate the place. To the east next to it there is a spring and the fishermen-bai a Urúng situated on a stone construction, dominating the entrance to the small entry, because from the north a long stone pier comes all the way to here (Figure 16).

Next to it, further east, a channel leads to ked Melánglang.⁸⁰ Then further to the east, already close to Ngabúkěd, was in former times Ngatǎgěrónġ + (see there).

In the north, on the middle part of the peninsula, were the villages Ngúrang; Ngarenggóng or Ngarenggóiēs; Ngarietět, whose landing place was in the bay Ptilěráng⁸¹; Ngarblūd, on the formerly mentioned isthmus where in 1907 the boathouse

Figure 16. Fishermen's bai of a Urúġ.

Ngaramerdáng was still standing; Ngariepáng; Ngēsóng; Ngarapeláng; Kélebid; and finally on the east coast the formerly mentioned a Gól in a low-lying taro patch of the local big sandy beach.

History.

Formerly the landscape was called Ker'ráděl, now it is the name of its young people, whereas Galáp was called Ngarárd (see Galáp). CANTOVAheard Yaláp (see Vol. I p. 103). HOKIN, page 48, made it known as Angrart whose chief was Ikari (a Kerái) and that it had a friendship with Kurura (Goréör) (see Vol. I p. 122). But SEMPER's reports, cited in Vol. I p. 137, show that this friendship was not a very strong one, because in 1860 war had started between the two of them. KUB. II p. 138 says: "First the "Sphinx", a British war ship, destroyed Ngarbukut, which SEMPER relates in detail. This was a blow the state was never able to recover from. Since then it stood on the side of Kórryor. Robbed of its last money, I found in Ngarbukut only one house in 1883 where the old and indolent Mad, the former Arekolulk of Dr. SEMPER

Both rubak-bai Ngaruaū of Ngabūkēd, seen from the west.
(left hand side in the front shrine for the village god, in the middle the head bowl)

received me apathetically. Shortly before people from Korryorer had helped him to destroy Galáp, but in accordance with Molegoyók the latter ones finally plundered Ngarbukut and Mad fled to Radmau. —

However, Goréör soon appointed him again. In SEMP.II p. 213 Mad talks about the old friendship between Melekéiok and Ngabúkēd. Like here so it was with the friendship of Goréör, which acted under the influence of the British.

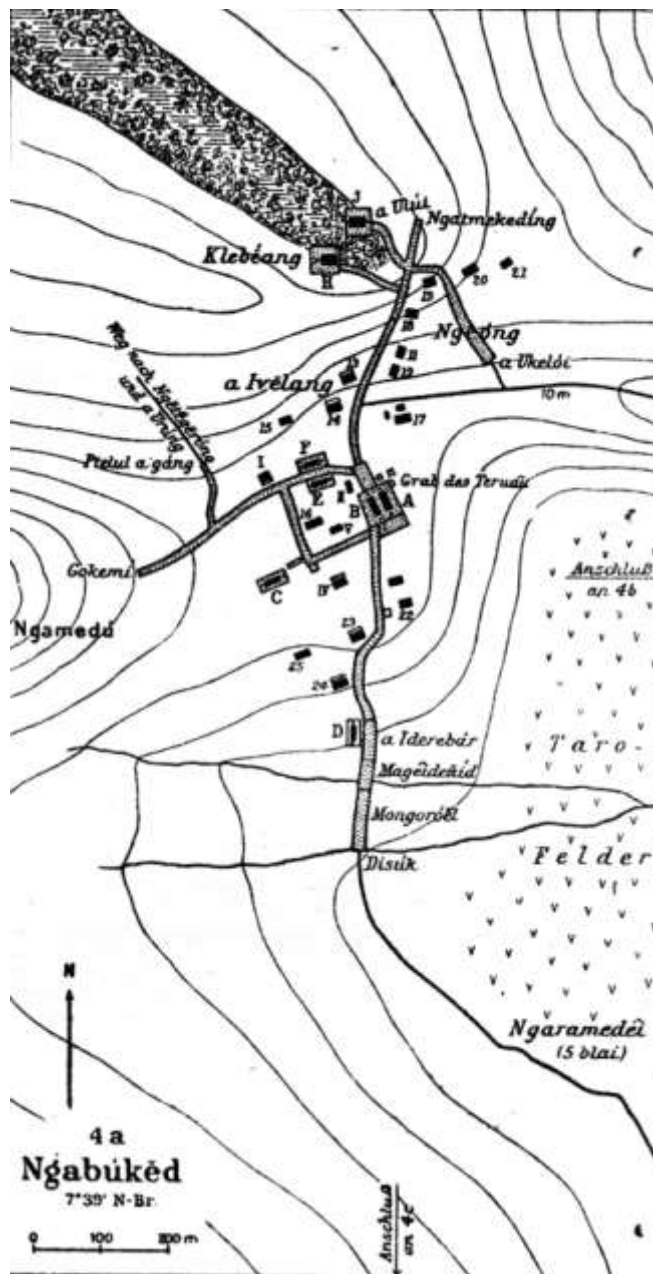

Story 49, already mentioned in district I, shows how Goréör and Mangal'láng became friends. That this one had always feuds with Ngabúkēd has been already mentioned there.

Ngabúkēd seems to have been especially quarrelsome. The older history see there.

1. Ngabúkēd.

often pronounced Ngabúkēd, also Ngabóng, or Ngabúng (SEMP: Aibukit, KUB: Ngarbúkud, v. M. M.: Aibuket, later on Aibukut.

Description of the place: (Plan 4^a) Situated in the middle of the small island on the 10 m high rise between east and west. But due to the long cleft of a Urúng on the west coast, as has just before been described, many tall trees border the village roads, but it is surrounded by wasteland. Next to the highest point is a quad, enclosed by stone paths. There are 2 village-houses, Bai rēruāu, on a stone quad (plate 4) pointing to NNW and on its NE corner is the grave of Teruāu⁸² (see story 58). The front parts of these bai are also pointing to NNW. In front of the eastern bai A Gosobulngāu is a place without stones where in 1907 the remains of a tet-shrine for the goddess Meru pēlau⁸³ had been standing. She is considered to be the one who raised the place, just like Gobagádrūāu (see story 14). In the west of it also on the ground lies a broken bowl for head trophies, towered over by a hibiscus plant heavy with blossoms. On the side of the western Bilekélĕk-bai B there is a tall bars-tree, Bars ruāu (see story 58), whereas behind the bai a terrace for the dance of the head hunters is situated a little bit below.⁸⁴ Next to the bowl, in front of the Bilekélĕk-bai a stone path, about 1 m wide, leads about 50 steps to the northwest in order to end there suddenly. From there two smaller stone paths continue, one in the same direction and one to the west; the first one leads down a hill to the water (because the west coast has a cleft of about 1 1/2 km here, the already before mentioned a Urúng). On its left side it passes the village side a Ivĕlang and leads to two bai H. Klebĕang and I. a Ulúi, where it ends outside at the trailhead Ngatmekedíng. Here is the part of the village called Ngĕóng⁸⁵ that stretches east up the hill, crossed by a wide and shadowy winding stone path. From its trailhead a Ukelói after only a few steps you reach the path from Galáp to Ngagbuked, which passes by the compound Markesáng(blai 17) where the old Mad Gobakĕlôu, SEMPER's Arakalúlk lived until he died in 1908 (see Figure 19).

Plan 4^a.

Figure 17. Stone pot (klés) with a lid, near blai Tublai, (about 30 cm high)

On the gólbed-stonequad of the former blai nr. IV; Túblai are two stone pots called klés (Figure 17). Ngĕóng is known by story 13 of Gorágĕl where rubak nr. I Ngaurákl is mentioned and because Bekĕurebódĕl (story 50) had been staying and helping here, the people of Ngarebódĕl are allowed to take whatever they want when visiting here.

When you turn after the just mentioned stone path, then you see it passing between two tall bai: E. Ngarebukikióng, where the council Ngarebukikióng (see below), the high school, was meeting, and F. Beker'rók. Then further westwards it mounts to the trailhead Gokemí, where it ends. There you enter the grassland and have the 130 m high step-mountain Ngamedú in front of you. On the way to its top you meet a small plate like legend-stone called Derúl. Club Ngaramatál had followed a ray (rul) all the way here, but he was too quick and escaped. So they asked a small boy to make himself a spear, and he finally managed to spear the ray, but it turned into stone. Most likely this legend is connected with Milad and the great flood (story 19). P. RAYMUNDp. 49 says the rul-fish is food for the galid of a Ruāu.

From the Gokemí stone path a short stone path turns to the north leading down into a small valley. From ptelúl a gáng a footpath leads to the west coast and over the old stone paths of Ngětěgërong through a beautiful wood to a Urúng.

Another stone path that helps to form the quad of roads leads to the south; where it meets the eastern road a short stone path forks off to bai C. aRěam, which was in ruins in 1910. On its corner is also an ilíud-pavement for the chiefs.

The southern main road leads from the village houses down the mountain. On the left (east), shortly before the road bends, there is an ilíud-pavement next to blai 22. On the bottom you see bai D Měángěldil⁸⁶. Here the road is at least ten meters wide, and continues like this for 180 m with a beautiful canopy formed by old trees, just like in an old park (Figure 18). The road is divided into three noticeable segments, called a Iderebár, Magěideűíd, and Mongoróěl, until the trailhead Disúk meets the small stream that comes from above and waters the big taro patch⁸⁷ and all the before mentioned plain Ngarameděi. A place with the same name is about $\frac{1}{2}$ a km distant from the trailhead and in 1907 it had only 5—6 blai.

Figure 18. The great southern stone path of Ngagbúkěd.

Ngabúkěd is an imposing and beautiful place. The main stone path from N to S is more or less exactly 1 km long. The construction proves that the village was well-to-do and had led many successful wars.

Industry: pots from Ngěóng (Kub. VIII p. 199).

Privileges: Catching and selling dugong just like Galáp and Kekláu (Kub. VIII p. 176). In Ngëóng Ngarebódel had the right to take away boats etc. (see story 50).

History: Nothing is known where the name comes from.

Ngabúkěd is a very old and important place. Already in the creation myth (story 2) it has been outlined that the created land between Ngabúkěd and Galáp was separated and only goddess Merúpélau or Gobagád (story 14 and 58) lifted the land in-between and created ked a Iruáng there. But the human inhabitants are supposed to have come to Ngabúkěd from a Ibúõg, north of Ngivál.

Ngabúkěd was said to be a wealthy place. Story 30 and in another version story 9 tell us about the origin of its wealth, but nevertheless it has been founded by poverty⁸⁸ (story 3), and according to the history of the district in recent times it seems to have returned to it. Its battles are also mentioned there. It had an old rivalry with Galáp, which always pretended to be older; with Nagregolóng existed an eternal enmity. See also stories 36, 39, 60, 79. SEMPER made Ngabúkěd known; he mentions it in detail under the name Aibukit in his book p. 43, 54, 80, and 115.

Constitution: It is not quite clear how rubak nr. IV Mad became the highest of Ngabúkěd and at the same time of Ngarárd. It is said that his family comes from blai Túblai from the destroyed coral island Ngáruangěl, they are supposed to have been very rich, just as blai nr. I Uděs in Mekeléiok. It can be assumed that he came into power because of his wealth. In story 9, the money-bringing curlew wanted to plunge on top of the house, but remained "standing" in the air. This relates to the name Túblai that is supposed to have come from blai Ngurusoklúk in Ngaregúr. In Uděs and Túblai taro is the main totem⁸⁹, it was not supposed to be eaten by the high chief and his children, whereas their wives did not have to follow this food regulation. About blai I Ngaregědók or Goisaváng it is said in story 20 that it comes from Ngáruangěl and, even though it has been abandoned, it belongs today to blai a Idíd in Goréör (see KUB. VI p. 19 as its galíd a Ugér'rěrák is mentioned).

Indeed a Mad is in power in Ngabúkěd and in Ngarárd, therefore the bestowing of the title Mad is of importance. Once the Mad is dead, all chiefs from Ngarárd come for the mourning to Ngaruáu, the bai l pelú. For the candidate of the new title a hut (golbóngěl) is erected on the gólbed-platform of blai nr. IV Túblai, where he has to stay invisible to all for one month. In order to free him the clubs go to mangelíl-fortune tellers asking how they might obtain a blebáol-headtrophy, that alone might free the enclosed one, if it comes from the eastern side, bitál iángěd.⁹⁰ The one who brings the relief-bringing head receives galebúgěp-money as a reward from the new Mad. Now the club walks around with the head to a Imeúngs where Ngirturóng pays one galebúgěp to the goltebeaél, "The One Who Brings the Mad Out", then Goréör as well as Ngarekeai, a Irai, Keklau and Ngardmau as long as they are all on friendly terms, whereas Ngaregolóng is considered to be an eternal enemy. After the return of the club to Ngabúkěd the new Mad is free. This custom is very old and has not been practiced in the near past. Obviously SEMPER's Arakalulk was already too sophisticated to be locked up and be liberated by a head. Therefore he also had no klegădăol-entourage. In 1871 he had gotten the title Mad, when the old Mad had died in the course of an epidemic, as KUB. I p. 13 recounts. This one is supposed to have been locked up and was freed by gălděbegěl Ngargolúkl in a Gól.

SEMPER speaks quite a bit about his friend; in SEMP. II p. 36 the relationship of Mad (this means "death") and Krei is elaborated. According to him the brothers of Arakalulk (a Rěgělúlk) also have this title, as SEMPER puts it, "a title of a lower rank", and because of this, he must have been just like Arikoko (a Regúgěr) close to the heir of the throne in Goréör. Concerning the title of "lower rank" it is explained as follows: in bai Ngarebukikióng, a sort of rubak-bai mentioned above, was a council with the same name, it consisted of 6 rubak: 1. a Rmeikngáng, 2. Gădlbai ra ngarekesăděl; 3. a Idăr; 4. a Rěgělúlk; 5. Gădlbai ra idúng, 6. Ngirkióu. These 6 lived in the bai and the sons of well-to-do families had their schooling (gosuóběl) there, a first step for their future title career. It was an institution that otherwise is only known from Galáp.

Whoever in the council Ngarebukikióng held title nr. 4 Rěgělúlk later on became rubak nr. IV a Mad and thus the head.

That I had met SEMPER's Mad alive in 1907 who had also the name Mungiáng and Góbak

Figure 19. a Mad Gobakělóu, SEMPER's Arakalulk † 1908
(after life)

ě 1óu (see Gor At 3 Gen. IV) I already mentioned this in Vol. 1 p. 165 a. 167. He died in 1908

Of the other rubak th following were still alive in 1910: nr. I Kěrai in a Imeúngs; he had taken the title only because of lack of people in Ngabúkěd and he actually was the last offshoot of the famous house a Ibedagál of Roispelú. He died in March 1913.

Nr. II lived in Ngardmau, nr. VI in Ngěsáng, nr. VII in a Gol, nr. VIII in Ngrīl and nr. X in a Ulimáng. Therefore only 4 of the 10 were still living in the village. 6 of the title-blai had crumbled and this indicates sufficiently that the place was breaking apart. On the place of nr. III stood blai 16 Gongúkl, on the place of nr. VIII stood blai 26 Gómlei. Sic transit gloria mundi! [Latin: "Thus goes the glory of the world"]

Constitution of Ngabúkěd.

bai l pelú (village house): Bai rěruāu A. Gosobulngāu

B. Bilekélěk,

galíd (god): Merúpélau ♀ (KUB. ♂ a Ugér'rěrák⁹¹; ♀ Dir'ruāu)

klóbak (council): Ngaruāu

Female council: ?

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	ardil (women):
I	Kerāi	Ngaregědók ⁹²	to I	Dilbúkěd
II	a Rbogó rě kesáděł	Ngarekesáděł	II	—
III	Tegúr rā ngělengí ⁹³	Ngělengí +	to II	—
IV	a Mád	Túblai ⁹⁴	I	Mlagei
V	a Rbogó raidúng	a Idúng	to II	—
VI	Gádlbai raiěgětí	a Iěgětí+	" I	—
VII	Kěrai remiáu	Ngaremiáu +	" I	—
VIII	Tegúr ra rómei	Rómei ⁹⁵ +	" I	—
IX	a Skerás	a Iríkl +	" I	— X	a Rbogó rě ngāruát	Ngaruát +	" II	—

uriúl rúbak (secondary chiefs):

- | | |
|---------------------|-----------------------------|
| 11. Ngiragomagáng | } only the name no title |
| 12. Ngira ilúgös | |
| 13. Gěra pelú | |
| 14. a Imrúr | |
| 15. a Iděi | |
| 16. a Dkóiel | |

Further blai except the already mentioned title-blai are:

11. Semanderáng

12. Goredákl

13. Melekói

14. Gomóket

15. Depkár

16. Gongúkl

17. Markësáng (Spanish name Marquesa; in former times nr. VII stood here)

Mad lived here until his death in 1908.

18. Ngarederuáp (Ngëóng)

19. Ngarekikói "

20. Ngarekëáng "

21. Maguáng "

22. a Inglóng

23. Goisëoáng

24. Romerióu (see bl. VIII)

25. Gómlei (in place of blai VIII)

nr.:	gáldebegël (club):	ptelúl (its head):	bai (club house):	táog	bitang
♂
II	Ngaratelebér	Ngira mekúr (Túblai)	D. Mëángeldil	"
III	Ngaragokemi ⁹⁶	a Mád	E. Ngarebukikióng	"
♀
I	Ngaramelílakeai
II	Ngarabandëráng ⁹⁷
III	Ngaraiámël
♂
I	Ngaralulëu	a Mád +	F. Beker'rók	Beker'rók	left
II	Ngarasësep	Gëlebúgöl (Túblai)	G. a Ibaióng +	"
III	Ngarabariói	Ngiramorisóng "	H. a Klebéang	"
♀
I	Ngarairiáng
II	Ngarangau
III	—

The landing-bai I. a Ulúi belongs to Ngëóng. A landing place in the east is called Taptár (see story 58) and Makëáld (story 9). In the west, south of point Ngëvíu, the channel Ngeskís has been mentioned to me (see above p. 47).

2. Ngaramedei

(Plan 4^a) (KUB. Ngaramedép, galid♂ Irakomgúul, ♀ Alatakasngerél), name of medei-taropatch, as it is situated in the big taro patch a Il'lói, south of Ngabúkěd (see there). The place is also mentioned in story 9 at a Ugél keklau, respectively the channel Makěáld that was already mentioned at Ngabúkěd. It has its name, because the woman Gourót ra kí from Ngaramedei was washing herself here in the "Warm" Water. (see Plan 4^b.)

klóbak (council): Ngaragomíl

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):
I	a Remád lëgalíd ⁹⁸ ra kí	a Ki
II	" " ra gomekáng	Gomekáng +
III	" " ra dmír	a Dmír
IV	Ngiragongěrung	Gongěrung +
V	Ngirabilál	Bilál +
VI	nr.

Further blai: a Ivelekáng, a Medéu, a Tegeiběáng, Ngaramersáng.

3. Galáp

CANTOVA: Yalap, SEM. Rallap, KUB: Galáp, v.M.M: Akalak, next to Ngabúkěd it is the most important place of Ngarárd. The situation has been acknowledged in the description of the landscape p. 47.

Description of the place: (Plan 4^b) Both bai l pelú, called Bai ra Galáp, are situated centrally and at the highest elevation (about 18 m); a ring of a stone path surrounds them . They are placed on a big and beautiful stone pavement, east A. Gosobulngáu⁹⁹, and west B. Bilekélěk. Concerning the legend-stones here see below at history. A short wide path connects the stone rectangle with the southern road, from where you have a nice view over the beach of a Ulimáng in the south. After you crossed the wide trailhead Ngaragúsěm, near bai F. a Róro that is standing here like a vantage point, you have stepped out from these stupendous trees into the sunny grassland where the road leads as mentioned to the west, to Ngabúkěd. But the main road bends to the east with a sharp corner to SE, after a connecting trail has forked off to the lower laying ring trail in the north. Blai 19 Bedél and the land Ngaremongelóng (Ngurúlemuóng? see story 14 and 15 and below p. 59) are situated in this corner. Opposite a little bit further in the south, on the east side of the road, is bai

C. Ngarapesóng. From the stone pavement, situated about 16 m high, you have an overview over the east coast. On the front side of the bai, on the spot Kaláelbad a stone path leads right down to the beach.

Plan 4^b

Before we climb down I want to mention briefly that the main stone path, following the ridge, ends after a mere 200 m with the trailhead Ngëdás. There on the flank looking over the sea stood in former times the house of the Spanish missionary.

If you climb down the just mentioned stone path, which forks to the east at Bai Ngarepesóng, there is a landing pier with the same name. About half way down, near blai 14 Teregësí, is a stepping stone on the seaward side. It has two holes the size of a thumb, madál geirógër "Eye of the Fishhook", which are considered the crucial points of the of a Tmēlógōd's fishhook, with whose help the land Ngēdíp was said to have been drawn out from the depth of the sea (story 14). As soon as you reach the flat land below, you will find bai D. a Ubāi to your right where we lived several times. Some steps towards the sea is the stone trailhead Ptelúl a gar āubai. Coconut palms stand on the small sandy stretch of beach. On the beach itself a fishing house stands on an imposing stone construction and right next to it is the stone pier Ngarapesóng, about 240 m long and reaching almost to the edge of the beach-reef (where a Tmēlógōd was fishing). Only at the lower end of the sandy beach the pier has the typical passageway, berípěēr. Near to the stone pier was the stone path a Ililāu and nearby the hole blil a desiu "House of the Earthquake" where the devil Galápúp disappeared (story 46). The land a Ivēgēbēbúng must also be situated here, where the gamáng-crab of Galáp lost its legs (story 182) and the sandy patch that represents the lost roof of the house with the stone pillars (story 5).

In former times a boathouse was standing north of the fishermen's house. In 1907 only a few posts were left. A mere 100 m inland from this spot is another ptelúl a gang with the name a Ikildēbáng and right next to it is bai E. Kauderáel at the end of the northern ring path that only down here, on the beach, was not completed for a stretch of 200 m. This northern path leads through a small ravine all the way to the bathing spot next to a spring; you can also get here by a steep and short stone path from the village houses.

The northern trail mounts more from this bathing place and bending it reaches the southern main path in the village part Ngēri¹⁰⁰.

In terms of industry Galáp is known for its pottery.

Privileges: catching and selling dugong, dipping the wooden gorovídel-wooden ornaments during the ruk-dance in a Irai just like Ngátpang and Goréör. (KUB. II p. 110).

History: The meaning of the name is unknown. Galáp belongs to the oldest and most important places in Pelau; it is also a child of the bamboo (story 15). It even takes pride to be older than Ngabúkēd, as can be deduced from story 14, where a lot is said about Galáp. It has already been mentioned that CANTOVA heard from his Carolinians about Yaláp even before Palau was discovered, as has already been mentioned above at the history of the district Ngarárd. In former times this name also belonged to the village. It is thus explained:

Near both rubak-bai there is a stone, called Ngarárdbad "Stone of Ngarárd". It came from Gobagádrūāu in Ngabúkēd (see there). She heard working in the east and sent her son Teruāu in order to learn what was happening there. He found seven galid engaged to raise the land between the sea and Ngabúkēd higher; Teruāu, following the order of his mother, told them to restore the village, but they wanted to finish first in the east and only then would consider helping.

Thus they helped to build the stone paths of Ngagbúkěd and Gobagád gave them Ngarádbad and gave the place the name Ngarárd. The stone had the characteristic to provided strength and courage to the men who washed it. The 7 galíd did not want to owe anything and gave two stones, Gelíd and Goldíl to Gobagád; washing them would bring a boat, filled with money, coming from the island Ngorót (story 9). The woman took them with the following words: "Good! Strength is more suitable for men and money is more suitable for women! —

There are four additional legend-stones on the large galdúkl-pavement of Galáp; all of them are connected with story 14: 1. the seat of Merú pélau (Figure 20), 2. the stone pot Ngurúlemuóng¹⁰¹, the palm cutter of Ugéraroisáng, similar to the kles of Ngabúkěd (Figure 17). 3. an upright standing stone with a face on it, which helped Gobagád ra Tegēiebai¹⁰², who helped Tmēlógöd, the son of both, with the help of magic, 4. the fishing line of Tmēlógöd, Ogúl pélau.

Figure 20. The stone seat of Merúpélau

The two holes, where the fishing hook caught on, have already been mentioned above on p. 57. With his fishing Tmēlógöd completed the high land where Galáp is situated (see also story 15). But his father Ugéraroisáng is one of the forms of galíd Medegēipélau, who was already mentioned above at Ngabiúl and Gólei (see story 197). There, as well as in a Gól (see there) he had blai nr. I, in Galáp also aIbedagál, one of the rich houses of Ngáruangěl (story 20 and a Rois distr. V). KUB. VI p. 31 mentions Molób as the male galíd for Galáp, at another occasion he says this is just another title for Ugér a roisáng. In reality rubak nr. VI is called Molóp. What he has to do with Ugér a roisáng, I do not know. KUB. mentions Arméng as a female galíd, which is a Reméng, the family god of blai nr. I a Idíd on Goréör (see p. 52, footnote 2).

Concerning the history I still have to mention that rubak nr. I Gēsēbēi was the destroyer of Ngarekekla^u, because aUgélkeklau had seduced his wife (see story 8).

Concerning the destruction of Galáp by Ngabúkěd see there. Concerning the infestation by the Spanish warship VILLALOBOS see above p. 56, footnote 2.

Constitution of Galáp.

bai l pelú (village house): Bai ra Galáp

A. Gosobulngāu

galíd (god): Ugér a roisáng

B. Bilekélěk

klóbak (council): Ngaragaláp

Female council: arIebíl

nr:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang	ardil (women):
I	Gësëbeî aibedagáng	Bedagáng (a Ibedagál)+	I	Gëbi ra tegëiebai
II	a Rdar raíterír	a Iterír +	to II	Gëbil ra meróng
III	Ngiraróis	a Róis +	II	nr. III
IV	a Rdar rabáng	a Báng	to II	" IV
V	Gësëbeî ra kedúng	Kedúng	" I	" V
VI	Molóp	Ngerkúi	" II	" VI
VII	a Ruáng	Geióel +	" I	" VII
VIII	Godáol	Ngërũmensengáng +	" II	" VIII
IX	a Tkóiel	Ngarkëvúng +	" I	" IX
X	Gësëberkmeî	Ngerkmeî +	" I	" X

Nr. I Gësëbeî was also nr. V Ngiraurekëd in Ngabiúl; nr. II a Rdáng lived in blai a Iveî, nr. III Ngiraróis holds all the power in his hands.

uríul rubak (secondary chiefs): Mangal´láng (name of the council)

11. Rilngúgël.

12. Mad rakláí.

13. Ngiraturúl.

14. Madrangeáng .

15. etc.

Further blai:

11. Telegedeî.

18. a Idesóu.

12 Ngaruerdú.

19. Bedél.

13. a Idók .

20. a Uldúier.

14. Teregësip.

21. Dipëké¹⁰³.

15. Ngarpúl.

22 Kodëlí.

16. Ngaruâu

23. Ngätmiróng.

17. a Siau

nr.:	gáldebegël (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):
♂
♀		(former boy's bai l dort)
I	Ngarasere bekál
II	Ngaragomsau
♂
I	Ngaramedëdekódek	E. Kauderáel	Ngerĩl
II	Ngaratúiëg	F. a Róro

♀
I	Ngarabebelés
II	Ngaremaiberél

//61//

Ngësáng.

(KUB. Ngësáng).

Description of the place: (Plan 4b) When you reached the grassy path coming from the southern trailhead Ngëdás, from Galáp, you will arrive after another 50 steps at another trailhead. From here a stone path leads south south east to the height, then after 300 m it bends to the south and leads gradually down the hill to the beach that is about 400 m distant. There on the trailhead still stands the only bai Ugul a mí. In the east is the steep point Pkul a Ngësáng, in the west a sandy beach that stretches all the way to Ulimáng.

History: Story 71 about the body bundle takes place here, see story 16 about a Ugelsúng, then story 204 about Ugélregulsiáng, who killed a Rgamagád of Ngësáng; further story 54 about the birds of Ngarák with the proverb, then story 56. Finally story 50 about Ngarebóděł on Goréör, his people took the right to place a leaf in front of the spring there: then women were only allowed to fetch water when rub. I has bought the permission from the foreigners for one madál a kluk. Compare Ngéong-Ngabúkěd.

Constitution.

bai l pelú (village house): Ngaramesepelú.

galíd (god): KUB. Adam le Kalid (see Keklau: a Dam l galíd ♀).

klóbak (council): Ngaramesepelú.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Guó ra skësáng	Skësáng	Gëbiraskësáng
II	Regëvúi	a Ingás	Gëbirakesemiól
III	Gádlbai ra oáng	a Oáng	—
IV	Gádlbai ra këvúng	Ngarekëvúng	—
V	Rëgeikíděł	a Isumageráng	—
VI	a Rëgělápěd	a Idebelúng	—
VII	a Rëgësepëságěl	Baikerëóng	—

In 1910 only two blai were still standing, the names of which I do not know.

5. *a*Ulimáng or Ulimáol

(SEMP. Aulima, KUB. Aulimáol).

Description of the place: (Plan 4c) Its situation has been discussed above (p. 46). A boathouse is situated under tall Casuarinas on the sandy beach of the bay of Ngësáng. When you hike inland from there to the west, you will soon reach a trailhead and the stone path leads inland. It is beautifully designed and well shaded. After a mere 150 m another stone path forks off to the south,

//62//

leading without any shade 400 m through taro patches to Ngarepkeĩ¹, which was considered a bital pelú ("Side of the Village") of a Ulimáng. The main path continues among magnificent trees between bai D a Gúr and bai F Mogó1, similar to bai E and F in Ngabúkěd. The road continues another 100 m in the same direction, then it ends suddenly and a strong stream passes its NW corner. Therefore the stone path starts anew on the northern side of the stream and continues on its left bank for 200 m while 3blai are situated on the right bank of the stream. At one point, about 110 m from its beginning, the road forms an ilíud-pavement on the border of the stream, a beautiful place for the chiefs. At the end of the 200 m the trail suddenly bends to the south and a splendid stone plate bridges the stream, which is caught narrowly at this place (see plate 5¹⁰⁴.) The main path follows the eastern side of the stone quad of the village houses Bai ra ulimáng, of which only B. Bilekélěk still stands. But the stream, coming from a wooded ravine, which is cut into the northeastern embankment of the Ingáng mountain, Rois ingáng, flows down its steeply built northern side. Starting from the village house the stone path follows for about 300 m the right bank of the stream out of the ravine.

I still have to mention that a stone path leads from the bridge to the north, ending after about 200 m. When you continue hiking from here you will reach Ngaramedēĩ in 5 minutes and in another 5 minutes the southern trailhead of Ngabúkěd (see there).

Privileges: During a ruk in Melekéiok the young people from Ulimáng sit higher and a woman of blai nr. I Uděs sits with them. At this event Ngirairúng, rubak nr. V of Ulimáng, receives a piece of money. Melekéiok also provides bai girls (KUB. II p. 121).

History: The place is a child of the bamboo, just like Galáp and Mangal'láng (story 15.) A taro patch called Ngerí (compare also the village part in Galáp) is mentioned in story 8, just like the place on Yap that a Ugélkeklāu visited. Probably its people had settlers from there. Galíd Godálmelég from Melekéiok is at home in Ulimáng (see Melekéiok). RUB. nr. I Bagés also has a part in story 113 where he helped to destroy a Uluáng, further in the one about Ngirameredáng (see Ngarsúl).

Constitution of Ulimáng.

bai l pelú (village house): Bai ra ulimang. A. Gosobulngāu + B. Bilekélěk galíd (god): Daidekerél armeāu (people): Madadengil.

klóbak (council): Ngaraulimáng

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	ardil (women):
I	Bagés	Gotóng	I	Gëbil
II	a Imrúr	a Ngěáng	II	Dirailoláng
III	Ngiragâu	Ngáragâu	to I	Diragâu
IV	Gërapelú	a Iloáng +	" II	Dirabáng
V	Ngirairúng	a Irúng +	" I	Dirairúng
VI	Ngiruëdíl	Ngaruëdíl +	" I	Diruëdíl
VII	Ngiraidpáng	a Idpáng +	" I	Diradpáng
VIII	a Igár madlsár	Ngaramadlsár +	" II	Dira madlsár
IX	a Remde gësúg	Rekóng	" II	Dirarekóng
X	a Igár garamál	Garamál	" I	Diragaramál

The following small villages are situated south of Ulimáng behind the mangrove-beach; in 1910 they were nearly all deserted:

further blai: 11. Gotóng 12. Galebáed 13. a Ulogotóng 14. Ngaragătáog 15.

Ngarangaláng, 16. a Igúi 17. Melengés 18. Dép 19. Kesáng.

nr.:	gáldebegël (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaregareál	C Gamaráeg +	a Gúr	right
I ♀	ar Beóug		"
II ♀	Ngarabungt		"
I ♂	Ngaragomóg	E Mangeremóng+	Mogól	left
II ♂	¹⁰⁵ Ngaratatiróu	F Mogól	"
I ♀	ar Melemótotm		"
II ♀	Ngaraúlog		"

6. Ngarepkeî, which has already been mentioned as bital pelú at Ulimang. As there has been a special rubak-bai it seems to have had a certain independence. A stone path leading to the bai on the summit is still visible today. (Plan 4^c) in 1907 there was only 1 blai there. An avenue lined with beautiful madidúu-trees. Ngarepkeî is a child of *a*Guáp (story 2) and this can be noticed in story 80 of Mad ra klâi, who killed his lover from Ngarepkeî due to his clumsiness. Therefore, all the children pursued him.

7. Ngaramelîl.

(SENFFT: Ngarakamalil) 1 km to the south of Ngarepkeî. There is a stone path. In 1910, there were still 2 blai and one kldókbai in bad shape. A tree with an imposing vine, raphidophora (toilálag) stood there.

8. Ngaradermáng.

(SENFFT: Ngaratarameng) a creation of poverty (story 3). A few minutes to the south of Ngaramelíl, separated by grassland (hill Ngaralgarëróng inland). In former times, it seems to have been big, because a wide stone path leads through the village. On the southern trailhead there is another kldokbai. In 1910, there were still 5 blai along the road, among them one new one, Ngaragatamél, Moséselil, a Ibedagáng, a Bersēi, and Gogatáel. rubak nr. I was a Ragarameróng with blai Keselblai +, rubak nr. II was Ngiragatamél with blai Ngerterír, see story 55.

Plan 4^c.

Ngaragobatáng.

A beautiful stone path. The northern trailhead with splendid gerságēl-trees is only 5 minutes from Ngaradermáng. The village was nearly 1 km long. In the middle of it the stone quad of bai l pelú can still be seen, nearby a piece of a column is standing. It is made of stone and about 1 m in diameter, (see Desongóng). In 1910, there were still 3 blai. In story 13 about Gorágēl rubak nr. I a Rēmēsēgāu is mentioned and a channel Ngaramadlsár. Further see story 63 about the squid and its grave there. Story 75 of Ngrangeáng .

10. Ulangaràng.

10 minutes south of Ngaragobatáng and 15 from Keklāu. In 1910, there was still 1 blai Gollang. a Rāklāi of Melekéiok settled here the women and children of the destroyed Ngardolólók (story 161.)

11. Keklaū or Ngkeklau

(SEMP.: Kaslau, KUB.: Kekláu, v.M.M: Kakalau, SENFFT: Angkaklau) the Palauans also pronounce it Keh-lau, or even Kechlau. You can even hear Kedlau, indicating the foreignness of this name (see history).

Description of the place (Plan 5): The setting of the village is most unusual, because both village parts, Keklaū in the north and Bital pelú in the south are separated from another by a 30 m high hill, connected by a stone path leading over it. On the summit there is an ailiud stone pavement, which had a reputation for being a place of asylum (sobaláng). The bai l pelú never stood up there, but in the middle of the northern part at about a height of 10 m. In 1910, only A. Gosobulngāu was still standing of Bai ra lei¹⁰⁶; Bilekélĕk had long fallen into ruin. Right behind it is the artistically constructed bathing place, on a remarkable stone construction, because in the north the land is facing the bed of a rivulet. There is the club-bai E Barkóu, while on the nearby beach below bai D Ugeláol and F a Rbil(kldokbai) and a boathouse are located next to each other. Next to them, in the shadow of tall trees, a big and beautiful stone terrace is presented. This is probably the "Lower Land" ióu l pelú, also called Kélebis (see Ngivál).

Plan 5.

Figure 21. Legend stones at bai Ngaramesíkt in Keklaū

People here had been chased away from the land Ngamēāu by a Ugélkeklau (see story 9). Here al so seems to have been the river (berípēr) Garigūl from where the galid first looked over the land. According to KUB. VII p. 26 the name of a landing place Ongolúul is supposed to have come from the Matelotas-Islands (Ngulú). Just like the stone path that leads from a landing place, with no mangroves, to the bai l pelú, it leads from here to the west, mounting to the trailhead Garagesúg, from where you step on the grassland in front of the arresting sight, the above, p. 46, mentioned rectangular hill Ngarapngēi. Strangely enough, the southern part Bital pelú also has a rubak-bai B Ngaramesíkt, which also gave its name to the council of the chiefs so that it seems as if two formerly independent villages have slowly been united by contract. Some legend stones are located at this beautiful and solitary bai, which is situated in the countryside (Figure 21), one triangular sail ěárs and next to it a gorákl-mast, which a Ugélkeklau brought with him from the east. Nearby there are two stones with faces klism, and one in form of an owl gesúg. The relationship to Medegēi pélaus is recognizable. Quite probably the power of the southern village part has been caused by the once powerful priest, whose strange two-story house¹⁰⁷ a Jegól (see nr. 24 on plan 5 and Figure 22) is situated at the end of the main stone path at the waterfront's huge stone pavement.

Figure 22. The 2 story galid-house a Jegól in Keklaū (see plan bl. 24).

It is quite strange that this galid-house is connected by a specially built stone path of about 700 m length with the landing place of the northern part. It has its own boat-harbor between two piers, a construction work that would be befitting for a count.

Industry: Catching sharks, see also KUB. VII p. 128 and story 172. Catching and selling dugong.

Privilege to take away necklaces in Ngardolólók, therefore they blow the conch shell before their arrival (see story 8). This can be explained by the fact that the Keklaū -people came from there. The same is the case with a Ngeaur (story 172). People from Ngēbūrēg, which belongs to Melekéiok, also come from Ngardolólók. Therefore both villages have a deep friendship and the relationship remains even when Melekéiok was warring with Keklāu, which was the case in 1870 (see Kub. II p. 117). The right for asylum is here, see above p. 65.

History: The name came from the east: god a Ugél keklaŭ the "First of Keklā u" brought it. Probably Keklau is the same as Adjāu, which means "Rock". By this name, people from Truk call the high island of Kusáe in the east, the Matáng rengós, the "Fork in the East" of the Palauans. A stream of people poured from Kusáe to the west, and numerous islands received settlers. Those on Yap called their place Kédjelau; Kesílang, Kepélau, meaning "People from China, from Pelau", thus Keklau probably means "People from Kusae". Kubary's account that people from Keklau had come from Yap via "Ardolók on Ngeaur" is thus not entirely correct, but can be explained from story 8 about a Ugelkeklaŭ. Before a Ugelkeklaŭ's arrival, the village god is supposed to have had the name a Ugél madál, after his favorite shark madál. The female demon of the village is called Damlëgalíd.¹⁰⁸ Ngaruëléu was the galíd-house of Ugélmadál. People were not allowed to pass this house early or late in the day, because otherwise its shadow would fall on them, which was deadly. At midday, it was not allowed to collect fire wood or to make any noise, otherwise the floor of the house would turn into green water in which the shark was swimming around (compare story 197 of Medegeipélau).

Rubak nr. IV a Ilamúr was the last priest. The title comes from Ngarekeklaŭ (see story). He built himself a galíd-house on the summit at the ilúd-pavement Lut (see plan 5). When it was built his god told him: Tomorrow there will be a ruk on ked Delóbok re kesāu!¹⁰⁹ — In reality some warriors went there too, but three men were lying in ambush, who were shooting after which the enemies fled. Keklāu was considered strong, powerful and independent, therefore the places Melekéiok, Ngivál and Nggësár decided to destroy the place (at around 1870). One night they hid in a nearby wood and in the morning when there was a feast in the village they stormed it and killed whomever they met, burning down the houses. The rest of the inhabitants fled to Ngardmaŭ. Since that time Keklāu is affiliated with Ngarárd.

Just like Gólei, Keklāu was famous as a galíd-place. Besides the above mentioned one there was also a house of a priest on the nearby sky-mountain Ngulítël (see above p. 46), which was part of its fame. Story 66 gives proof of this.

SEMP. II p. 157 connects the king of Kreiangel with a man from Kaslau! Concerning other tales see stories 65, 67, 68, 69, 70 and 182 (hole in the sea Ngápsang, compare p. 46). Once, blai nr. I Terékëd belonged to the richest houses in Pelāu (see story 9). In former times rubak nr. I is supposed to have been a Regabál until Dir'runḡlbai saw the "Tall Chief" and shouted admiringly: klóu lúbak!

Concerning the family relations of Keklāu with a Idíd on Goréör see there At. 5 and story 20 of Ngáruanegël; Kloulúbak took in Bílung, when she had fled, into blai Morisóng in Keklāu.

Constitution of Keklāu bai l pelú (village house): Bai raleĩ

A. Gosobulngāu

galíd (god): a Ugélkeklāu

A. Bilekélĕk +

klóbak (council): Ngaramesíkt female council: ar Událebil

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	kleblil (clan):	ardil (women):
I	Kloulúbak	a Terékĕd	Bilaurós	Bagékdil
II	Gádlbai	a Ngledēĩ +	a Ilúkl	Skeúkl
III	Galidĕgĕsóng	a Ksíd	a Ugelióu	a Ugelióu
IV	a Ilamúr	Turágĕl	Gadaruĕgĕl	a Díl
V	a Tkóiel	a Galúiĕp +	to I	nr. V
VI	a Rdúi ra dngér	a Dngér +	" III	" VI
VII	a Rdúi ra gemaudíms	Gemaudíms +	" IV	" VII
VIII	Mad ra galúiĕp	Geroség +	" I	" VIII
IX	a Iluāĩl dúi	Ngarageiép +	" II	" IX
X	Rutogerár	Gosisiáng	" II	" X

further blai: 11. Gótĕut 12. Ngolut 13. Meráp 14. Dokemór 15. Gomtilóu 16. Ngareblekú 17. a Irisóng 18. Tagarakl 19. a Ideldóng 20. Ngaruĕlēügĕl 21. Babĕáp 22. Sadidei (Galidĕgĕsóng) 23. a Jegól (galid-house, 2 storys.)

nr.:	gáldebegĕl (club):	bai (club-house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngarabiskáng	C Gamereĩ +	Gamereĩ	Right
II ♂	Ngaralápek	D Ugeláol
I ♀	Ngaragamáiong
II ♀	Ngaraberálm
I ♂	Ngaragadéng	E Barkóu	a Pdóng	Left
II ♂	Ngarakamíng	F a Rbíl (klodokbai)
I ♀	Ngara uāu
II ♀	Ngaramongĕrógĕr

Further landing places: Ongolúul (see above p. 65) and a Jás (story 73).

South of Keklāu were three deserted villages, which belonged to Ngarárd or have been left a long time ago. I did not visit them myself.

12. Ngaradepsú + situated on a mangrove bay at the foot of the mountain Ngelúkēs. (see Figure 48 in -Vol I. p. 241)

13. a Idelúi +. Situated at the same place.

14. Táog + mentioned at Rēgēkéd, story 51.

Deserted places on the west coast, from south to north:

The first five ones are summed up under the name Gēseibitáng.

15. Klóultáog + "Big Channel", at the corner of the big bay of Ngardmāu. In 1910, there stood still stood one blai at the waterfront; it belonged to Rdiál of Keklāu, nearby a taro patch and a stream. See story 61 about Ngira koultáog and 62 about the giant Medúg.

16. Ngarakēsang + barely $\frac{1}{2}$ km from Klóul táog. There is still a beautiful pavement of the rubak-bai.

17. Desóngong + the place of Gobagád (see story 58). When you walk from Ngarakēsang for 10 minutes along the stream through the forrest, mounting slowly, you reach some old stone paths. After 10 more minutes you have arrived on the top. On a gólbed-pavement is a stone column which is supposed to have come from the Gobagád's children (see Ngaregobatáng). There is still a beautiful stone construction of bai l pelú Ngarekaiangáng, next to it is an ilíud for newly titled rubak and one for the armeāu (Figure 23).

galdúkl for the village house
 a ilíud for the people a ilíud for the rubak
 Figure 23. The stone pavements in Desóngong +

18. Ngarateluáng + north of Ngarakësáng, on the coast.

19. Ngartúkūr + north of Ngareteluáng; it is also considered to be part of distr. III. Once an often mentioned place, independent and big, consisting of two parts: Ugulagáng and Ngaramagalúg. The place has been destroyed by rubak of Ngaregobatáng's ill-wishing, see story 73 Ngeül Ngartúkūr. See also story 75 of Ngirangeáng and story 72. Ngaregók1, the water of life, is supposed to be here. It flows from Pelú ra díak lămád (see story 100). Rubak Uromákl of story 161 comes from here.

20. aUrúng + on the entrance to the channel of Ngabúkěd, see Figure 16.

21. Ngatagëróng + (Kub. I p. 34 Ngatgogorou) on the southern coast of the channel of Ngabúkěd. Home of Madlútk (story 203). In order to save the place from destruction he climbed with his wife into heaven. KUB. I p. 15 says: "I saw a small rock, half buried in the ground, which is supposed to have fallen down from the sky. It is called Adolutk, and is supposed to have been a man who went up to heaven. It is a pictorial presentation of the weather and remains protected and untouched at its place, as otherwise Ngarbúkut would be devastated by rain and storm." —

22. Ngaskerás + (Ngeski) also nearby a Urúng.

23. Ngúrang¹¹⁰ + situated at the foot of Pěbul Ngúrang, north of Ngabúkěd, see above p. 10.

24. Ngarenggóng or Ngarenggóiēs + on the west coast, north of a Urúng. The cripple Pelúai, who tricked the giant Medúg of Kloultáog, came from here (story 62.)

25. Ngarietět + with the landing place in bay Ptilërúng. Merúpélau lived here (see Nagbúkěd and Galáp) with rubak nr. I Bangai.

26. Ngarblūd + on the narrowest spot of the peninsula, see above p. 10. Ngarblūd was the name of the klóbak (council). RUB. nr. I a Regamáng in blai Ngarablóng, RUB. nr. II a Regamáng ai vengriüer in blai a Róis. I heard that at the time when SEMPER was in Palau (1862), there were still some blai here. People moved to a Gol. An overgrown stone path can still be seen. Trailhead north: Pkáu, east: Golubül.

27. Ngaramedáng + north of point Goragidáp.

28. Ngarapeláng +.

29. Kélebid + see Kélebis in Kekláu and Ngivál.

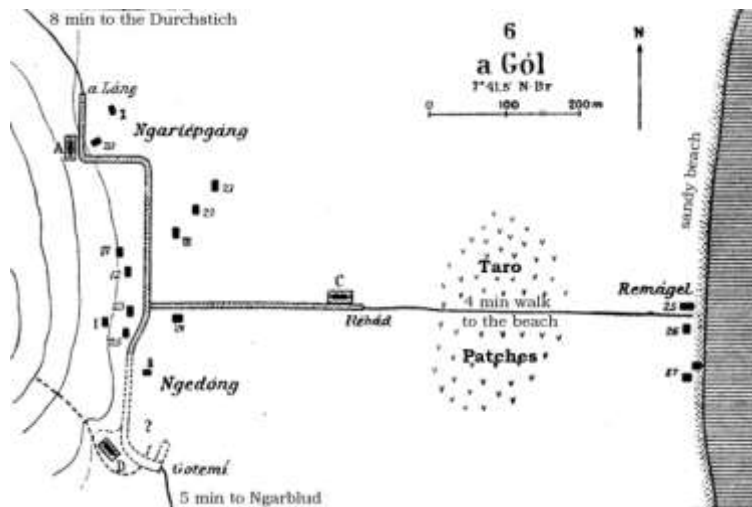

30. Górabag + ? see above p. 13. Maybe this was also a settlement.

31. Utáoër + inland north of a Gól. Now a grassland at Delóbok a gól. Story 52 takes place here.

32. a Gól

(SEMP: Roll, KUB. Gól.) has two parts: the northern part Ngariépgáng, the southern part Ngédóng¹¹¹.

Description of the place (Plan 6): As already related in the description of the district, the village lies on the eastern coast, at the foot of the hills, separated from the sandy beach that is formed by the narrow beach-reef by a brackish water lagoon. This lagoon is more than $\frac{1}{2}$ a km wide and studded with taro patches. When you walk to the west from the landing place Remágěl, where two houses are situated, as well as a boathouse and a kldok-bai with the same name, the path is severely flooded, especially when it rains.

Plan 6.

Only after 4 minutes you reach the trailhead Belëbád, where bai E Belëbád is situated. Only then you walk safely on the stone path, which is 250 m long and reaches the main path leading to the north and the south.

bai l pelú A. Dögödúi lies in the northern part, a little elevated, at the edge of the forrest, on a right angle corner of the stone path. Not far from it is the northern stone trailhead Ptelúl a gáng ra lang. The northern part Ngariépgang seems to have been independent in former times. Bai D Mediderík lies in the southern part Ngédong, which I visited only briefly in 1907, without mapping it in detail. It is located on the hill from where the path forks to Ngarblūd. In case my memory is correct then blai E a Irebái (a Idetráng?) was also situated therewith an upper and a lower bathing place. The following trailheads were mentioned to me: Belëbád in the east, Mediderík further east, Ngëregóng in the west, a Lang in the north, Gotemí in the south.

Industry: pottery.

History: The place is a creation of poverty (story 3). People from Ngáruangěl (story 20) came here to blai Gongolákl, which belongs to the clan (keblil) of a Idíd on Goréör (see there bl. I and Ngabúkěd p. 52). In story 8 Ulengërvál'l is mentioned, which is supposed to be situated nearby a Gól.

The galíd of a Gol with the name Ngiragomëkūl is one of the forms of Medegē ipélau (see Galáp, Ngabiúl, Gólei); therefore rubak nr. I is at the same time also the priest.

Constitution of a Gól.

bai l pelú (village house): Dögödúi (A) galíd (god): Ngiragomëkūl¹¹² (see blai I) klóbak (council): Ngara dögödúi female council: ar Udalebil

nr.:	arubak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Gosep re gomëkūl	Gomëkūl	Godálebil regomëkul
II	Ngirameketí	Meketí	" rameketí
III	Ngira tangadík	Tangadík	etc.
IV	Ngirageseberés	Geseberés
V	Ngiraitáog	a Itáog +
VI	a Tekríu	Gongióng +
VII	Bukuróu	a Gasél + (Ngkebúr +)
VIII	Getkóng	Ngermiëg +
IX	Ngiramiëg	" +
X	a Smau	Medëdëngál

In 1910 one man held title VIII and IX. Ngkebúr acts now for blai VII. Ngirameketí II was obviously wealthy, as he appears as a money-lender in story 13 of Gorágël.

nr.:	uriúl rubak (secondary chiefs):	blai (house):	further blai :
11	a Imesēi	Galsau
12	a Iklúk	a Ilták
13	a Geikerekéd	a Idís
14	Ngauákl	Ngaremangángëd
15	a Itungëlí	a Iláp
16	a Ilemasáng	to nr. VI
17	a Geiöl	(Ngarsmei in a Iebúkūl)
18	a Ugér' re ngós	Kiremói	Gokéáng
19	Ngirangarabád	(Medëdëngál)	a Imedú
20	—	Kaoáng	a Ivëlekáng
21	—	Ptelulagáng	Ngaremelóng
22	—	a Urúr	Dai
23	—	Idíkl	Madëgól

24	—	Bitalagáng	a Imetúkūr
25	—	Bitalidíkil	Ptiladióng
26	—	Remágēl (kldók bai)	Dort
27	—	Dudíu	Ngareblóng

//73//

Nr.:	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaragolúkl	B. a Mesekíu +	Belēbád	Right
II ♂	Ngarabiteláol	C. Belēbád
I ♀	Ngarangíměg
II ♀	Ngarablegóiel
I ♂	Ngarameliveî	D. Mediderík	Mediderík	Left
II ♂	Ngarapelilióu	E. a Irēbāi
I ♀	Ngarabakungór
II ♀	Ngaramangesókēs

District III. Gongodogūl¹¹³.

3 villages and 14 uninhabited ones¹¹⁴.

klól pelú (mainvillage): Ngardmāu (consists of 3 villages);

rubukúl (its chief): Beóug;

galíd (god): Ngiramerēdáng;

armeāu (people): ar Uelsél

Geography.

When you look from the already mentioned mountain Ngamedú (district I and II) to the W, you see point Pkul a dúdēs in S 74° W (see plan 3 j 37' 30"). From this point the mangrove coast runs toward the east and with the west coast of Ngarárd together it forms a big open bay, which I called the 'Bay of Ngardmāu'. Along this mangrove coastline lies a low hill Magírong where on its western end the main village Ngardmāu is situated. South of Pkul a dúdēs is another bay that is bordered on its southern end by Pkul a galíd¹¹⁵, the W point of the Goriúl mountain chain, as has been mentioned in Vol. I, p. 188. Between both ranges of hills, in the western part of the island, the district Gongodogūl is situated. Once it was densely populated, though today it is only settled in the northwestern part. The whole territory is hilly and is crossed by the small river *a*Did, which sluggishly creeps 4 km inland. It is embedded 2-3 m deep into the loamy soil of the jungle in such a steep way that a passage without too many complications is only possible in a few places. Where the stream comes from a certain height in the south and enters with a strong drop near to

Vol.

//Krämer Palau, Vol. 2, Plate 5//.

District Ngarárd —

1. Rubak-bai in a Ulimáng

3. Eestern gable of a Ikrebai with trail head Galsau in

District Gongodogul

2. Bai a Ilulk with its stonepath befoer the drop to thenorth in Ngëruói.

4. Blai nr. VII Meltált with cooking house, in Ngatpúieg.

the knee, a small river comes from the north. Quite near to its mouth it forms the beautiful waterfall Madál a iegád¹¹⁶. Upriver, from the knee to the south, the main river forms a wild stream about 25 m wide, called a Iveltáng, where once upon a time the fight between Ngardmau and Ngivál took place (story 73). The rocky road has been cut out of the jungle just like an aisle. During my visit in June 1907 the water gushed down, only a few meters wide, on the eastern side in small cascades, whereas the whole wide western side was dry, hot and dark naked rock. Nearby the flowing water stood an island like piece of rock with some shrubs and a grass-tree on it. From this bed you mount towards the west in a narrow side channel studded with trees to the 140 m high Badagadéng "Stone of the Shark"¹¹⁷. The top is treeless and offers a magnificent view. You reach this hill directly from the ford of the river a Did on the southern end of the village, crossing a grassland like hill following the trail to Melekéiok and then the one to Ngivál.

On the way from the waterfall to the village lies a rock with a grotto Ngaduogěróng¹¹⁸, which is also called blai of Ngirangameúsog (blai Ngerugěróng in story 207). The cave is supposed to be divided into a front and back chamber by a wall that reaches into the water on the floor.

History.

Concerning the history etc. see the main village Ngardmau and story 8 about a Ugélkeklau, who visited these villages with his people. Then story 75 about Delép ra Iletemú and story 76 about Ngiragosisáng. Around 1860 only a few houses seem to have been standing in some of the uninhabited places.

1. Ngardmau.¹¹⁹ (Plan 5.)

MCCLUER: Arathmow, KUB: Ratmau and Radman; SEMP: Kaslan, Kasmau and Arsmaw; v.M.M: Aretmau; COELLOIII: Arazmau.

Inhabitants 1. 1. 1911 = 350, probably also including district V (see there).

Description of the place (Plan 7): Consists of the three parts Gurdmau, Ngërutói, and Ngatpúiëg, situated on the NW corner of the body of Babeldáob, near to point Pkul a dúdēs. A range of hills, called mountain Magírong, leads there following the northern coast that forms on the northwestern part the highest elevation the 40 m high hill Bekăĕi¹²⁰. In former times there was a place of worship of the village god Ngirarnerďáng, and this is the reason why blai nr. I Ngirakebăi stood there ; its rubak Beóug rekebăi was the priest of the village and the title -holding woman of the house the priestess (mlagei)¹²¹. In 1910 the place of another blai was all the way at the top; without any doubt it also served as a place of worship. On the southeastern tip of the hill, on the ridge of the mountain, near to the imposing trailhead Galsău¹²² (see figure 5³), bai G a Ikrěbăi is situated, from where you have a stupendous view to the north. Quite nearby is a big stone quad for the village houses Bai 1 gurdmáng. In 1910 bai A. Gosobulngău and B. Bilekélěk were still standing. The stone construction raises high on the southern corner, where the hill drops. On the NW edge near bai G. is a stone quad with 2 stone tables and back rests, called Kitut and Tertordovăi, for rubak nr. I and nr. II. They are quite remarkable in the dark of the rich foliage (Figure 24).

Figure 24. Stone seats at the eastern gable of bai G. a Ikrěbăi in Gurdmaŭ; in the north of the western point Pkulaipelaŭ in Nagregolóng.

The stone path on the southern slope of the Bekăĕi-Hill connects the western Ngërutói with the main place Gurdma^u, where two stone paths fork to the south, the eastern one from the just mentioned village houses, under the southern high stone construction. The western one passes blai nr. II Ngedengól (Figure 25) which represents the governing authority and where in 1910 the paralyzed Beóug was living. Below both trails meet again shortly before a peculiarly built bathing place (díong), which is quite near to blai Ikéam, hence its name Dío ra ikéam (see Figure 26). Two low, wide walls are standing here at the end of the hill in an perpendicular position to the stone path. They form a 2 m wide lane between them, where a spring flows to the west into the taro patches. Without any doubt there must have been a bathing place here. But in 1910 there were small taro plants on the bottom of this lane. Stone backs are erected on the walls for people taking a rest and having a chat here next to the spring. A stone quad a little bit to the south shows this quite clearly. Further south, passing the club house C. Ngaragalidó, the path that is now leveled leads 450 m to the river a Did. There, next to the triangular trailhead with its many trees club-bai D. Mangëkóng in the east and E. Kamángëlbai in the west are standing. The last one stands on a big stone platform along the bank of the 3—4 m wide river.

Figure 25. Blai nr. II Ngedengól in Gurdma^u.

The bai of the village part Ngërutói are situated to the west of the Bekátēⁱ Hill, precisely on the range of hills that extends to the southwest of the Bekátēⁱ Hill¹²³. The bridge Ngëgeívël is considered the border between Gurdma^u and Ngërutói. There open on the height stands a trailhead, looking to the north over the entire northwestern sea with its reefs; in about 30 m height is bai B. *aIlúlk*¹²⁴. A stone path leads steeply to the north down to the landing place Ngaragáp, where you usually arrive when you come from the south after crossing the mangrove belt. South of bai a Ilúlk is a beautifully constructed stone quad for the two rubak-bai Goldiáng, of which only the eastern one still stands towered over by age-old overgrown trees (Figure 27). On the stone pavement south of the back-gable a stone table stands for the presentation of money (ng)olëgëtóköl ra udóud, with some ball-shaped stones, big as a head, on top of it. In former times it stood in a Uluáng from where it was brought by the fugitives after the destruction by a Imeúngs (see story 113).

Figure 26. Bathing pond and well Dio ra ikëam.

From this stone quad you follow a road to the southwest, leading down the western slope of the hill to the landing place a Itebáng. But on the southeastern side a big stone path leads in a zigzag down the hill to the plain of the taro patches where it forms a trailhead after 300 m. Opposite this, in a distance of about 25 m, there is another one from where the stone path continues. After a short break it leads to the village part Ngatpúiëg. For 500 m it leads gently meandering to the southwest until it forms a big stone rectangle as a trailhead on the lower a Did river, there the rubak-bai aIvëkéi is situated. Directly next to it is the channel and landing place Ngarióulbai¹²⁵ where Mad ra klāi found his piece of money (story 80).

History. According to story 18, the land of Gongodogūl was created by the crash of Klubudsingál's airplane. The children of Galëgúi were in this bird, and they settled on the land. Especially Ngësebeî, Ngaragëdag and others seem to have been settled by Galëgúi, who therefore had privileges there.

Figure 27. Rubak-bai Goldiáng with the stone table, seen from the south; in Ngërutói.

The account of KUBARY¹²⁶ that the founding of the place was done from Gólei, has a certain point, concerning the different appearances of Medegeîpélau, as we can see in Gólei, Ngabiúl, Ngarsúl, etc. Though Ngardmau is in this respect connected with Ngarsúl, as is shown there. KUBARY also thinks that a Ugél'lēgalíd of Ngērupesáng points with his dysporus-bird to Ngardmãu. This, however, is also not correct, because story 195 does not mention it. The assistance of priest Ngirataulbūk, who killed 7 Goréōtians, did not take place in the olden days but has happened recently. It is said there: "Around this time Ngardmãu where a young man of the a Idíd family had been killed by Goréōr had been captured the seventh time". This probably happened under a Ibēdul 8 Měang; the kesěkés of Gurdmãu (heroic chant nr. 194 reports in detail about it). At around 1850—1860 Měang was probably holding the title. Though SEMP. II p. 14¹²⁷ does say that the conquest and complete destruction of the place Kaslan happened at the beginning of the century, but without any doubt he dates the last destruction too early. In 1871 KUB. I p. 14 says: "The recent Ratmau is still a young state, and did not exist at the time when Dr. SEMPER was staying in Angarad. In former times Ratmau was a strong and wealthy state that had been conquered by Korrōr and whose inhabitants had been killed or were dispersed. A small part settled in the region Blissaul on the eastern side of the island and has been called back to their former homesteads only a few years ago. Today, Ratmau does not even have 100 inhabitants" etc. — Thus we cannot be mistaken, when we assume the destruction happened between 1840 and 1850. One should also be reminded of story 204 of a Ugélregulsiáng and story 73.

Concerning the galíd of Ngardmãu, called Ngiramerědáng, we have just mentioned that he comes from Ngarsúl where more is said about him (see district IV). He is one of the manifestations of Medegē ipélau, about whom story 197 tells the most important details. His name comes from blai Merědáng in Ngatpúiěg, whose master he had become. He was also called Sagál tpúiěg after the village itself, though he belonged to the nearby a Irúr, where he made a woman possessed and talked through her. She was his priestess, mlagél, as has already been mentioned at Gólei and Ngabiúl. The house Merědáng was situated behind blai nr. I Geilóng in Ngatpúiěg. Unrest came upon the land, because the galíd aspired to take power over Ngardmãu and the surrounding areas. This is the reason, why it was completely destroyed, altogether 7 times, by a Imeúngs, Ngabúkěd, Ngarekeai and Goréōr. All together about 100 priestesses are supposed to have lived and worked one after the other in Ngatpúiěg. At the time when Ngardmãu was destroyed, the last time the priestess lived in blai a Lmi¹²⁸ on the grassland, though after the reconstruction she was brought to Geilóng.

When rubak nr. I Beóug from Gurdma^u was in exile in Blissang, the priestess, ordered by Sagálpúiëg, told him: "take me as a galíd then Ngardma^u will be restored." — Beóug agreed under the condition that the god would protect the place from further attacks. He granted him two priestesses, Diragoldekiáng in Tukërëmetāi and Dirageilóng in Geilóng. He gave him the name Beóug lë galíd rekebāi, whereas the former galíd was only called Ngirekebāi, after blai nr. I in Gurdma^u. Thus it came to pass that in Gurdma^u, like in all places of Medegeipélau, rubak nr. I was the high priest. When Beóug had agreed, the god said: I am the first one in this place and in all things. But when food and money is going to be distributed, then you will be the first one and I come in second place. Even though Beóug was against it, it remained like this. Therefore, Beóug nr. I is the galíd and nr. II is the high chief. In former times, Geilong was not a title-holding place, but when the galíd took possession of it, its inhabitants became his relatives and their prestige mounted. They built a new house for the god; Gádlbai ra reákl, rubak nr. VII of Gurdma^u lived there. When the government abolished the galíd-institution, then he and his relative, rubak nr. IV Garuráng had to take care of the money that everybody else shunned. Finally Gádlbai did it and spent a lot of it, causing a lot of anger. Then the money was taken away from him and given to Tu, the wife of Beóug, his aunt, the sister of his mother. The title of Gádlbai, who lived in Geilóng, was taken away; now he is called Gëměám, because he let the money "glide" through his hands, which is called mangam (see Ngatpúiëg).

The grave of Beóug is nearby bl. 17 Gamadáob in Gurdma^u; a stone slab lies there on two stones, thus forming a cave underneath. As already mentioned blai nr. II is the leading one of one side, whereas nr. VII Ngedilíngël leads the other side. This belongs to the houses of Ngáruangël (see story 20). I still have to mention that the gamáng-crab is considered sacred and it was not allowed to be eaten (story 99). Just like in Ngivál and a Irai only the high priest was allowed to wear the dougong-bracelet (see KUB. VIII p. 176).

Constitution of Gurdma^u

Story 80, about Mad ra klāⁱ and story 207 about Dir'runḡlb and Ngirameúsog, who lived in blai Ngerugëróng take place here (see above p. 74).

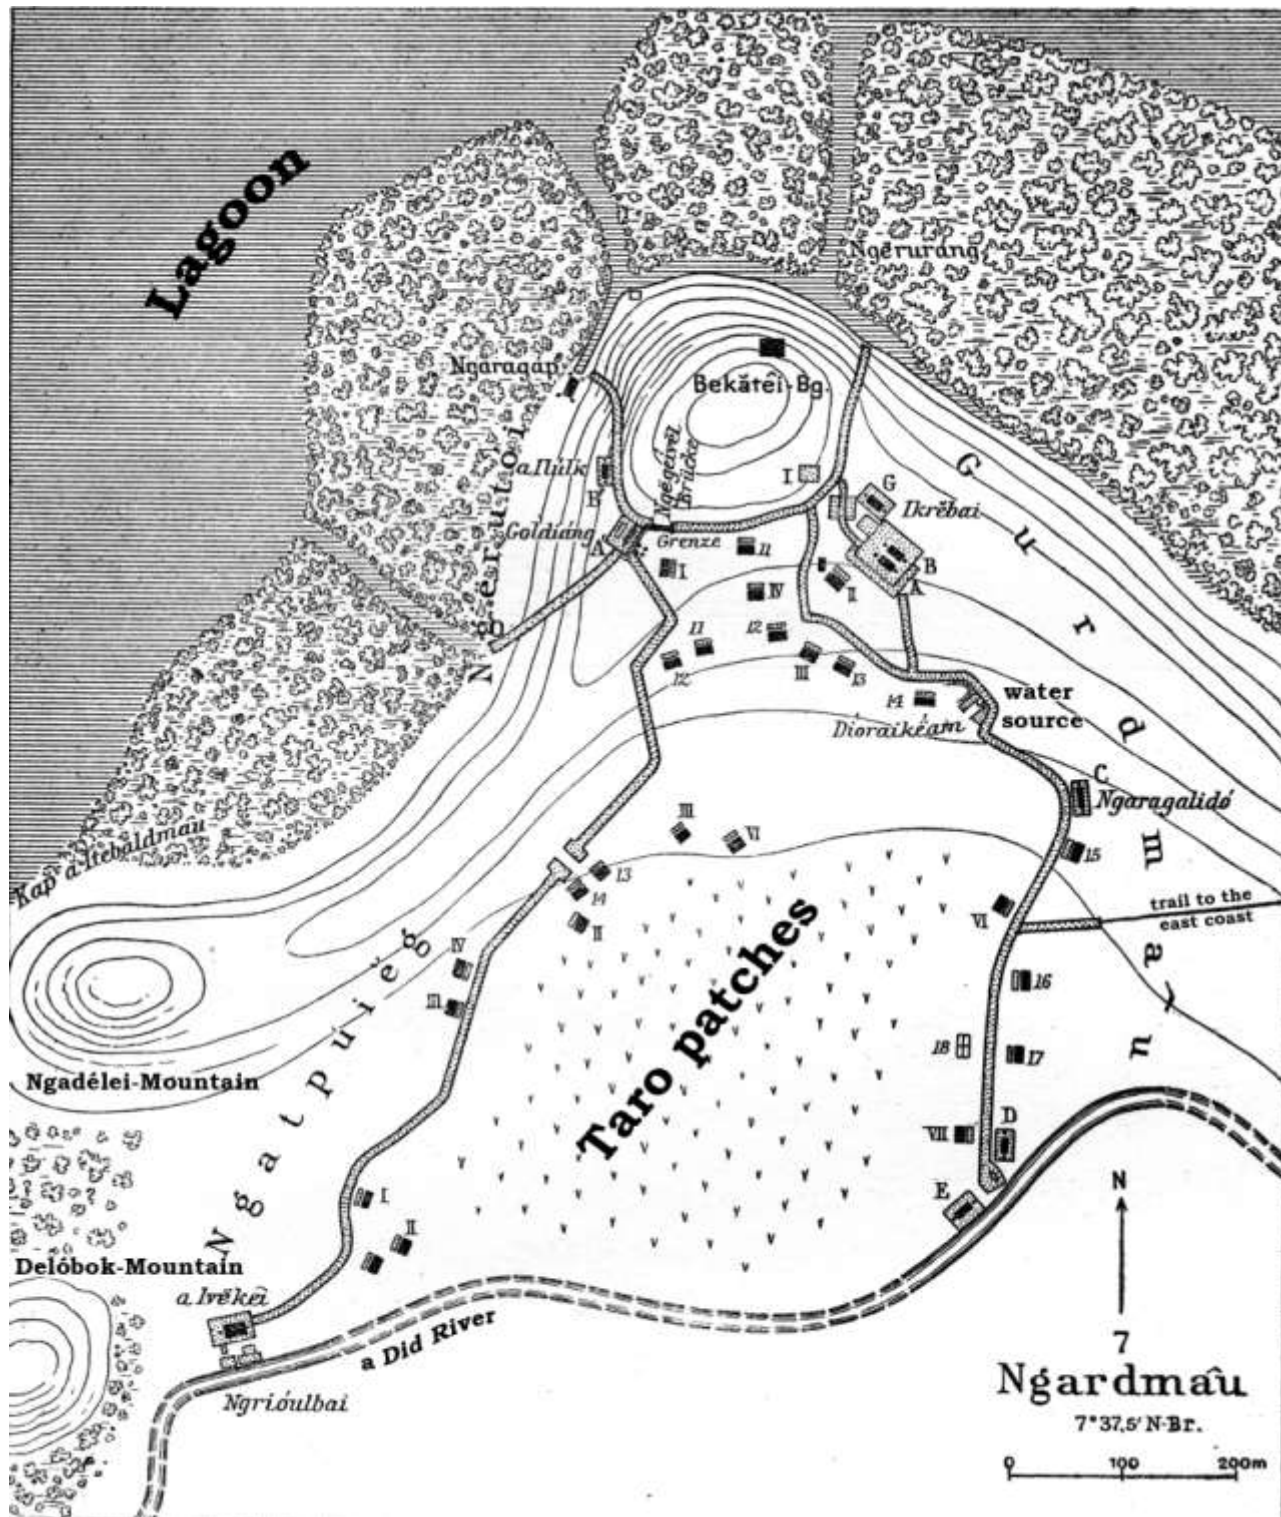

bai l pelú (village house): Bai l gurdmánḡ

A. Gosobulngāu

B. Bilekélëk.

klóbak (council): ar Beóug female council: Bug¹²⁹ l beóug

Plan 7.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang	ardil (women):
I	Beóug re kebāi	Ngarekebāi+	to B	Mlāgei
II	Beóug re ngedengól	Ngedengól	A	Díra ngēdesīl
III	Garuráng (ra ngerdēmei)	Ngardēmei	to B	Díra ngerdēmei
IV	Garurá ra irēbāi	a Irēbāi	" A	Dirairēbāi
V	Tmángalvúiēd	Matáng lagáng +	" A	Díra matánglagáng
VI	Gádlbai ra ngēdengól	Kélebid	" A	Dírakélebid
VII	" ra reákl	Ngedilíngēl	B	Dirangedilíngēl
VIII	nr. VIII	Meltált	to B
IX	nr. IX
X	nr. X

There were also 10 uriúl rubak (secondary chiefs) but without any title.

Further blai: 11. Ngesisīl. 12. Blekú. 13. Gorúgei. 14. a Ikēam. 15. Sėngai. 16. Nglis. 17. Gamadáob . 18. Tukērēmetāi (galid-house).

Nr.:	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaramalavēto	C. Ngaragalidó	Mangėkóng	Right
II ♂	Ngaragomú	D. Mangėkóng
I ♀	Ngaragád rebás
II ♀	Ngargēsemīg
I ♂	Ngarakoitėkták	E. Kemángēlbai	Kemángēlbai	Left
II ♂	Ngarapúngt	F. a Imūl +
III ♂	Ngaragokelóut	G. a Ikrēbai
I ♀	Ngaraiėkėkáng
II ♀	Ngarabirilói

Further táog: Ngeruáng.

Constitution of Ngėrutói¹³⁰.

Here are the kleblīl-clans Ngatagabáng and Kėselisīl of Delbóng and Nragoldiáng of a Uluáng. When the people came from a Uluáng (see story 113), Gurdmaū and Ngatpúiēg said: "sit in between us". A part stayed and another one moved on the Nggėsar (see there Goldiáng). See also story 75 and 78. In chant 194 the rubak are called ar Ngarúto.

bai l pelú (village house): A. Goldiáng klóbak (council): Ngar goldiáng female council: ar Bug¹³¹ l ngaragoldiáng

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	ardil (women):
I	Klólúlgárbēdul	Tepelák	I	Diratepelák
II	Kekerél'lgárbēdul	Kéd	II	Dirakéd
III	Garípuk ratióu	Tióu	to I	Diratióu
IV	Kekerél'lgarípuk	(Garamál)	—	—
V	nr. V	Ngarubedúl	to I	—
VI	nr. VI	Ngaruerdús	to II	—
VII	nr. VII	a Ikēam	" II	—
VIII	nr. VIII	Ngarabágesis	" II	—
IX	nr. IX	(a Irēbai)	—	—
X	nr. X	(Ngárdemei)	—	—

In 1910, rubak nr. VIII was Ngira kláng of a Imeúngs.

blai nr. IV is in Ngátpang, a Irēbai (IX) and Ngárdemei (X) are in Gurdmau nr. IV and III. Concerning the privileges of blai nr. VII a Ikēam see story 74.

Further blai: 11. Ngarípuk. 12. a Ingéong. 13. Bangkúr. 14. Tagalau.

nr.	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaragasemiēg	Kemángēlbai +	Kemángēlbai	right
II ♂	Ngaragoirél	Ngérág +
I ♀	Ngarausáko
II ♀	—
I ♂	Ngaramangesókēs	Ngērutói l bai +	a Ilúlk	left
II ♂	Ngaratatrírou	B. a Ilúlk
I ♀	Ngaratekángēl
II ♀	Ngaraprekórk

The main landing place is now Ngaragáp.

Constitution of 3. Ngatpúieḡ, also called Ngatpóng.

bai l pelú (village house): a Ivēkēi klóbak (council): Ngaraivēkēi female council: ar Bug l nagaraivēkēi

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	ardil (women):
I	Sagáltpúieḡ (galíd)	Geilóng	I	Dirageilóng (mlagēi)
II	Garangás	a Ivét	II	Diraivét
III	a Kmederáng	Garamál	to I	Diragaramál
IV	Ngiradelóng	a Ikesúk	" II	Dirakesúk
V	a Rūngūl	(Ked)	—	—
VI	nr. VI	a Uldák	" II	Dira gauldák
VII	nr. VII	(Tióu)	—	—

rubak nr. I and the woman nr. I are god and priestess of the place (see above). blai nr. V is nr. II in Ngërutói, blai nr. VII is nr. III there.

Gëměám¹³² lives now in Geilóng (I); next to it was Blai Merědáng, from where the god of the land Ngiramerědáng has his name. Nr. VIII lives in Meltált (see Gurdmaũ).

In former times Ngërutói and Ngatpúiěg had each only 7 rubak, they both created 8, so that they could help and fill in when there was work, payments, etc.

	gálděbegěl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):
♂	Ngarauldekiál sagál	a Ivěkeĩ	a Ivěkeĩ
♀	Ngarauldekiáldíl

Landing place and channel Ngarióulbai see above.

Uninhabited Villages.

4. a Irúr + was situated on the Bay Metkerél a irúr, north of point Pkulagalíd, between this one and the smaller point Pkuruóng. A neighbor of Ngatpúiěg (see above). It fished for Gobakraibedagál in Ngarameskáng and burnt lime for his house.

5. Ngaragatáng + mentioned in chant 194, footnote 80. Situated along the long channel and river. Around 1860 there are supposed to have been still some houses here. Founded as a wealthy place (story 3).

6. Gomelátěg mólog + an old place, founded by the people of a Ugélkeklāu (story 8); women were delivered by Ngatpúiěg. They built a stone pier here.

7. Ugeráel + founded just like the above-mentioned one.

8. Ngaradekús + some houses were supposed to still have been here around 1860. The people of Ugélkeklāu were driven away from here; htey turned south to the channel Delóbok (see chant 194) where they built a stone pier and received mongol from Ngërutói.

9. Ngaragědag + mentioned in story 164, on the bay of a Irúr, founded by the children of Galěgúi (story 18); half of it belonged to Gurdmaũ, providing servants for blai nr. I, the other half belonged to Ngaramásag. This village had big taro patches, see also chant 194, footnote 102.

10. Ngareksóng + In 1910 the old Ngira ngesegēĩ in Ngival said that he had still seen some houses in this place, when he had been young. Situated south of point Pkul a galíd on the bay of Ngaramásăg, and also belonged to this one.

11. Ngaramásăg + situated on the bay with the same name, south of Pkul a galíd. It had a long channel, like a Imeúngs, into which 4 streams flowed. The biggest had its mouth at Ngaremagaróang (see district V). In former times a big village; together with the above-mentioned ones it formed Pelú re másag. a Imeúngs became influential in the village to which one half also belonged . The inhabitants come from the place with the same name on Ngeā^{ur} (district X), the place of Golungīs (story 170). Here the animal stories 186 and 186a take place.

12. Dalongóbol +. Known as the former place of the paddle magic (story 20) KUB. II p. 118 says about DeIngóbol, that the land consisted of a steep and empty coast, and that the interior was reached by an opening in the rock face.

13. Ngaramisóng +.

14. a Goáng +.

15. Ngëuósog + situated next to Ngësebeī, as can be deduced from story 146. Its channel is called Tagukal.

16. Ngësebeī + its council of rubak ar Midól is mentioned several times in story 194. Story 77 takes place here.

17. a Iméngēl + where the 7 Debásăg-spirits built a big pavement from coral slabs (story 73).

(Ngartúkūr +) (story 73) see district II p. 70.

District IV. Ngatēlngál¹³³.

CANTOVA: Coaengal, MCCLUER: Artingall, SEMP.: Athernal, KUB.: Ngadernal a. Artinggal. Mission cites Ngatēlngáll and 787 inhabitants (1911).

Amount of villages: 17, deserted ones 37.

klóul pelú (mainvillage): Melekéiok.

rubukúl (its chief): a Răklai.

armeāu (people): Bagés l bekl¹³⁴

galíd (god): Ngirungór.

Political Groups.

Bitál i rael or Melekéiok: south of Melekéiok: Ngarevíkl, Ngarekutelíng +, Golivěg +, Ngëvarai +, Ngëruláng +, Ngaragolil +, Ngërupesáng, Melekéiok.

north of Melekéiok: Ngëráměs, Ngatēlngál+, Ngaremelég, Ngëruliang, Ngëbúrěg, Ngëriváng +, Ngiptál +, Blíssang +, (Ngëdip + and Ngamongóng +), Ngkár +, Ngareměrag +, a Imólog +, Ngapedegál +. Kivelül or Ngivál: a L'lēgológ+, a Imakáng+ (?), Ngarebökö +, Ngërüg +, Ngaruét +, Gomekátł udóng +, Ngareměgāu, Ngarsngāi, Ngës-měsoáng +, Ngaregělūk, Ngel'l au, a Ibūg +, a Oíms+, Ngërair +, Táog +(?), a Dékel + (?), Ngarekerú + (?).

Goldiáis¹³⁵: Ngardiól +, Ngarengasáng, Ngēmíngěl+, a Ibút+, Ngarekesóu, Nggēsár, Ngaráus.

Bung l kelau¹³⁶: Ngasuás +, Ngaregébúkl +, Ngaregemerákl +, Ngarebekál +, Bitang +, a Meróng, Ngarsúl, Ngadvád +, Ngardórök +, Kerdě'u +.

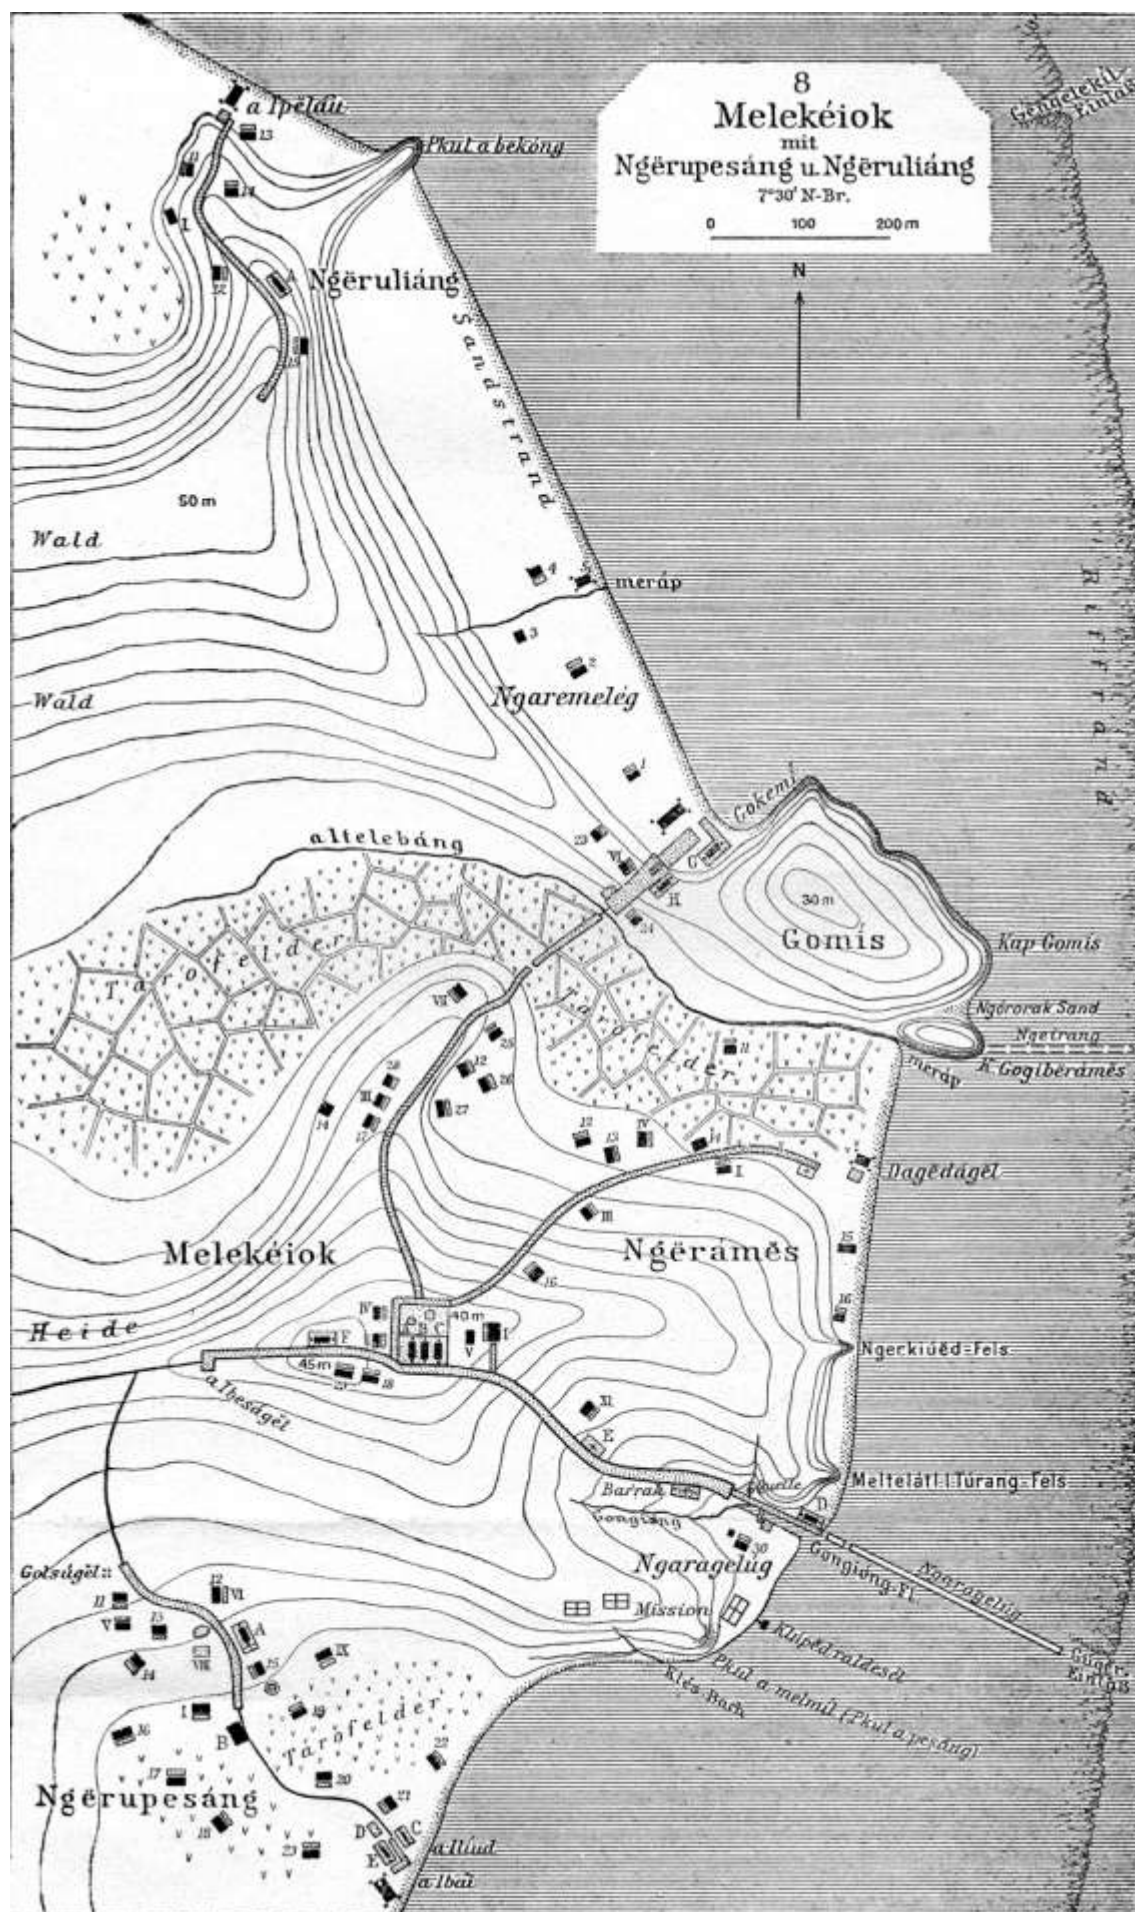

Geographie.

The coastline of the district is more structured than in the north. Already south of the rock-point of Ngërair, which forms the borderline to distr. II Ngarárd, lies a softly curved bay with a sandy beach, where Ngivál is situated. On its southern end is a rocky point, Pkulatáp rivál, next to Pkulatáp ra Ngaregolóng, and the one of Ngēsáng are of special importance. It is only surpassed in importance by the eastern point Gogibërámēs, which lies 5 km further south. Ngamāi bay is situated in-between both of them (see Vol. 1 p. 217 a. 223).

2 km inland from Ngamāi -Bay and only separated by the mountain Kengól is the lake Ngardók (see Vol. 1 p. 240 and figure 11 and part VII, story 87). The river Ngardórok that flows out of it to the south flows parallel to the coast line, thus separating a chain of hills from the sea. This chain of hills goes from the Kengól-mountain to Ngarsúl and its highest elevation is the mountain Nggēsar, the Rois Nggēsar (plan 3 ø 28' 30"). Most villages are situated on the eastern slope of this chain of hills with the exception of the above-mentioned Ngivál in the north, which is separated by the river Ngarebökö and the hills of theGoriúl-chain, as well as Ngarsúl in the south, which lies on the western mouth of the river Ngardórok, towered over by the 185 m high mountain Ngarsúl the highest one in the district and the second highest of Pelau (see Vol. 1, p. 238, pia. 44). He belongs to a new chain of hills, which ends in the south at Goikúl with Rois malk ra bések.

The island Ngurutói, next to the mangrove coast and situated south of Ngarevíkl, still has to be mentioned. In former times the wooden idols of the great ruk-dance from the people from Ngërupesáng in Melekéiok were stored in the 10 m high cliffs, just like in the rocks of Ngareklím at a Irai (see KUB. II p. 112). In 1910, there was a Japanese settlement up there.

The expansion of the landscape to the west, all the way to the border on top of the 100 m high mountain Golóug¹³⁷ has already been mentioned in Vol. 1 p. 167. In the legend this mountain is considered to be the meeting place of two moray eels called Kesebökö ra Golóug. Melekéiok in the east and a Imeúngs in the west are the mouths of both giant moray eels, whose tails have grown together in Golóug. When a Imeúngs wanted to go after some prey, Melekéiok stayed back and vice versa. One day, their back-snapping heads clashed together, and so they communicated and both of them gave in.

Plan 8

Industry: catching shark.

History:

In general it correlates with the one of Melekéiok. The history of Kesebokú ra Gológ was just mentioned.

Concerning the galid of the district Ngirungór see what has been said at Ngivál.

1. Melekéiok (plate 6 and 7)

(MCCLUER: Malligoyoke, SEMP.: Meligeok, KUB.: Molegoyok).

Description of the place (see plan 8): The capital of Ngatēngál, in a certain sense of all Palau, is probably located at 7° 30' northern latitude. There is no exact measurement. The imposing place is situated on the height of the above-mentioned chain of hills, of which the hill Gomís with point Gogibērámēs, which can be indicated as the eastern point of the thick part of Babeldáob, is detached. Melekéiok consists of 3 village parts, Melekeióng, Ngērámēs (Ngeráng), and Ngaremelég, further Ngēruliáng and Ngēbūrēg in the north as well as Ngērupesáng and Ngarevíkl in the south also belong to the municipality. When you come from the south, in the sand-reef-lagoon (the barrier-reef-depth turns into such a one at the height of the island Ngurutói, (see Plan 2), then you can see the buildings of the Catholic Mission, which was built in 1910, on an elevation north of Ngērupesáng. The hill forms a low steep point, Pkul a melmíl, also called Pkul a pesáng. You can walk around it at low tide. In the north of this one is a small strip of flat land, where once the house of the Capuchin Mission stood (see Vol. 1 p. 162). In 1910, it was demolished¹³⁸ and was replaced by a new construction for the German missionaries. The strip of land, which is only 150 m long, widens more and more, so that it forms a triangle. This entire place is called Ngaragelúg (KUB. Ngara mogoluk). In the east it is bordered by the beach of the lagoon that is walled, in the west by the steep bank of a hill, and in the north by the walled construction of a boat-channel, which is at the same time the mouth of the stream Gongióng. Towards the sea the northern part of the channel construction continues as a stone dam. On the beginning of this stone dam lies bai kldók D, called Bailēgasau. There I frequently resided during short-term stays. In 1883 a hut stood next to it in the north, on a sandy beach, as shown in a picture (Figure 28) of KUBARY. Here he lived in August 1883 (see Vol.1 p. 148). Further on there is a stone dam, interrupted by two berípěr (boat-passages) (40 m from the bai) in order to reach 270 m wide as the massive big stone-bridge Ngaragelúg all the way to the edge of the reef.¹³⁹ Quite nearby you can see a narrow boat passage in the rim of the reef, called Gúgěr, which is swept by water. Inland though, the stone dam meets the imposing trailhead Medūd kelkál next to a spring with good water where also the stone quad Gongělulūl is situated. The trailhead is situated on the 10 m wide stone street on the right hand side on the beach the house where Kubary lived.

Figure 28. The stone bridge Ngaragelúg in Melekéiok, behind it Bai lē gasaū;

Gadesír rsúl. First, gently winding and shadowed by tall trees, it leads to the stone construction of the former bai Bar´rak. Then, leaving the one of bai Gomávěg on the right hand side, it leads in a northwesterly direction up to the 40 m high village place of Melekeióng, which measures 75 m squared. On the southern side there are the 3 rubak-bai, A. Gosōbulngāu, B. Ngěrúilialbai and C. Ngaremegāulbai¹⁴⁰ (plate 6² and 7²). On the eastern edge of the place stands the beautiful blai I a Udēs of the high chief a Rāklāi (Figure 29) and right before it (between blai I and bai C) blai nr. V Ngěruleóng was situated. As Saga ruleóng KUBARY was the head of the household, a sign that in 1880 the family had already become extinct. In 1907 Soilókol a Rāklāi built in its place a "modern" schoolhouse or residence for government employees. On the W-side of the place are blai nr. II and nr. IV

//Krämer, Palau Vol. 2 Plate 6.//

DistrictNgatēIngal

1. Rubak nr. 1 a Raklaî Soilóköl and his wife Bilung in Melekéiok

a Ilóng Gomtilóu Risong a Rgeiüngēl Rul Gosisáng Marsil Kloulúbak

2. The family Rul with its 10 children in Melekéiok (At. 3. Gen. V and VI)

In the background the 3 rubak-bai (the northern gabels).

Gumeráng and a Mid. But when you walk down from the quad on the broad stone path to the north, you will soon encounter on your left hand side the 3 houses of blai nr. III a Lúkěd etc. This upper land bab l pelú pulled the lower land ióu l pelú towards itself, more about it further down. Right in front of bai B and C is an ilúud pavement on a paved place, called Golsúgěl tét,¹⁴¹ which was constructed from stones which were brought from a Uluáng (distr. V) (plate 7¹). Here each of the rubak of Melekéiok had his seat in the following arrangement:

Figure 29. Blai nr. 1 a Uděs, on the right side the cooking house.

IV	X	VI	III
VII
II	VIII	V	IX I

In 1783, the seat of a Răklāi was taken away (Vol. 1 p. 114; the seating arrangement in the bai, below p. 96). Here half hidden in the ground lies the stone Golekéiok¹⁴² (Figure 30) one of Mílād's stones (story 19); further on not far from from here at the place of house nr. V Ngërulëóng is a slab with a snake-like groove (Figure 31) depicting the bersóioq-snake (Palau boa), the mother of keblil nr. V. More about it below at p. 96 (see also 111).

From the village square, at the rubak-bai Gosobulngau, the above-mentioned mounting stone path leads as an extension about 100 m further west and 5 m further up.

Figure 30. The stone image of god Golekéok of Melekéiok, first slowly drops for 250 steps in the north (at the corner lies bl. III a Lúkēd; plate 7⁴). Then it drops steeply in the same direction. At the bottom it traverses for another 100 steps the taro patches at the foot of the Melekéiok-Hill. After crossing the stream a Itelebáng on a wide bridge made of planks, the path mounts a little. On the height it leaves bai H.

*Gádēs i gēbíl*¹⁴³ on its right (southern) side (plate 7³). Crossing a stone stair in the two-sided, high trailhead (Figure 32) you climb down again. A wide ostentatious stone path ends 50 steps in front of a big angular stone construction, which, in 1907, carried bai G Bailēgalíd. In 1910, it was in ruins. On the left (N) is the boathouse Gokemí on the sandy beach. Both just mentioned clubhouses are quite near the slope of the hill Gomís, which forms the eastern point Gogibëráměs. This more than 300 m long hill stretches from SE to NW and in its northern part it is connected with the mountain by a flat raise, which was crossed at Bai H where Ngëruliáng is situated (see plan 8). A lot of pandanus grows on this 30 m high hill. The rocks are very steep where it meets the sea. This is the 10 m high point Gomís. One rock with a cover of vegetation, the actual point Gogibëráměs,¹⁴⁴ is separated by a small, idyllic valley studded with coconut trees and a sandy beach; it is called Ngórorak.

Figure 31. The bersóioq-snake (Palau boa) of Melekéiok.

Figure 32. Bai and trailhead Gáděs and the boathouse Gokemí, from the east.

In former times a house of family I, blai Ngarangetbós¹⁴⁵ stood on the nice small rock. In the year 1876, Miklucho-Maclay lived there for a short while (Vol. 1, p. 149). Today this place is deserted and just like Gomís it only serves as an observation post for the sailing competitions, fishing expeditions, etc. In former times¹⁴⁶ a stone bridge, called Ngëráng or Gáděsagalíd "Stone Path of the galíd" went all the way out to the edge of the reef, because God Godal melég invented the trumpet shell here (story 93). Even today at low tide you can still see the remains. At high tide the boats pass over it. To the south of the rocky point *a*Itelebáng, the stream watering the taro fields flows to the sandy beach, which is nicely wide, about 500 m long, and leads to the already mentioned stone dockyard Nagargelúg.¹⁴⁷ This stream was crossed by the 2. stone-path, coming from the above, shortly before the climb to Gáděsigébíl. In the northern part of the sandy beach, nearby the mouth of the stream, ends the 4. stone-path that comes down from the village square of Upper-Melekéiok. The boathouse Dagědágěl stands in front of the trailhead on the beach. But no bai is in that part of the village Ngěráng or Ngěraměs (see there). Only the stone foundation of the former bai a Dīm still stands. To the south of Ngěráng the mountain of Melekéiok comes near to the shore and 2 small rocky points, Negerikúěd in the north and Meltelátl 1 Túrang¹⁴⁸ "Tureng Jumping Head First" in the south, try to narrow down the beautiful beach. The latter point is near Bailēgasāu. This is the topography of Melekéiok, one of the most beautiful places in the archipelago.

Industry: catching sharks, catching and selling dugong, fabrication of bracelets.

Privileges: Delivery of bai-girls to a Imeúngs (distr. V) out of gratitude because during a big famine a Imeúngs sent food supplies to the people of Melekéiok. Bai-girls and breadfruit were delivered by Ngěbúrěg. Ngivál also delivered bai-girls (story 60). Dugong bracelets are worn.

History: Melekéiok was founded by the poverty Galebūl, (story 3) and according to story 19 it is a son of Mílad.

In former times, the title nr. I of Melekéiok was Těmakāi. It is still used today in blai nr. II Gúmerang, but nowadays it is title nr. XI. Often you can find it cited as a Tmagei or a Tmekēi (see for instance story 58 of Gobagád ruāu).

Těmakāi lived in Ngěraměs (see landing place on the map), thus not up on the hill where today's Melekéiok is standing.

But in former times the people of Ngěráng lived on the gogeál-lime rocks of Ngaramedíu (see Figure 28 in Vol. 1 p. 213 and plate 8¹), the point that juts out in the south of the big entrance Kesebőkú, which leads to the harbor of Malakal on the eastern coast (more about it in story 17 about Tipětípakmiěg).

In Ngaramedíu people did not enjoy their life any more. The gěvūl millipedes had become so big that they devoured human beings. Thus the inhabitants of this place, where today stone foundations can still be found, had to leave. On their way to the north, looking for a new and better life, the refugees touched the beach of Ngarenggól, where the people from Ugélpelú (see story 195) still lived with their high chief, the godlike human a Ugél-

'lëgalid. Later on, they strengthened Ngarbagéd. The refugees asked for his help and his protection while looking for a new place. He consented, but remained at his place. The refugees moved up the coast of Babldáob, choosing the place where today Ngëráng is situated. But it did not take long and they were oppressed by the villages to the south, Ngëbúrëg, Ngarevík, and Golivëg. Their women were kidnapped, the fish taken out of the baskets and the taro out of the pots. They were patient, because they did not know any means to ward off their oppressors. At the end of the story of Ugélpelú it is told how Tëmakāi got help from Ugél'lëgalíd, who destroyed the villages of the oppressors. Out of gratitude for this he received the land of Ngërupesáng. Because of this it is so closely related with Ngarbagéd on Gorëör.

Another source told me the story in more detail: One day a Ugél'lëgalíd came from Ngarbagéd with many people in a big boat that was much bigger than the ones that are built today. They came to the coast of Melekéiok in order to fish for the sardine-like mëkëbud-fish, which appear in great swarms in the lagoon. Soon the boat was filled to the rim and was sent to Ngarbagéd, so that people might enjoy it. Ugél'lëgalíd was waiting with some other rubak on the beach for the return of the boat. While they were waiting there a young girl came to the landing place Dagëdagël in Ngëráng in order to fetch salt water for dëmók, a taro leaf dish. Ugél asked her what for she needed salt water? Probably for fish? Oh, the little girl answered, we never eat fish. When our men catch some they are immediately taken by the higher places. — Then a Ugél'lëgalíd said: *audögul magëüid*¹⁴⁹ — The girl kept these words in her memory even though she did not understand the meaning. When she returned home she told her father Tëmakāi. He went immediately down to the beach and started a conversation with Ugél'lëgalíd, in order to learn the meaning of these words and actually he heard in the course of his speech the above-mentioned words repeated several times. Soon Tëmakāi knew whom he was dealing with. He asked if he knew a plan how the two oppressive places could be rendered harmless. Then Ugél asked Tëmakāi if he did not like his place. This one answered: If my place were small and mobile then I would move it so that the two villages can no longer reach me. — Ugél said: I can defeat them and bring them under your power. — Tëmakāi answered: If you can do that I will pay you accordingly! — Finally a Ugél said: Good then wait until I have sent for my people. When they are here, I will show you how to defeat them. — When finally the boat returned, once again filled with "sardines", a Ugél sent again to Ngarbagéd with the order that all men fit for action should come during the night to Ngëráng with the available boats, so that they would be there at dawn. When they were there on the following morning, a Ugél went to Těmakāi and told him to be ready as he was planning to attack Ngarevíkl and Golívěg on the same day. Těmakāi should go ahead and enrage them so much that when he was running away they would follow him. Once they were away from their villages the Ngarbagéd-people would set fire to the villages and completely destroy them. When the deceived ones would check what happened behind their back, then they would be attacked and wiped out. Thus it happened. Ngarevíkl and Golívěg were destroyed on this day and the victors went with their clubs and spears to his house in Melekéiok . There they were all sitting while Těmakāi talked with a Ugél'lěgalíd about the payment of thanks. A piece of money was not accepted, as well as a contract about the delivery of woman for the village-house in Ngarbagéd. Only when Těmakāi asked what it should be, then a Ugél wanted the piece of land south of Melekéiok, where Ngërupesáng is situated today. He added: I want to live here with my people and serve you as protection. When you have some hard work I will help you, when you need a messenger I will send you one . — Těmakāi agreed and soon afterwards Ugél'lěgalíd moved to Ngarbagéd and fetched all the younger brothers of the rubak in order to settle them in Ngërupesáng, and to establish and administer the place. Thus Ngërupesáng and Melekéiok flourished. Nobody dared to attack it, nobody conquered it.

Only in the village itself a dispute erupted due to false rumors. One day, in the house Kerurāu¹⁵⁰, they were calling for a síměs-taro-stick, but in the house *a*Tekāu^{150 a.151} they believed they wanted to have spears because the enemy was approaching. People from Ketukāi stormed out of the house and ran inland. Whoever saw them running followed them and thus, a short time later, the village was completely empty. The entire population fled to Ngátpang, where they stayed in Ngërugóp. When the people from Ngërupesáng came to Melekéiok the following day in order to have a look, they found the place empty. It took several days until a Ugél'lěgalíd learned that the fugitives lived in Ngërugóp. He held a council about how to bring them back. One day, people from Ngeringál'í¹⁵², who were very friendly with those of Melekéiok, came for a visit. They were really surprised to find the place deserted. Everywhere the weeds were growing and a deadly silence hung all around. Finally, they turned to Ngërupesáng where a Ugél'lěgalíd told them everything. He suggested they should clean the village and prepare it while he would go to Ngátpang , in order to fetch the inhabitants . Thus they did . In Ngátpang Ugél loaded them all in boats and traveled with them up the west coast. In Ngaremeténgěl (Ngaramlungúi), Ngaragэдág (Ngardmau), and Ngěúngěl (Ngaregolóng) they procured provisions. Then they went down the eastern coast all the way to Ngivál. Its inhabitants liked the beautiful women of Melekéiok so much that they tried to delay the continuation of the trip for one night. But a Ugél was watchful, and brought them safe and sound to their home where everything was prepared.

In the meantime Tēmakaī had become high-spirited; he was a boast and rose above Sagaruleóng, so that this one gave him part of his land Ngaruleóng where blai nr. I Udēs stands today. His family was angry about this. One day, on the grassland, Sagaruleóng was cutting plagéos-wood for a house and took the shavings home, in order to fry fish with them. Soon a fat fish was lying on the fire and it was crackling in a most promising fashion, so that the old and blind mother of the master of the house, Bekēblióu, got quite greedy for it. But when shortly afterwards she only received ground taro, she pushed this aside. She made a gologúl-carrying ring, with which usually pots of syrup are carried, placed it on her head and like this she went over to the house of the rich family Udēs, which shortly before had been accepted in Melekéiok¹⁵³. There at the house she said the man should take from her head the heavy load that she was carrying, the title of her family and of Melekéiok. In the future Ngiraudēs should reign in Melekéiok and should take care of everything. The old woman remained in blai Udēs and did not return to her son. Thus the first title went to Udēs and Sagaruleóng became nr. V, after the wealthy house a Mid, which had come from Ngáruangēl¹⁵⁴, had taken the 4. place.

After the destruction of a Uluáng (story 113), the Udēs family had left and arrived in Melekéiok via Ngaregúr, as was mentioned above on p. 39.

The old blind Bekēblióu had a daughter called Dengdang biúl¹⁵⁵, who had a son, who lived in Melekéiok. Dengdangbiúl was very greedy and therefore was so detested that the village people put some food and the woman into a box. In her grass skirt they placed a br'rak-piece of money with the name Pisēg. Then they closed the box, sealed it, and put it adrift. It drifted to Pelíliou where it stranded in a Imelegól. When some people found the box and heard a voice inside, they fetched the people from Ngasiás (see there). They came to the beach, rubak nr. II Ngiragongór leading them. When he heard the voice he shouted: If a man is in there, it will be my man, if it is a woman, it shall be my woman, if it is a galíd, it will be my galíd. — Then he opened the box and found the woman Dengdangbiúl; he took her with him and gave her to Dílíklep, the title woman of his house, so she should take care of her. When Bekēblióu, the girl's mother in Melekéiok, heard about this event, she sent her daughter's son to Ngasiás, in order to get money from Ngiragongór. A boat from Nggeiangēl, which had just come to Udēs, took him to the south. He received a galebúgēp-piece of money from Ngiragongór and one kluk, and brought both home to his grandmother who, when the rubak-bai was built, paid with it a nglósog-part of the thatched roof¹⁵⁶.

When the boy entered the finished bai at the front gable, all rubak inside went to the side of the back-gable, because they did not want to sit together with a young man. Therefore even today the first rubak a Răklai sits alone on the madál a bai-side at his door, where only rubak nr. III Rulúkěd keeps him company; all the other rubak sit at the but l bai-side¹⁵⁷.

Dengdangbiúl stayed in Ngasiás and bore Ngiragongór a daughter. Because the rubak treated his wife badly, she fled and threw herself into the grotto Ngaramélt¹⁵⁸ where she turned into stone. Her daughter remained in blai nr. II. Soon afterwards she became pregnant, but could not give birth. When an oracle was consulted, people found out, that she had gotten pregnant from a galid and that she had to go to Melekéiok in order to give birth. In a boat she went to the north. At Ngërupesáng she was thirsty and wanted to drink on land. She was set on shore at the landing place of a Ibai where she went to the stream Klés near to point Pkul a pesáng. Here she quenched her thirst and then climbed up to the jungle. There she gave birth to a bersóiog-snake (Palau boa), which she threw into the bush. Then she went to blai nr. V Ngëruleóng, where in the meantime her boat had arrived, too. Knowing how stupid she was, the people from Pelíliou asked her if she had given birth, and she told them what had happened. Then the girl went to fetch the snake, made a nest for it, and fed it. Thus the snake grew up, and when it was big it gave birth to people, who today comprise the keblil-clan of Blai Ngëruleóng. When it died, it was buried at blai Ngëruleóng, where today is still its grave (see above page 90 and Figure 31.). It is of great advantage to compare with KUBARY's notes, which he himself a rubak, had made one generation earlier at the same place. Therefore I cite him word for word; the footnotes are my corrections.

KUB. II p. 65¹⁵⁹ writes:

"In the main village with the same name of today's state Molegoyók¹ we find the following blays: Úduš², Gúmerang, Ngatpúyul³, Ami⁴, Ngaruósok⁵, and Koruráu⁶ at the top of the society. But according to tradition, most of them are foreigners; they arrived within the last three centuries. Before this time there were only the blays Ayba 9a hàl⁷, Ngatpúyul, and Ngaruósok. Their chiefs are Atmagey⁸, Arulúke⁹, and a third one whose old title is not quite certain. They lived in the places 9erebéy¹⁰, Alúkuš¹¹, and Ma9 el ⁷ a Ibedagál.

⁸ a Těmakai.

⁹ Rulúkěd nr. III.

¹⁰ Derebei Blai nr. XI.

¹¹ a Lúkěd blai nr. III.

¹ Melekéiok.

² Uděs nr. I.

³ keblil nr. III Ngatbúiěl of blai nr. III Lúkěd.

⁴ *a*Mid IV.

⁵ Ngëruósosg, keblil of blai nr. V.

⁶ Keruráu, keblil of blai nr. VI Derebei.

1. The a iliud-stone pavement Ngaramelekeiöng a Raklai

2. The 3 rubak-bai, from the south.

3. The bai Gáděsigěbil, from the west.

4. The compound of blai nr. III a Lúkěd.

pelú¹² and owned the upper land of today's Molegoyók (Bab el pelú). The third of the chiefs owned the middle of today's village and took the title Sagarúleo (the man from Rúleo) from the house Ngarúleo¹³. After the fall of the land Ngarúduš¹⁴ in Aremolungúy Madara Klay¹⁵ came to Molegoyók and founded near to Ngaruleo a new home for himself, which he called Úduš. He was called Araklay¹⁶ and four chiefs existed next to each other. But over time Sagaruleo Koruàu transferred his rights and Arakly became the stronger Chief. Afterwards came from the sunken Ngarauangel¹⁷ originating families Amiθ and Kruraán who also settled and the last was the house Gúmerang, with head from Galàp in Angararð¹⁸ had been chased away and landed here¹⁹ and was welcomed. Out of this compromise among the families, formed today's Klou Rúpaks: Araklay, Ira Gúmerang²⁰, Arukúluθ, Irunguníyl²¹, and Sararúleo²², the Atmagey lost his influence and his lands to Gúmerang and is today the chief No. IX²³ in the village. The house Ngaruósok however claims his existence and title, but it became allied with Uduš that it became special subordinate towards it and the title would become available to the later. Also Koruràu became part of the house Ngatpúyul. It seems that the later arrivals became decisively predominant, by the power of their weapons or by other circumstances. The number of families and rúpaks is far bigger and we find them distributed among the five highest families or grouped around them in the following way:

¹²Ngaramádēl keblīl Nr. X.

¹³Ngērúleo Blai Nr. V,

¹⁴Ngērúdes in Ngaramlungúi

¹⁵Mad ra klāi

¹⁶a Rākklāi Nr. I.

¹⁷Ngáruangēl

¹⁸Ngarárd

¹⁹II angeblich an der Landspitze Pkul a bekóng

²⁰Ngiragumeráng oder Rēgēbong Nr. II.

²¹Ngirēkungīl Nr. IV.

²²Sagaruleóng Nr. V.

²³s. jetzt Nr. XI.

²⁴a Rengūl Nr. 12.

²⁵Madrenggar nr. 22.

²⁶Ngiragongór nr. 13.

²⁷Golikóng nr. VIII.

The following chiefs go with Uduš: Sagarúleo, Arngúul²⁴, and Madelengkar²⁵.

With Gúmerang: Atmagey, Irahongór²⁶, Goligó²⁷, Aruigang²⁸, Maθel Alméy²⁹.

With Ngatpúyul: AtGadašáu³⁰, Iramáng³¹, Akóy³², Madel Gulsyang³³.

With Amiθ: Arakatáok³⁴, Imetúkur³⁵, Akomatáo³⁶.

With Ngaruósok: Iruósok³⁷, Iratagàu³⁸.

The development of these political groups seems to be the result of several different circumstances. But, as can be deduced from the position of Atmagey, it seems to have come to an assimilation of the former families by the last conquerors. This becomes even clearer when you follow the prevailing traditions. At the time when the upper Molegoyok consolidated, today's Ngarohomiy³⁹, then called riúu⁴⁰ pelú (lower land), was in the possession of Arngúul⁴¹, whose family was called Ngarbau urík and ²⁸ Name not clear . Could be Ibungēllagáng from blai nr . IX, but Ngiratekau nr . IX is further below — or a Ruadesul nr. 19, who, like a Ruóru nr. 21, is not mentioned.

²⁹ Mad ralmí nr. 18.

³⁰ a Tkedësâu nr. VI.

³¹ Ngirëmáng nr. X.

³² a Koi nr. 14.

³³ Mad ra Gulsiáng nr. 17.

³⁴ a Regëtaóg nr. VII.

³⁵ *a*Imetúkěr nr. 15.

³⁶ Kemedáol nr. 20.

³⁷ Ngiruósög nr. 16.

³⁸ Ngiratekau nr. IX.

³⁹ Gokemí.

⁴⁰ ióul.

⁴¹ Rengul nr. 12.

//98//

the title house Baulbey⁴². His followers must have been numerous, because the collective name of the rupaks, which was Ara Ngaruhóp⁴³ is still preserved. As this country felt rather independent from the inhabitants of the upper part, war was the result⁴⁴ and this part of the land became part of Molegoyok and the chiefs of the place were united with the rupaks of the mainland. All the kikeriy rupaks⁴⁵ of toady's Molegoyók belong here. Thus they were distributed among the victorious families that existed then. But this annexation was only possible by being accepted into the family and therefore the members of such a group are kaukad⁴⁶, which means related, and they cannot marry each other.

⁴² Báolbei nr. 12.

⁴³ The female council of the secondary chiefs is called ar Ngarugóp.

⁴⁴ My informants said, that it was only the powerful superiors' request, which was followed.

On the other hand the titles of the individual houses, when its inhabitants die, are occupied by men from the others, so that within the ranks of such chiefs there will be eventually a general raise in rank by the death of a title holder.

The small rúpak-title Iruósok and Iratagàu in the family Ngaruósok, whose Obokul⁴⁷ is Sagaruleo of Molegoyok, seem to be of different origin, because the family is a very old one. In former times when a blay was still standing isolated and had many members, where it could control a bigger stretch of land, thus formed a sort of state of its own, it seems that it was custom then that the oldest cousins or the younger brothers of the Obokul, who was the high chief, also had chiefly titles. Thus for instance the house Aydid⁴⁸ in Kórryor⁴⁹ has two of the big Sny's⁵⁰ in the state, nr. I and nr. III." — — —

⁴⁵ kekerél rúbak "small chiefs" = uriúl rúbak "secondary chiefs)

⁴⁶ kaugád.

⁴⁷ more correct gokdemáol "oldest".

⁴⁸ a Idíd .

⁴⁹ Goréör. ⁵⁰ dui "title".

This was KUBARY. For continuation see distr. VIII Ngarkldéu.

The newer history starts in the year 1783 with the war of the people of Goréör against Melekéiok where the English supported the first ones with their guns, as has been told in Vol. 1 pp. 110. Three times the despicable attack was launched while the Ngatělngál-people courageously resisted. In 1791 MCCLUER also helped the Goreotes with their attack, which finally did not take place, because a peace agreement was reached. The English then visited the capital where for the first time white people entered (p. 125). In 1797, JAMES WILSON had for a short time contact with the people of Melekéiok (p. 128). At around 1840, Melekéiok conquered Ngivál with the help of Goréör. At around 1850 Melekéiok was destroyed by Goréör with the help of guns (KUB. I p. 21). In 1876 v. MIKLUCHO-MACLAY visited this place (see Vol. 1 p. 149), where at that time the white trader Sims lived (p. 151) and in 1883 KUBARY started to live here and in nearby Ngërupesáng for a longer time. Shortly before, the inhabitants had to suffer once again under the English. People from Melekéiok and Nggësár had plundered the "Lila" of the Yapese trader O'Keefe that was shipwrecked in the north of Babldáob. Thus in 1882 came the British war ships "Lily" and "Comus" and demanded a compensation of 4600 pound sterling.

//99//

As this could of course not be paid, the English burned down the palace of the king and the 3 communal bai in Melekéiok¹⁶⁰ as well as the house of the priest and some club-houses in Nggësár (p. 153). In 1891 the Spanish mission started, which was taken over by the German mission in 1907.

Concerning the constitution I refer to the just mentioned history. Important is further the awarding of the title *a Rāklāi*¹⁶¹. The title of rubak nr. I a Rāklāi, of the leader of the district Ngatēlngál and of Melekéiok is bestowed in the following fashion: When a Rāklāi is dead and a new rubak is supposed to receive the title, a hut is built for him on the gólbed-stone pavement in front of the title-holding house¹⁶². A female relative is appointed as his servant. One of his brothers-in-law takes care of the food, which at this occasion is called keritákl and which he has to deliver for one month. During this time the rubak of Melekéiok remain most of the time in the main bai Gosobulngau, at least in the morning, whereas they spend the night at home. At the end of this time, a big gorságél-wooden plate is filled with fruits of all kind, as *a uldekiál*¹⁶³ a dúi, "the assembly of the title". Each rubak gets his share. At the same time the new title holding chief gives orders to make a *debégěl*¹⁶⁴ as a bridge for them, a sweet dish mesekiú l miég, "almond-fish", or an almond cake gotógěl miég. When these treats are brought, he decorates himself with one bágěl-piece of money, wearing it around his neck, and two small galebúgép-pieces in the ears and a Ksau, rubak nr. II of Ngarsúl is helping him with it.

Because this one knows the magic for the change of place, so that all will be well in the future. Once a Rāklāi is decorated both go to the rubak-bai and remain standing at the front gable where a Ksau will say his magic. Only after the spell both enter the bai by the front door, where a Rāklāi sits down at the first door to the left, the so-called mangerém l tuángěl, where he divides the sweet dish and distributes it to the rubak¹⁶⁵. Then he returns to his hut, and awaits the five places who bring their gift of money, first Ngëráměs, then Ngëruliáng, then Ngërupesáng then Ngarevíkl and finally Ngëbúrěg.

Yet there has to be one more accomplishment in order to free the high chief from his hut, one blebáol. It is said as long as a Răklāi is secluded, all Palau is frightened. The men's clubs of Bung l kelāu, Goldiáis, and Kivelūl are looking for a head. a Răklāi gives to whoever brings one a galebugép as *ulengetekil*¹⁶⁶ as release by the blebáol. Only when the head has been brought a Răklāi is free. But first he and his liberators have to go to the allied places where each high chief gives him one galebúgěp, which he keeps for himself. Each chief of a village gives him also one kluk and one klsuk; all the other money he has to hand over to the rubak of Melekéiok. After all this a Răklāi can consider himself as the leader of NgatěIngál and its capital Melekéiok. But as long as he is in office, he has to have his own cook, and is not allowed to eat foreign food, as it is the case with rubak Rekamesíkt in Ngátpang. He may not eat or drink from another pot and his plates may not be used by anyone except himself (KUB. I p. 20).

There are quite a few similarities with the awarding of the title to the Mad of Ngabúkěd, whose house Túblai is also supposed to come from blai Ngurusoklúk in Ngaregúr. In former times, the name seems to have been Mad ra klāi, just as in story 80, but has been shortened. It became a powerful title. This was because his house was wealthy and the other rubak of Melekéiok were poor and their houses often became extinct. Whereas a Ibědul of Goréör had also the powerful house of rubak nr. II a Ikelāu, besides other wealthy chiefs¹⁶⁷.

Godál melég¹⁶⁸ is considered to be the main galíd of Melekéiok, KUB. II p. 121 says: "Aulimáol receives Armengols from Molegoyók, and Kódal Melék¹⁶⁹, the male protection god of the last one, whose picture is a big war-spear, was the original god of Aulimáol. He came from there in order to marry Amlahél, the originally female god of Molegoyók. This also sheds an informative light on the origin of Sagarúleos, the former co-owner (together with Admagey) of the land Molegoyók, whose house god is Kodal Melék." – I received this information in more detail. Accordingly, Mlagél, the "female birth giver", came from heaven to Nggēiāngēl and brought two pieces of money with her, one móngongāu called Gobeduól, and one galdóiog = aglass Bedúi uáŭg. She remained for a long time on the coral island, and then came to Babldáob, in order to look for a place for herself. In a Ulimáng she saw galid Godálmelég, whom she liked so much that she stayed two nights with him. Then she said to him: "Now let me look for my two children." — Those two girls, Bilměai and Bung l melīk, had fallen at the same time from heaven to Melekéiok, when she had arrived in Nggēiāngēl. Godálmelég accompanied her to Ngaramelég, the northern beach of today's Melekéiok, from where Mlagél continued alone and found her children in blai nr. III Lúkēd (see plate 5⁴) where her money also arrived. Then she fetched Godálmelég, brought him to Lúkēd¹⁷⁰ in Melekéiok and said to him: "Stay with Sagaruleóng so that you can relate my orders to the rubak." — Godálmelég replied: "My poor place Ulimáng is all alone, because you want to have me in Melekéiok." — Then she answered him: "Well! when there is a ruk-dancein Melekéiok I will give the order that gogalém "your younger brother" Ngirairúng¹⁷¹ will sit on a high a ingíng-scaffolding and a woman from Udēs has to bring him a basket up there and has to keep him company. But Ngēruliáng has to make a spear and, bedecked in decoration, he has to carry it in front of Ngirairúng to Melekéiok, while dancing and blowing the conch shell. The Udēs-woman has to give him a klsuk-piece of money, so he will be happy and satisfied. — I also heard that Ngēruláng (not Ngēruliang KUB.) manufactured the big javelin. KUB. II p. 107 mentions for this a Ulimáng, which was considered incorrect by my informants. On the other hand KUB. is right, when he says that at the celebration of a woman's feast a delegation is sent to Ulimáng, so that its people erect the mesáng, a long coconut stem with red stripes, "on the tip of which a ripe coconut is attached". It is planted into the ground of the stone pavement at the women's goiláol-dancing stage and is considered to be the god's supporting stick (skersél). Those from Ngēruláng then make a 5—10 m long spear, which is as thick as the thigh of a human being. It is made of the wood of the ukal'-tree and is called táoēd gerāu, and is forked a little bit at the tip. The men dance while they bring it and place it on the imūl-crossbeam of the bai, where also a klěāngēl-construction, made of coconut fronds, is hanging. It is the kingelél a Godálmelég, the seat of Godálmelég, from where the god can appreciate the beautiful javelin. During the ruk-dances in Melekéiok, Ulimáng does not have the right to release the secluded dancers, *oltóběd ra ruk*¹⁷², as KUB. thought, but Nggēsar. [sic] whereas in Ngērupesáng this is done by Ngaráus and Melekéiok. Ngērupesáng has the right to blow the conch shells; therefore Melekéiok does not do this. Ngērupesáng also hangs up its dancing ornaments on the rocks of Ngurutói, and not Melekéiok as KUB. says II p. 112, which throws them away. Therefore, the residence of the god was considered to be blai nr. V Ngëruléóng and on the pavement there was also his seat. KUB. V p. 33 reports about its priest; in important circumstances he got very excited and sometimes, with one tremendous blow of his fist, he scattered the bundle of areca nuts lying in front of him all over the house in a crying rage.

Constitution of Melekéiok.

bai l pelú (village house): Melekeióng A. Gosobulngau

B. Ngërúliabai galid: (god): Godálmelég

Ngaremëgaùlbai (goddess): Mlagëi

klóbak (council): Ngaramelekéiok female council: ar Udälëbíl¹⁷³

nr.:	arúbak	blai (house):	bitang	ardil (women):	kleblil (clan):	delásëg (totem):
I	a Răklai	a Udës	nr. I	Gëbirăklai	Gogad arugél	këlar ¹⁷⁴
II	Rëgëbóng	Gumëráng	" II	Gëbirëgëbóng	a Gúm	us rekúng = crab
III	Rulúkëd + (IV)	a Lúkëd	to II	Gëbirulúkëd	Ngatbúiël	us klúdël bang
IV	Ngirëkungīl	a Míd	" I	Dirëkungīl	a Míd	gai
V	Sagaruleóng +	Ngëruléóng	" I	Bil a gádlbai	a Ngëruósög	iaus gorovidël
VI	a Tkedësau	Derebeī	" II	Gëbil kedësau	a Kerurau	iaus rekúng
VII	a Regëotáog +	Ngërekungīl	" I	Diliíkr ¹⁷⁵	Ngërekungīl
VIII	Golikóng	Ngarameketí	" II	a Ilivailí	Ngarameketí
IX	Ngiratekau	Ibúngël'lagáng +	" I	Diltekau	a Tekau
X	Ngirëmáng	Ngaramáng	" II	a Isebóng	Ngaramádël
XI	Tëmakai (Tmekei)	a Derebeī	" I	Diragaritëm

II. Title XI Tëmakai (see above p. KUB. II p. 71 accounts: "The order in which two houses are standing 92) is supposed to belong here. to each other in Kauoháro¹⁷⁶ is not the same in all communities , thus

III. Is extinct, held by VI, who is a friend. for instance the houses in Molegoyok are grouped like this : nr. I with nr. II, nr. III and nr. IV, nr. V with nr. IX" etc. He considers nr. IX to

IV. is a friend of X; VIII of IX. be Tëmakai.

VII. is a friend of VIII.

klóbak (council): Ióulpelúfemale council: ar Ngarugóp

nr.:	uriúl rúbak ¹⁷⁷ (secondary chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):	further blai :
12	a Rengül ¹⁷⁸	Báolbei	Dirariúg	23. Irétëg
13	Ngiragongór	Kerdëu	—	24. Torolí
14	a Kói	a Medengelei	Gëbilruróu ¹⁷⁹	25. Kesoáng
15	a Imetúkër	Ngabárd ukál	—	26. Kluk
16	Ngiruósög	Mad l pelú	—	27. Sëgëdúi
17	Mad ra gulsíáng	Tapelúkës	Gëmetúkër	28. Iólúkëd
18	Mad ra Imí	a Lmí	—	29. Mesepeiau
19	a Ruadesúl	a Iblai	—	30. Uguldokóu
20	Kemedáol	Gëllilai	—
21	a Ruóru	Boi long	—
22	Mad re nggár	a Metáui	—

Nr. 18 is the messenger këmedángël of bitang II (side of Gumërang), whereas nr. 22 performs messenger services for a Ráklai.

nr.:	gáldëbegël (club):	Ptelúl (its head):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngarakeai	Tél'lei	D. Bai lëgäsau	Ngaragelúg	right
II "	Ngarapesás	Gádlbai (Rul)	E. Gomávëg +	"
III "	Ngaramelanggád	Golóug	F. a Ikerdëu, (45 m high)	"
I ♀	Ngaragotelóug	Kerengél	—
II "	Ngara meliúedivái	Dirateptárek	—
III "	Ngaragotilëg	a Isáng	—
I ♂	Ngaragau	a Ráklai	G. Bai lëgalíd	Gokemí	left
II "	Ngarabóiës	Gëungél	H. Gádës i gëbíl	"
II "	Ngaradmágel	Gëbiráklai
III "	Ngaraulimáng	Gogóp

Families in Melekéiok.

blai nr. I a Udës¹⁸⁰ title ♂ a Ráklai, ♀ Gëbiráklai.

In 1907, Soilóköl was holding the title a Răklai 10 (At. 2 Gen. V), married to Bílung from Keklāu (see plate 6¹). The house is situated high up on the eastern side of the place Melekeióng and is built in the form of a bai (see Figure 29). It has 6 doors to the west, to the gólbed-pavement, a stone path leads to it from the south. Here the cooking house is situated. The family is supposed to have come from Ngáruangēl, but this is denied (see story 20 of Ngáruangēl). They definitely came from a Uluáng at a Imeúngs; after the destruction of the place¹⁸¹ they moved up along the coast in order to settle on the island Ngaregúr¹⁸² on the northern tip of Babldáob. There their blai was called Ngurusoklúk, from which Túblai in Ngabúkēd comes. From Ngaregúr they came to Ngéráng, thus to Melekéiok. More about their success here on p. 95 and about the awarding of the title, which has the same meaning for the family, the place and the district on p. 99.

//104//

As far as history and tradition can be traced, the following succession of a Răklai titles developed:

1. Mlad ra makatáng, "Died at Makatáng", also Mlad re Nger'rīl, a bathing place on the western grassland.
2. Mlad rilidál, "Died at Ilidál", a place on the grassland at Ngarevíkl.
3. Mlad ra díol Goréör, "Died at the Bathing Place in Goréör", probably more correctly in Gurur, the channel of Ngarengasáng.
4. Mlad ra Bíl-Melekéiok, "died in his Bai in Melekéiok".
5. Mlad ra terétër (obviously WILSON's Gorakirú "Full Moon"), maybe also Tangēségél (see Ngk. At. 2 Gen. III), probably lived in 1784, in WILSON's time, ("Died of Influenza", which was introduced by the whites?).
6. Geltúk (At. 1 and 2 Gen. III) is supposed to have lived at WILSON's time, thus around 1780. This is hardly imaginable as he is supposed to have died around 1860 (see nr. 5). KUB. VIII p. 128 indicates Ira ñathibúkul (Ngira nēgetibúgēl KR.) as the son of this king, see Ngērupesáng.
7. Gókērangēl, is supposed to have died in 1860 (Mel. At. 2 Gen. III), his marriage to Bilung from Goréör (see Gor. At. 1 Gen. III), with which he was allied and conquered Ngivál (KUB. II p. 138): wars with Goréör (SEMP. II p. 214); when still a boy a Răklai 10 Soilóköl saw him; see the késēkes a Răklai, chant 201.
8. Tēmól Amelebóies (At. 1 Gen. IV and At. 2 Gen. V), held the title at around 1883, KUBARY's time. KUB. II p. 82 talks about him. He was friendly with Goréör, which behaved like an enemy (story 201).
9. Gerabāi (At. 2 Gen. V), also known under the name Ngiragermáng and Ngira bitálpelú. In 1906 he seems to have died, half deaf and half blind.
10. Soilóköl (At. 2 Gen. V) the a Răklai who I met in 1906–1910 (see plate 6¹); in his youth he lived for some time in Blissang (see there).

Only 7 of the title-holding women Gēbirăklai of blai Udēs are known:

4. Melámēg a desúm (At. 1 Gen. II).

5. Motongákl (At. 2 Gen. II).

//105//

6. Mekngit a kēmēdilél Telngāi (At. 2 Gen. III).

7. Diramesival, probably Diragelsóng (At. 1 and 2, Gen. III and At. 3).

8. Gopkál Dirageitei (At. 2 and 3 Gen. IV).

9. a Isebóng (At. 1, 2 and 3 Gen. V).

10. Goríběg was the title-holding woman in 1910 (At. 2 and 3 Gen. V).

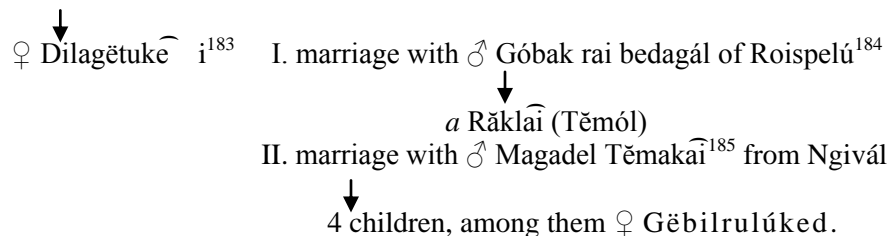

I could learn only very little about the time of Gēbil 4 Meláměg a desúm. As she already dates back 150 years, therefore today's Palauans have no more memory of her. However, Kubary II p. 40 fortunately told us something, as he had the chance to research shortly after 1880. According to him the following was compiled:

Family Tree According to KUBARY1880

overview in At. 1 p. 108; unfortunately KUBARY's list was lost.

Around 150 years ago, there were two lines — "thighs" vág the natives call it — one with Dilamíd (KUB. Ardil Amid) as mother, the other one with Meláměg a desúm (KUB. Malamak a došúm).

The line of Dilamíd soon died out:

KUB. II, p. 42 says: "4 more children, of which only one woman, today's Kabilrulúkut, survived without having any descendants. With the death of those two members of Bitangwak, this one will be extinguished, and after some time the remaining one will again split up in two Bitangwaks." This at around 1880. In the year 1910 all this had long ago taken place.

At the time when Dilamíd must have been the woman of the house of blai nr. IV a Mid, then Gēbilrulúked was the title-holding woman of blai nr. III a Lukēd. The notes about this and about the second "thigh" are very interesting in KUBARY. He continues:

"According to genealogical order the step sister¹⁸⁶ of today's Araklay¹⁸⁷ should be Kabileraklay, but because she was the daughter of Arulukut (chief nr. III in Molegoyok) and all the women in his blay died, she inherited the female title Kabilrulúkut, nr. III in the female government. But now she should also accept Kabileraklay, which is hardly possible, concerning the other blay's [sic], even more so, as she had no descendants and Bitang Wak did not have any women. Then she is also not the oldest woman of the clan, because among the descendants of Ardil a Kelšo lives the second eldest daughter Ardir a Keytéy¹⁸⁸, who is about 60 years old today and who should have the title. She however refuses to take it, as she knows that Aaraklay would not like to give it and he, again, does not put any pressure on her to accept it. This Ardir a kaytey is the Kourod¹⁸⁹ of the house Udus and actually its Kabil erakláy. According to the law, her son Irakelšo should be the next Araklay, but in fact he is younger than the son of Maderey, the third daughter of Dila Kelso. Therefore this one is the acknowledged successor and Irakelso will be Araklay V."

In fact Gerabāi, the son of Maderēi became Rāklāi 9 whereas the son of her older sister Dirageitei (on At. 2 she is the older one), Ngiragelsóng (plate 2 Meráp) was killed before he could hold the title . The above - mentioned Ardir a Keytey (Dirageitei) did become Gebirāklāi 8 (see Gopkál, At. 2 Gen. IV).

Remark to At. 2.

My research about the family of blai nr. I a Udēs took place about 30 years after KUBARY. In the following family tree, the special research of my interpreter William Gibbon has been extracted. For Meláměg a desúm he noted Gēbil 2 Motongákl. According to him, this woman has 7 children. It seems that KUBARY's two vag-thighs were mixed up here. As the descendants of Diragelsóng (gen III) were not complete enough, I bring my own research in At. 3, which differs only slightly from At. 2.

According to Kubary's copy of the text, the second bital vág of Meláměg a desúm, which still flourishes today, is the following (my way of writing in parenthesis):

♀ Malamak a dosúm marriage to (Regetáog) nr. VII in Melekéiok

KUBARY's survey is presented here. He announced a list like this, but it seems to have been lost. It has been combined into a family tree

Genealogical Chart 1 (Mel. At. I) according to KUB. II p. 40

(the names have been written according to my correction)

//108//

ABTHEILUNG III.

[illegible]

At. 2 u. 3 s. Anhang.

¹ Gerabai; er wurde a Räklaⁱ 9.

² v. Rois pelú.

³ Alter Titel von Melekiök, s. o.

¹ Diraudès s. Gor. At. 1 Gen. II: s. At. 2 Gen. III.

Gen. VII

 $\cdot \quad V$

IV (vergl. At. 1
u. Ngk. At. 3)

III ∞ Bleágēd vom blai I in Ngarekeai
(Ngk At. 3 Gen. III)

• II

² KUB. IV S. 89 erwähnt einen Ira kelso, der mit der Tochter der a Ibēdul verheiratet und einer der nächsten Nachfolger des a Rāklaī sei.

Ahnentafel 3 (Mel. At 3) (eigene Aufnahmen)
a Rāklaī 9, 10
und Gēbīlāklaī 7—10

Zu Seite 108

Gen. VIII

• VII

• VI

• V

• IV

• III

1 Kind
+

1 Sohn
a Ibēdul

1. I.
♀ Dirarois ∞ Gudūi
v. Ngivāl

2. I.
♂ Berēl

3. I.
♀ a Duāl
+ jung

1.—3.
♀ Dillaur ♂ Winkler ♀ Diratege-bóiet
♀ a Iblai
♀ Diragolngabáng

1. 2.
♀ Lati ♀ Turágel jung

1.—3.
♂ Lomisáng ♀ Tengránger ♀ Dirasegēdūi

1.
♂ Risóng

1. ♂ Tel'lei
2. ♀ a Regú-ger
+ 18. VII.
1910

1. ♀ Mlagei
2. ♂ Golóug
3. I.
♀ Sermóng ∞ Golekebai
v. Ngivāl

1. ♀ Gosisáng ∞ Demei
v. Ngarevikl
(getrennt)

2. ♀ a Jelód
Ehe ♂ Kind.

3. ♂ Temól

4. ♀ a Ilóng
Ehe mit
a Umáng
s. Goréör
At 4.

5. ♂ a Rgeiángel

6. ♂ Kloulábak

7. ♀ Gomtilóu

8. 9. 10.
♂ Marsil
usw.
2 +

1. ♀ Gogop
∞ Rekevis Madralni
v. Melek.
∞ II Ngítong
v. Nggēsár

2. ♀ Gēbi
regebóng
+ jung

3. ♀ Dira
goeól ∞ Ngauákl
v. Ngivāl

1.—3. 1.
♂ Gobak +
♀ a Imedú + ♂ Kerai +

4. II.
♀ Kerengiliángēd
∞ I Gaseóg
v. Ngivāl
∞ II. Ngiraidid
v. Keklau

5. II.
♀ Dirasmól ∞ Mongki
v. Melek

6. II.
♀
a Umai

1. I.
♂ Geángel
∞ a Uaráng
v. Melek

2. I.
♂ Ngira-meril ∞ Dira-makér
v. Ngēru-pesáng

3.—6. II
jung
♂ Mad ♀ Diragebibi ♀ Ngēdikēs ♂ Ngira-mokokir

1. ♂ Gerābai
a Rāklaī 9 ∞ Ngedikes
v. Ngivāl

1. ♀ Ngirarois
(bl. II. Goréör)

2. ♀ Ngaburég

1. ♀ a Isebóng
Gēbil 9

2. ♀ a Ikebúi

3. ♂ a Uldák
Ngirakéd
∞ Délilau
(bl. 25 Goréör)
(Gor. At. 2
Gen. V.)

1. I ♀ Goribég Gēbil 10

2. I ♂ Melongóies ∞ Dirabög
v. Ngērupesáng

3. II ♂ Soilókol a Rāklaī 10
∞ I Bilung
v. Keklau (Taf. 6³)
∞ II. a Lkóng
v. Ngivāl

4. ♂ Gelug
+ jung

5. ♀ Kerengēl
Diratpekerdáng

6. ♂ Rul
Gádlbai ∞ Risong
v. blai II
in Melek

7. ♀ Kóu
+

1.
♀ Motól ∞ Ngiraklón
v. Melek

2.
♀ Rolmi Gēbirulákéd
Nr. III v. Melek
∞ I Rēgēlák
v. a Irai
∞ II. Terturúieg
v. Nggēsár

3.
♂ Gémauráel
∞ I. Taragól a Iriáng
v. Ngērupesáng
(s. Gor. At. 5 Gen. V)
∞ II. Telbóng
v. Gámliangēl

1. ♀ Maderei ∞ Ngira kerekeril
v. Goréör (bl. I)

2. ♂ Ngirusebluk
Beóg ∞ Rengil v.
Ngarekobasáng

3. ♀ Gopkál
Dirageitei
Gēbil 8
∞ Ngirageitei
v. Gokúl

4. ♀ Dira bílang Regekéd
∞ I Ngiragád v. bl. II
Melekēiok
∞ II a Ugerpelau
(s. At. 2)

5.
♀ Diragotóng a Ibtóg
∞ Delūs v. Nggēsár

♀ Diragelsóng (s. At. 2)
(Gēbiregebóng) (Gēbil 7?)
∞ a Umig v. Nggēsár

blai nr. II Guměráng.

Title: ♂ Rěgěbóng, ♀ Gěbirěgěbóng,

in former times here also the title Těmakā i (see above p. 92), west of rubak-bai A. Gosobulngāu, situated on the embankment, with the front looking out over the big stone pavement. See also story 200.

♀ Gěbirěgěbóng Várang marriage to ♂ Golekebāi in Ngivál.

↓
a) ♂ Ngiragorágěl marriage to Sukikāu from Ngērupesáng

↓
♂ young
♂ a Ltebángěl Ngiraguměráng I. marriage to ♀ a Nglás in Goréōr see there blai 14 Tamarikél the descendents
II. marriage to ♀ Múlugur + in Ngarbagéd

↓
o
Risong in At. 3 Gen. V (see plate 6²) is also a descendant of blai nr. II.

blai No. III. Lúkěd

Title: ♂ Rulúkěd, ♀ Gěbirúlukěd; on the northern path.

a) ♂ Ngiráuğěsbai Rulúkěd +
b) ♂ Ngirakesāu marriage to ♀ Tungelél from Ngivál

↓
a) ♂ Meltél marriage to Kerengél from Melekéiok (no children)
b) ♂ Misár " Ovesebék from Ngivál (")
c) a Guóděł'lagád ráibai +

↓
a) ♂ Lebilau marriage to ♀ Ngedért from Ngarengasáng (no children)
b) ♀ Gesegól " ♂ Góbak from Ngaregolóng (")

blai nr. IV. a Míd

Titel: ♂ Ngirěkungīl, ♀ Dirěkungīl.

This blai does not have many people; Gesegól from blai nr. III has the ♀ title; she was adopted. The woman Rikad did not get the title, because she married into Ngarbagéd. At feasts, the women of the house wear grass skirts decorated with phaeton-feathers (tropic bird, dudek) (KUB. VIII p. 215).

♀ Rikád marriage to ♂ Ngiraibúog from Ngarbagéd.

↓
o ♂ Ngirěkungīl Geterógel marriage to ♀ Medelemáng from a Ulimáng.

o
↓

blai nr. V Ngëruléóng.

Title: ♂ Sagaruléóng, ♀ Bil a Gádlbai;

long ago extinct, so that in 1883 its title was transferred to KUBARY. It was the residence of the priest Godálmelég, who had his seat on the stone pavement in front of the house. In 1907, a Răklai built a guesthouse for the government instead of the old house place; in front of his own house.

2. Ngërupesáng.

KUB. Ngarupesáng, "the fourth village of Molegoyok".

Description of the place (plan 8): — Above, in the section about Melekéiok (p. 90) it has already been mentioned that about 300 m from the western trailhead a Ibeságël the upper trailhead of Ngërupesáng is situated, where the tet-shrine Golsúgël stands (s. p. 89). The 130 m long stone path leads, in-between the compounds, in a south-eastern direction steeply down. It passes the rubak-bai A Goldesei where a kadám-woodenimage¹⁹⁰ and the boat gáus a galíd that is dedicated to him were hanging. In 1907, a four-legged tet-cupboard, dedicated to the god a Ugél'lēgalid, stood at its front gable, nicely framed by red blooming Ixora bushes. But it was no longer the one that KUB. V plate 3 and in color KUB. VIII plate XXXIV² depicted. On its northern side KUBARY's photograph shows a stone column, about 80 cm high, with a broad stone head on top, "the stone seat of the god Angel le Kalid". Another plate depicts the home of the priest, a blai with 3 doors and a door at the gable side, next to it an ulangáng-spirit hut. Finally a 3rd plate shows blai Ngarasiás with 4 doors and next to it a sun-hut and a kumerëu-fish-post¹⁹¹. I could not find either blai any more.

On the other hand, kldok-bai B. a Ilíud was still standing, which, according to the information of my guide, was once the home of the Kubary family. It stands below on the flat land where the stone path coming from above ends. This one then leads on as a dam crossing over the taro patch towards the beach, passing in between the two bai C and E to the beach where it ends at the landing place a Ibaï. From the sandy beach you have a nice view to the south (s. Kr. IV Figure 5).

Privileges: — Blowing the conch shell during the big ruk-dances (s. Ngarbagéd, a Iraï and Ngátpang); attaching the wooden idols, king fisher and frigate bird, in Ngurutóí (KUB. II p. 108 and 112 not Melekéiok), as a Ugél'lēgalid is considered to be the inventor of the ruk-dance and its gorovidël-symbolic ornaments. The release of the dancers is a responsibility of Ngaráus and Melekéiok. The dancers are secluded for 1 month; the bai is fenced (KUB. II p. 106). A family has the right to present its dead on a ngot-taropounding board; during a funeral in Ngërámës Ngërupesáng receives a full pot of palm syrup and vice versa (KUB. III p. 11).

History: — Ngërupesáng was always closely related to the main village, sharing its history in many ways. Its god a Ugél'lēgalíd and the reason of the relationship between Ngërupesáng and Ngarbagéd on Goréör because of him, is told in story 195. According to it Ngërupesáng is the mostly a settlement of people from Ngarbagéd, whose leader Gobágēlbagēlsekerél¹⁹² became a Ugél'lēgalíd, thus as a god he belongs to both villages¹⁹³. Even today the young people from Ngarbagéd, called a Tumúk, have the right to take over the offices and titles of the people from Ngërupesáng, called ar Meltél. In fact, there are several titles existing in both places, such as ar Ngēlitēl, Bagékldil, Dingeliús, Búikiegád, Gabás, Dirutungelí, Diradelbógēl, Ngiripkál, etc. This alone would already indicate a close relationship, even were it not historically confirmed. Due to the god, who freed Melekéiok, this place is exempt from delivering móngol, even though it is subordinate. Men from Ngërupesáng are not allowed to marry woman from Melekéiok, but the reverse does not hold true. Without any doubt, story 98 is also related to a Ugél'lēgalíd, where the drifting of the middle part of snake Ngirate¹⁹⁴ i in Ngërupesáng is mentioned. The bersóiög-snake from Melekéiok (s. p. 96) comes also in contact with the village. The bersóiög-mother of Gorágēl is buried at blai nr. VIII (s. story 13), therefore it is also called Bersóiög. blai 17, the worst situated in the taro swamps, was the house of Gobágēlbagēlsekerél, who was just mentioned.

Constitution of Ngërupesáng.

bai l pelú (village house): A. Goldesēi.

armeāu (people): *ar Meltél*¹⁹⁴.

galíd (god): a Ugél'lēgalíd.

klóbak (council): Ngaregoldesípēl female council: ar Ngēlitēl

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs)	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Ngiraingás	a Ingás	Bagékldíl
II	Ngirasegēsóng	Segēsóng	a Mlageī
III	Ngiramangángēd	Ngaramangángēd	Diragáng
IV	Ngirasúg	a Súg	Dirasúg
V	Dingeliús	a Ugélkúmēr	Diradelbógēl
VI	Ngiripkál	Gēbūl	Diragēbūl
VII	Ngiratmilegól	a Dók	Dirutungelí
VIII	Ngirabersóiög	Bersóiög +	Diripkál
IX	Búikiegád	Kutór	Gábás
X	Dingeliús	Gēmau telngál	Kēmēdángēl

Further blai: 11. *a*Idēdegeī. 12. Gēbūl (VI). 13. Gēmaurāel. 14. Pisēang. 15. Dok. 16. Remét. 17. Goeáol. 18. Gēmaudíms. 19. a Iriáng. 20. Ngētāgābáp. 21. Ngirak. 22. Uósčg. 23. Ngabekóng.

nr.:	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):
I ♂	Ngargosigí	C. a Ugularóro ¹⁹⁵	right: a Ilíud
I ♀	Ngaragoróu	—
II ♂	Ngaragēkíl	D. Gálablapl +
II ♀	Ngaragáp	— E. a Ibāi	a Idēsemáng

3. Ngērámēs (KUB. Ngarámas)

also called Ngēráng, is actually a village part of Melekéiok. At the description of the place its situation was sketched (see plan 8). It lies south of point Gogibērámēs; its name derives from olegīb Ngērámēs, "Sailing Around Ngērámēs"; it is situated on a beautiful sandy beach. Concerning its privileges see Ngērupesáng.

History. — Before the arrival of the Rāklaī, Ngēráng was the residence of rubak nr. I Tēmakaī; this title is kept today in blai nr. II Gumeráng in Melekéiok (s. above p. 102).

As mentioned above on p. 92, the founder of the place came from the Gogeál Ngurukdápēl, where now lies point Ngaramedíu. Once settled, the inhabitants of the villages Ngarevíkl, Golívěg and Ngēbúrěg were oppressed. They were freed by a Ugēllēgalíd who settled his people in the nearby Ngērupesáng.

How galíd Medegeī pélau came to Ngērang is not clear. We have to assume that the Gorágēl in story 13 is also one of the creations of the god, because he lured the people of the place with their bersákl-net to the horizon of the sea. Even today they are still standing in the sky as Bersákl a rirámēs. In the west of Melekéiok is also the so-called bersákl-forest (see plan 3).

Constitution.

bai l pelú (village house): Ngartélilap +

klóbak (council): Ngartélilap galíd (god): Medegeī pélau.

female council: ar Turáng

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Ióbog	a Iëgëteî	Gobilióbog
II	a Iúg	Ngësegúsũm +	Gobiliúg
III	a Rekeríkl	a Derebeî	Gëbirekeríkl
IV	Gádlbai	Gókebai	Dibúk
V	Golikóng	a Lengĩl +	Diragëbibeî
VI	Bedúl	Ngaramesëgëdúi +	—
VII	a Iegád	a Tmangëdóng +	—
VIII	a Remengeruáng	a Idëgedágël +	—
IX	Golikó remedú	Ngaremedú +	—
X	a Mad raió	a Kíu +	—

Further blai: 11. Kerekeróng. 12. Ngësebeî. 13. Ngarsmageî. 14. Gomeogáng. 15. a Ugelmedú. 16. Metúkër.

galdebegel (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):
—	a Melbai +	r. Dagëdágël
—	a Dĩm +	l. —

KUB. V p. 61 also mentions a beach called Dorangol.

4. Ngaremelég

situated on Rois melég, directly in the north of taog Gokemĩ, on the flat sandy beach of Ngëruliáng (s. plan 8). It belongs to Melekéiok and has no rubak of its own. Here the galid DedëbeIngót, who removed arms and legs when he slept and called them when he needed them. There are 4 blai on both sides of a small stream, which flows into the sand (meráp). 1. Telbéket. 2. Mangesebár. 3. Ngaruósëg. 4. Mimai. 5. boat house.

5. Ngëruliáng

(also pronounced Ngërúliang, KUB.: Ngaruliáng).

Description of the place (see plan 8): When you mount northward from Melekéiok at bai Gádës i gëbil (near the boat house Gokemĩ), after crossing a height of ca. 50 m (about $\frac{1}{2}$ km as the crow flies) you arrive on the summit, at the trailhead of Ngëruliáng. The stone path, leading down, first turns to the east, then continuing in a north northwestern direction it passes kldókbai A a Idís, which, situated about 20 m high, offers a beautiful view to the north. Finally the path drops north northeast steeper than before to the beach, to the táog a Ipëlaũ of today. Both former taog a Idís and Meléngël are now deserted, just as the whole village is very reduced.

The entire stone path is ca. 350 m long. According to oral tradition, in former times the sea reached all the way to the foot of the mountain, where now is an ilíud-pavement, inland from the boathouse at the trailhead, which stands on the 20 m wide beach. But the sea is already starting to wash away the sand (the coral reef is here a few 100 m wide). This can easily be deduced from some coconut palms that have been detached from the beach and some of which have already crumbled. 200 m south of the boat-house is a rocky point, called Pkul a bekóng, which, coming from the south, cuts the sandy beach into two parts. From here Blissang + is in NW to N in the Ngama i Bay. In the west of the mountain is a valley with taro patches. There on the steep slope lies also the only rubak-blai nr. I.

Constitution.

bai l pelú (village house): A. a Melók

galíd (god): Medegei pélau

klóbak (council): Ngaramelók female council: ar Márëk dóko

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house)	ardil (women):
I	Ngirakúmër	Ngaragádës	Golsivékl
II	Gorukei	Tapelngesíl +	Kosëkesí
III	Ngirageisau	Geisau +	Dirageisau
IV	Ngiraderebei	Derebei +	Diraderebei
V	Ngiramëgau	Ngaramëgau +	Dira mëgau
VI	Ngiragalsau	Galsau +	Dira mel'lóng
VII	Ngiraikelau	a Ikelau +	Diraikelau
VIII	Ngiraiebúkùl	a Iebúkùl +	Diraiebúkùl
IX	a Ingëbáng	a Delbógël +	Diraingabáng
X	—	—	—

Further blai: 11. a Idúdës. 12. Mesengabáng. 13. Medáragól. 14. Mesivál.

nr.:	gáldëbegël (club):	bai (club-house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngarablekál'l	a Idís (kldók)	a Idís	Right
♀	Ngarabudekelei	—
II ♂	Ngara gebúgëp	Melëngël +	Melëngël	Left
♀	Ngaraketau

6. Ngëbúrëg,

(KUB. Ngabúrok), north of Ngëruliáng, situated in the southern part of the Ngama i Bay. It belongs to Melekéiok, according to KUB. II p. 116 "the sixth village of Molegoyók".

The two-headed galíd a Igól of Melekéiok stood here at a trailhead and killed all the people passing by (s. log on the southern gable of the rubak-bai Gosobulngau in Melekéiok).

History. — According to KUB. II p. 117 the inhabitants came from Ngardolólók on Pelíliou; apparently this was a later immigration than the people of Ugélkeklāu in story 8. As galíd they brought a Guódēl from there and came via Nggēsar and Ngaragolil. Therefore friendship ties exist between Ngēbúrēg and Keklāu. At first Ngēbúrēg was old Melekéiok's oppressor, but then was conquered by it, as mentioned above on p. 93, it became kér and had to deliver bai girls. The rubak of the place had to deliver a yearly tribute of breadfruit to Melekéiok or some food for Ngaramelkeióng.

Blai nr. II Ngēruríkl became rich due to a woman who was fetched and raised by Golik reidáp buruógül (story 91). Also story 90 about the riamēl-tree takes place here.

Constitution of Ngēbúrēg.

bai l pelú (village house): Ngaramadelibáng

galíd (god): a Guódēl

klóbak (council): Ngaramadelibáng

female council: Rubagád

nr.:	arubak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Ngirangētibúgēl	Ngaregelngáel	Gobagád rebúsēg
II	Ngiruríkl	Ngēruríkl	Gobagád ra belēlai
III	a legád raikelāu	a Ikelāu	Gobagád railalītēl
IV	Gosilék	Gogáoel	Gobagád ragogáoel
V	a Rekabráng	Ngabīs	—
VI	a Isevēi	Ngaramel'long +	—
VII	a Rekulúl	Kivár +	—
VIII	Ngiramék	a Mék +	—
IX	Melégēs	Kuapēsngás +	—
X	Madrasipēklí	a Tegētáng +	—

nr.:	gáldēbegēl (club)	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I	Ngaradúdek	Garemrou +	Garemrou	Right
I	Ngaramelegóteg	Iklbai ¹⁹⁶	Iklbai	Left

7.Ngarevíkl,

(KUB.: Ngaruíkl), belongs to Bitál i ráel.

Description of the place (plan 9): — Its táog flows into the sea at the island Ngurutói where in 1910 a Japanese trading station was situated.

Two landing places, the southern one Ngasuás, and a northern one Kedáol next to bai C. Kedáol where also the club bai B. Iklbai is situated. A stone path leads from both places to the middle of the settlement, where the bai l pelú Ngariúng is situated; it is also called Ngërusrmóu after the council of the chiefs. From here a stone path leads to the west over a stream to a nearby mountain ridge.

Plan 9.

History. — Was a suppressor of Melekéiok (s. above p. 93). The village god Mangerengúr le goálåg "The One Who Eats Sea Urchins" (KUB. Mongorngúl goálak) came from Ngaregól on Pelíliou; this is why Ngaregól and Ngarevíkl have friendship ties. Incidentally Medegēi pélau took the sea urchin from Ngarevíkl (see story 197) and threw it away at Malspásp. The galid was very powerful, as story 97 of rub. nr. I Tāgetbós shows, who brought the betel-vine from heaven to earth and first planted it at blai nr. IX Nagramadeliáng. Rekesiváng from story 96 came from Ngivál where he was rub. nr. VIII of Ngaremegāu. The former rubak-bai is also mentioned in the story as a Merekí. The wife of Melogótog agāu (story 155) was from here.

Constitution of Ngarevíkl.

bai l pelú (village house): A. Ngërusrmóu (Ngariúng) galíd (god): Mangerengúr le goálåg.

klóbak (council): Ngarusrmóu.

female council: Dórom kerīk¹⁹⁷

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Tāgetbos	Turekédáng	Gēbiltāgebós
II	a Remongosóng	Delkóng	Guodēl'lagád
III	Kolebás	Gomangīl	Diludúg
IV	a Rbád	Gongēvíkl	Tebrák
V	a Repangaláp	Kosengóbēl	Dirē bangaláp
VI	Gad ē lúgēl	Sēbal +	Dilēgadēlúgēl
VII	a Rkengés	Tualói	Dirēkengés
VIII	a Rēkesúk	Tagamér	Dirē kesúk
IX	Mad ra golóug	Ngaramadeliáng	Diratmilkólk
X	Gabēkēu	Godúg +	Diratmerabángēl

nr.:	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house)	taog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngara goruīdēl	B. Iklbai C. Kedáol	Kedáol	Right
II ♂	Ngaramangataū	D. Melómēs +	Ngasuás	Left
I ♀	Ngaravól
II ♀	Ngaramererēk

Landing place: a Lúang.

Deserted Places of Bitál i rael.

8. Ngarekutelíng +, situated north of Ngarevíkl.
9. Golívěg +, situated north of Ngarevíkl, formerly one of Melekéiok's oppressors, or Ngērámēs, later conquered (see above p. 93).
10. Ngēvarai +, situated south of Ngērupesáng.
11. Ngēruláng (or Ngērulásāg) +, situated south of Ngērupesáng. According to KUB. V p. 50, there is a stone representing god Gorekím in Ngarulang. During a long period of peace, the god of war possesses a man and has to be exorcised; this is accomplished by throwing spears, made of some soft stems, etc., at the possessed person.
12. Ngaragohil +, KUB. II p. 117 mentions it. People of a Ugélkeklāu founded it on the hills before they reached Ngēbúrěg (see above).
13. Ngatēlngál +, north of Melekéiok, see introduction p. 85.
14. Ngēriváng + situated north of Ngēbúrěg.
15. Ngiptál +. According to the legend a settlement on the reef-island with the same name, which was formed on the sandy reef south of the bay Ngamai, yet a flood following a storm destroyed it, just like Ngáruangēl, north of Nggeiangēl and a Ugél pelú east of the harbor Malágal. The well-known legend of the breadfruit tree that gave fish (story 19) takes place here. KUB. II p. 119 says: "In the east of Ngival lies the land Ngípkal. From its descendants two families still live there, Ngasabéy and Suisobóy. They brought with them the knowledge of the gods Mangidap el brutkóul and Korról. They still venerate them today with a cult. In case of sickness in their family they go to the place of the sunken land, eat there and throw some food into the sea." — Mangidáp (see story 12) is supposed to come from there (KUB. V p. 29).

16. Blissang +

(SEMP.: Rablissa, KUB.: Blossáol), belongs to Bitál i rael. It was only deserted after 1860. In former times, it was an important place in the innermost corner of the Ngamai Bay that cuts into the land north of Melekéiok. On the landing place of the former village lies now a Japanese trading station. On the newest chart of the Admiralty (R.M.A. II) the point is indicated too much to the west. It lies in the NW to N from Pkul a bekóng (Ngëruleiáng) and in SW to W from Pkulatáp rivál.

History: — Story 88 about Rebábag and the grateful birds is well known; story 89 about the moray eel of Blissang is mentioned at Ngarebökú. But story 17a of Tipëtip a kmiëg has to be mentioned especially, in which the high woman Dil a garár is also mentioned and as woman nr. I aIlengeî and Dira urák. Blissang also belongs to those villages that conquered Melekéiok in the old days (KUB. II p. 116). After the destruction of Ngardma u (see there) the inhabitants that had escaped lived for a long time here; a Răklai Soilókol still saw them when he was young, and lived himself for some time here. Blissang destroyed Ngarbagéd re ngül (dist. V).

Concerning the constitution only little known. There were 2 village parts:

Ngamongóng:	Ngëdíp:
rub. nr. I a Reksíd in blai Barkóu	Ngiraurak in blai a Urák
" " II a Rebábag	Tivangel " " Ngaremasëngós
klóbak (council): Ngaregëmongóng	Ngarulegau
táog (channel): a Gertóng	Ngareklím
17. Ngkár + next to bay Ngamái.
18. Ngareëmërag + "
19. aImólog + "
20. Ngapedegál + "

21.—37. Kivelül or Ngivál is a collective name for a few small villages, all of them situated north of the bay Ngamái, mainly between the hill Ngarségël with point Pkulatáp rivál¹⁹⁸ and point Ngëráir that forms the border to the district Ngarárd (see there) (see Figure 48 in Vol. I p. 241). A long and beautiful sandy beach lies between both these points. What is understood to be Ngivál today (with the galíd-god Nirungór) are actually the four village parts Ngaremegáu and Ngarsengái in the south and Ngaregëlūk next to Ngel'lau in the north, separated by the stream Gomoágël and a hill. The deserted villages see on p. 124.

Concerning the presence of minerals, see Vol. I p. 234 and KUB. VIII p. 185: "The type of rock is a finely grained sort, which is only found on the eastern shore of Ngival", it is used for smoothing.

Description of the place (see plan 10). — Landing places are at the sandy beach shaded by abundant trees. In the north, the one of Ngaregëlūk at point Ngëráir is called aBelód, and the one of Ngel'laú is called aSims. South, at the point of Ngivál is Golobdáng, the one of Ngaremegáú. From each place a beautiful stone path leads to the west more than 500 m inland in order to reach the village parts that lay in the sun without any particular decoration of trees. In the north you cross extensive taropatches, until you reach the houses of Ngaregëlúk, and even there bai F. Bairalápek (in 1907 I also heard the name Ngomelákl for it) is still surrounded by fields. Then the stone path bends to the north and mounts the app. 40 m high hill. It passes bai l pelú a Iptáges, of which in 1910 only the southern bai A . Gosobulngáú was still standing. On the summit, the stone quad of the club bai C. Ngaremerdél could still be seen on the west side of the path.

Plan 10.

From Ngaragëlūk you cannot see the southern part of Ngaremegāu, because a small hill is situated between them. Therefore, you can reach it on a similar stone path leading from the landing place Golobdáng on the beach to the west. But this road soon curves to the south. Here is Ngarsngāi with rubak-bai A Ikesúk. South of it the stone path forks to the west. Due to lack of time I could not follow it. It is supposed to lead into the area of the river Ngareböökú. But the main path where the important place Ngaremegāu is situated leads in the south to the hill Ngarségēl (which could be seen from the mountain Ngarapkngēi in Keklāu) and its eastern border forms Pkulatáp rivál. A broad trailhead lies on the summit from where you have a beautiful view over the bay Ngamaī and Melekéiok . A pointed mountain further to the west is called Ked rengivál, also called Blil Meregórog böökú¹⁹⁹; you can see it exactly in the north from Rois ra bések near Goikúl.

History: — Ngivál has been mentioned early, because one of the stone posts of the galid remained at the point of Ngivál (story 5). That this event stands in a relationship with the place itself is probable because the main settlement Ngaremegāu obviously got its name from the galid -bai Ngaruēlēgāu, which was also called Bai remegāu, like the rubak-bai of Ngivál-village. How this really happened I could not learn (see above p. 39).

Story 8 tells about the visit of a Ugélkeklāu.

In former times, Ngivál seems to have been free and independent, but around 1840 it was brought under the power of Melekéiok by a Rāklāi Gókērangēl, who, in order to do so, unfortunately united with his enemy Goréör. KUB. p. 138 says "there was much shooting, one single man was killed and Ngival ran away, in order to return as a humbled ally who was robbed of its money". In due course, Ngivál had to deliver bai-girls to Melekéiok. Story 207 tells of a former a Rāklāi who destined Ngivál as a place of murder for a club of a Imeúngs, in order not to soil the holy ground of Melekéiok²⁰⁰. Another defeat of Ngivál, where "many of its inhabitants" were killed, can be deduced from the string game Ardelép a Ngiwal "The Spirit Souls of Ngiwal", which P. RAYMUND cites on p. 52. "The rest fled to friendly villages". The game shows us the souls of the killed ones. — Finally another destruction of Ngivál by Ngabúkēd and the revenge of the courageous Ngira ngēmēlās from Ngarsngāi (story 60). Story 51 shows that for a long time Ngivál was also a subject of the people from Ngarárd. Otherwise, Ngivál also had a lot of fights; if we only remember the battle at the a Iveltáng-basin in story 73 and the fights of a Ugél re gulsiáng, the winged hero, who died at Ngërair (story 204). The courageous Ngiraiderebeî from Ngaremegâu is part of story 161. The name Rekesiváng, rub nr. VIII from Ngaremegâu is obviously connected with Ngivál (see story 96). The reason for all these fights was galid Ngirungór, who aspired to supreme power, as told in story 204 and about Ngardmâu. Those who were conquered had to push driftwood sideways, they had to pay tribute, deliver women, etc. Probably this galid is also a form of Medegeîpélau, which can be deduced from the fact that, like in Gólei, Ngabiúl and a Iraî, a two-storey goutáng-bai also stood in Ngaragëlúk, which KUBARY still saw (see his picture KUB. VIII plate 32). Also Mer'rongór of Ngaragëlúk (see there and story 5) points to this fact. Just like in Ngardmâu and in a Iraî the dugong bracelet that only priests are allowed to wear (KUB. VIII p. 176) is also dedicated to the galid. KUB. V p. 27 mentions Kaymagey as the wife of Ngirungór.

21. Ngaremegâu.

(KUB. Ngaramakhau)

Constitution.

bai l pelú (village house): Bairemegâu A. Gosobulngâu and B. Bilekélëk + galid (god): Gomúiëk (KUB. Omuyuk).

klóbak (council): Ngaremegâu female council: ar Blëgútël

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	ardil (women):
I	Ngira ngësegeî	Ngësegeî	I	Dilsegeî
II	Ngirangetkebúi	a Uger'riáng	II	Diltkebúi
III	Galëgúes	Mëkár	to I	Diragalëgóng
IV	a Iblūk	a Ugësbaî	" II	Mekús
V	Baklím	a Idëlebekai+	" I	Dirabaklím
VI	Ngiraiderebeî	a Iderebeî	" II	Dirai derebeî
VII	Madrangíüel	Ngadau	" I	Gúbël
VIII	Rekesiváng	Ngimák	" II	Diratmekebúd
IX	a Remókët	a Truartiógël	" I	Búklpelú
X	Ilapekesíkës	Bital'lăgáng	" II	—

Fam. nr. I is obviously KUBARY's Ngasabey (see 15 Ngíptál). In story 12 the daughter of the house Túrang re ngësegeî is mentioned. Nr. II is the merédër, the actual leader.

nr.:	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house):	tāog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngarangemóiel	C. Lild	Lild	right
II ♂	Ngaratógēdulik	D. Goeáng +
III ♂	Ngaratetldúi	E. Kélebid ²⁰¹ +
I ♀	Ngaragotíleg
II ♀	Ngarabutiliáng
I ♂	Ngarametelíng	F. Gobēdí	Gobēdí	left
II	Ngaramekebúd	G. Mangasēbár
I ♀	Ngaragaláp
II	Ngaramedēdekódek

Landing place: Golobdáng.

22. Ngarsngai.

(KUB. Ngarsngay)

Constitution.

bai l pelú (village house): a Ikesúk

galíd (god): a Ugél'lēgalíd (KUB.)

klóbak (council): Ngaraikesúk female council: ar Gēluāis

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Riúmd	Ngēmēlās	a Guódēl'lägád
II	Sikesól	Bab l blai	a Ilengei
III	Ngiragēbíbēg	Telemētang	a Diltül
IV	NgirangetvéI	Ngarangás	Diregebíbēg
V	Ngiragētumai	Gētumái	Ngedekúl'l
VI	a Regemáng	Geridél	Diratmolál
VII	Ilapelú	Ngērekesulang	Buk l pelú
VIII	Ngirasóud	Dúlei	Kemkom
IX	a Sekoáng	Ngedmáng	Telebúdel
X	a Ilóu	a Tegedóng +	Goreóng

23. Ngaregēlūk.²⁰²

(KUB. Ngaragolúuk)

Constitution.

bai l pelú (village house): a Iptágēs

A. Gosobulngau and B. Bilekélěk +

galíd (god): Ngirungór

klóbak (council): ar Mader'rák female council: ar Guódēl'lägád

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house)	bitang (side):	ardil (women):
I	a Guóng	Ngarüëós	I	Guóděł'lägád
II	Ngiráibai	a Ibai	II	" raibai
III	Sagarkebúr	Ngarterór	to I	a Ilagebís
IV	a Mísěg	Ngeskebés	" II	Dilsagamīs
V	Ngiradngér	a Dngér	" I	Títai
VI	Ngireví	Ngëreví	" II	Gúgap
VII	Ngiruëós	Mederemél	" I	Tungelél
VIII	Suaramangei	Goperdóng ²⁰³	" II	—
IX	Ngirabănggál	Komióng +	" II	—
X	a Isokelí	Ngëreketuráng	" I	— blai nr. I Ngarüëós is considered to be one of the wealthiest houses (story 20). As mentioned in story 51, the priest of galíd Mer'rongór seems also to be the master of the house, just as it is custom in Gólei, Ngabiúl, etc; see also story 8.

nr.:	gálděbegěl (club):	bai (club-house):	táog (channel)	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngareketau	C. Ngaremerdél +	Ngarameredél	Right
II	Ngaregogádu	D. Bairaráng
I ♀	Ngaratemring
II	Ngaregongěgěd
III	Ngarabóe ės
I ♂	Ngarabudekelei	E. Ptelulagáng	Ptelúlagáng	Left
II	Ngaraól	F. Bairalápek (Ngomelákl)
I ♀	Ngaruau
II	Ngarabiskáng

Landing place: a Belód.

24. Ngel'lau.

(KUB. Ngalláu).

One of the stones of Milad, *a*Imenúngs 1 bad, (story 19) lies at the village bai Gólilai . Ngel'lau took it during the war for the services rendered in the destruction of a Uluáng (story 113), see story 202, which tells about house No. III.

Constitution.

bai l pelú (village house): Gólilai

galíd (god): Gomúieċ (KUB.)

klóbak (council): Ngaragólilai female council: ar Guóděł'lägád

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	ardil (women):
I	a Iromél	Ngertú	I	Guódě̀l' lăgád rengertú
II	Góbak	Gorakiblaî	II	" gorakiblaî
III	Măngerekúr	a Iluáng +	to I	Dirairáel
IV	Kekerél lóbak		" I	nr.
V	Kerenguáng	Ngerugeúag +	" II	"
VI	a Imeúngs	a Iráel +	" II	"
VII	Ngirabíol	a Metúkěr +	" I	"
VIII	Ngirairáel	Goroség +	" II	"
IX	a Egelú	Gedengeî +	" I	"
X	nr. X	a Ilúlk +	" II	"

	galděbegě̀l (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
♂	a Rbukiláng	Golsengáog +	Golsengáog	right
♂	Ngarekomekétel	Gongolódel +	Gongolódel	left
♀	Ngarapngakl

Landing place: a Sims.

Deserted Villages of Kivelūl.

25. aL'lēgolog +, situated nearby Ngarebö́kú, its channel flows into the Ngamaî Bay.

26. aImakáng + ? see story 60 and Ngaremegāu (p. 122, footnote 1).

27. Ngarebö́kú +, definitely already deserted before 1850. It is supposed to have been situated south of the Gelsum Mountain (plan 3 φ 35'), halfway up the mountain of Ngarebö́kú. A stone path is still supposed to be there. In the NW-corner of the Ngamaî Bay a river with the same name²⁰⁴ flows into the sea (Vol. 1, p. 239). From Ngaremegāu it is supposed to be easily reachable . A famous place of legends. Eventhe name seems to come from the moray eel kesebö́kú, which was up to mischief here in form of a galíd (story 89). When chief a Rdegór from Nggêiangě̀l went around with the plan of the destruction of Ngáruangě̀l (story 20), he found the necessary magic with rubak nr. I, from Ngarebö́kú, called Regósog (also called Rególěg). Story 84 also deals with both chiefs. Once upon a time, Ngarebö́kú was powerful and suppressed Ngaregě̀lūk in Ngivál, which led to the destruction of the place (story 86). See also story 85, about the cripple Kúei, story 85 about Mangidáp rutkól, who fetched from here the big mangrove stilts where the bird terátěr lived (story 88). A ked Delóbok arungúieš reminds us of the snake of Ngurukdápě̀l (story 156).

- 28—30. Ngerug +, Ngaruét +, Gomekátl udóng +, situated in the southern part.
31. Ngěsměsoáng + (KUB. Ngasmasoáng, galíd: Kaymagéy); situated between Ngarsngāi and Ngaregělūk. People from Ngesisěg moved here (distr. V).
32. a Ibūg +, situated north of Ngaregělūk, once settled by people from Ngabúkěd.
33. a Oíms or a Dims + (compare the landing place a Sims from Ngel'lau). Situated south of Ngěráir. On the Bai re megāu is a logukl about rub. Gululāu, who was extremely good natured and beloved by everyone; an unloved man from Ngěráir came to him and learned from him, so that he made many friends.
34. Ngěráir + situated on the rocky point Ngěráir (plan 3 φ 35'), the residence of the galid-woman Gobagád²⁰⁵ (see story 202). The famous hero a Ugél re gulsíáng, who had been speared in the air, fell on this point (story 204). Once upon a time, Ngěráir was also well known as a place of refuge (sobaláng): there was a bridge Měngál, over which you had to jump and once, coming from the grassland, you reached the trailhead Ngamelók you were safe from persecution. Who nevertheless attacked a refugee was killed (compare Keklāu). Stories 81, 82, 82^a, 84 and 202 underline to the former importance of this place.
35. Táog (see story 51) and 36. a Děkěl + and 37. Ngarekerú + (story 88) were probably 3 places that also belonged to Kivelül.

The villages of Goldiáis.

38. Nggēsár²⁰⁶. (plate 8^{1 a.2})

(KUB.: Engkasar) belongs to Goldiáis.

Description of the place (see plan 11): — situated 4 km north of Ngarsúl, right next to the coast, which has very few mangroves. Opposite of it is the big entrance of the reef Ngatpáet. The coast mounts suddenly to the mountain Nggēsár (rois a -Nggēsár), about 100 m high and covered with forest. There is hardly any drinking water. The setting of the village evokes the memory of Ngarabāu. Right behind the boat-house, the stone path climbs up very steeply. It cuts the village into two parts, the south a Get and the north Bitalpelú. On the right hand side (in the north), lies an undecorated bai l táog, on the left is bai E. a Dok (plate 8²). Right next to a bathing place. The road mounts continuously. In the north, a little bit aside from the road, on a ledge of the hill, bai G. a Tap is situated, which offers a beautiful view. Next to it, situated above it and near the street is bai F. Ngaremelulāu. Opposite to it in the south of the street bai C a Uldángēs. After further climbing, on the second terrace, north from the road, are the 2 rubak-bai Goldiáng²⁰⁷: A. Gosobulngāu (in the north) and B. Bilekélēk (in the south). On the left hand side of the road is a house of the priest (II). Further up the stone path turns to the north, a footpath leads from the trailhead to Ngaráus.

Plan 11.

Privileges: — sale of a dugong found dead, but not the production of the bracelets (KUB. VIII p. 176). The release of the ruk-dancers in Melekéiok (see there), exchange of bai-girls with Melekéiok (KUB. II p. 121). Burial of the dead from house nr. I and II in boxes (see KUB. III p. 121), which were produced in Ngaráus.

Industry: — catching shark. A fish basket with a strange mouth (oumád) is produced in Nggēsar (see KUB. VIII p. 146 plate XX⁵).

History: — It is an old place, formerly 1000 people strong. The children of the bamboo, who were driven here (story 15), found the place already occupied by rub. nr. V Bagáp, who was also mentioned as being courageous in story 161 (KUB. II p. 121, Bokhap). On their way from Ngardolólók people from Ngēbūrēg (see there) took a long rest here (story 8). From a Uluáng, too, came a flow via Ngērutói (Ngardmau, see above p. 82), they brought the name Ngaragoldiáng with them. The title of the female council ar Tógēd mēás points to Ngarmíd (distr. VIII).

In the year 1863, when TETENS was here, about 500 men came to fight against the village.

In 1882 the destruction of the houses of Nggēsár by the English took place (see Melekéiok); afterwards the place was rebuilt.

I still have to mention story 99 about the mangrove, the roots of which reached all the way to Ngatpang on the west side, and story 85, where Buk nr. IV is mentioned. In 1876 v. M. M. mentions a trader Kondon in Nggēsár (Vol. 1 p. 150). The galid Madlē galíd is supposed to have come from Ngaregolóng. The eagle ray and the Tropical shearwater Puffinus-bird are said to be holy to him (KUB. V p. 24 a. 38). Therefore, the latter one, the gogáio, is often kept tame (see Ngardmau p. 78, footnote 1). The a bang-fish (Mullus) is also dedicated to him and cannot be eaten.

Constitution of Nggēsar.

bai l pelú (village house): Goldiáng galíd (village god): Mad lēgalíd

A. Gosobulngāu, B. Bilekélēk

klóbak (council): Ngaragoldiáng female council: ar Tógēd mēás²⁰⁸

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	kleblil (clan):	ardil (women)
I	Ngirakebóu	a Kebóu	I	a Kebóu	a Guódě̀l'lägád
II	Regëséngě̀l	a Idúp ²⁰⁹	II	Ngerebís	Direbís
III	a Umīg	a Iesngāi	to II	a Iesngāi	Dira iesngāi
IV	Buk	Bangkúr	" I	a Iméngě̀l	Dira iménegě̀l
V	Bagáp	a Iuelungūl	" I	Bitálpelú	Melík ra bítalpelú
VI	Rgësě̀bě̀gě̀i	a Iebúkūl	" II	a Iebúkūl	Melík ra iebúkūl
VII	a Ililāu	Ngarametě̀geráng	" II?	Ngarametě̀geráng	Gotúet
VIII	a Rdebángě̀l	Ngedě̀suógě̀l	" I	to I	Ngesengě̀so
IX	a Regeiũáng	a Derebeĩ	" II	" III	Melík ra derebeĩ
X	Mad ra skesúk	a Seksúk	" I	" IV	Melik ra skesúk

nr.:	gáldě̀begě̀l (clubs):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaramelís	C. Uldángě̀s	Uldángě̀s	Right
II ♂	Ngarabiteláol	D. Bairióbog +
III ♂	Ngaramelgě̀teg	E. a Dok
I ♀	Ngaragasegás
II ♀	Ngarekeai
III ♀	Ngaratelbūt
I ♂	Ngarameríkl	F. Ngaremelulāu	Ngaremelulāu	Left
II ♂	Ngarauāu	G. a Tap
I ♀	Ngaratariuóng
II ♀	Ngaragāu
III ♀	Ngarabóiēs

39. Ngaráus.

(KUB.: Ngaráus).

Description of the place: —When you continue walking the main path in Nggě̀sar, up where the rubak-bai are lying, then you slowly descend into a small valley where Ngaráus is situated. A small stream comes from a ravine that cuts into the mountain Nggě̀sár. Here the rubak-bai a Ilúlk is situated, which in 1907 still had some nice figures at the gable, which I took with me. There was also a boat for the sick people in the house, as well as a wooden figure of galíd Mogolouú with a long penis (see section VI religion), which KUB. V p. 17 describes as the "Magolóy"? the god of the village. A stone path leads down to the flat land where 2 bai are situated under some palm trees, one north of the stream, the other a Malk, in the south. In 1907, both of them were new and without any particular decoration. Next to them were only a few houses. In the south is a dense mangrove belt.

Privilege: — Construction of coffins for Nggēsár (see there).

History: — Story 98 about Ilabangelül from blai nr. IV reports about the chopping up of the snake mangerengér, the form of galid Ngiratēi, whose head remained in Ngaráus after it had been cut off, whereas the other pieces drifted to Ngrīl, Ngarbagéd, and Ngērupesáng, the places of a Ugél'lēgalíd.

I heard the galid of the place is Dúkeram, who was already mentioned in Nggẽiangēl. KUB. mentions "Dúkúram" as the female god of Ngaráus? The relationship is not quite clear.

Constitution of Ngaráus.

bai l pelú (village house): a Ilúlk

galíd (god): Dúkeram

klóbak (council): Ngarailúlk

female council: ar Iebíl

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Desangáng	Meketí	a Rtúngg
II	a Ringáng	Magei	Mangetúl
III	a Iegád	Ngaremádēngaráng	Gēbil iegád
IV	Garangás	a Ipelú ²¹⁰	Miráir
V	a Rebūg	Ngaramogēsóng	Dira mēai
VI	Bukringáng	a Derengás	Dilbukringáng
VII	Gad rē gelúi	Lukilei	Godēsēpí
VIII	Kemrékel	Golivál	Dilkemerékl
IX	a Ugél	a Iteibóng	Gēbil
X	Tuvúied	Metúkēr	Diltuvúied

nr.:	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngarasebúies	a Ilúlk	Ilúlk	Right
II ♂	Ngaramēkebúd	Malk	Málk	Left
I ♀	Ngaradím
II ♀	Ngaratúmetum

40. Ngarakesóu.

(KUB. Ngarakosóu).

South of Nggēsár, near point Tap re ngēsáng, a small place with only a few houses. Some of the names for the title-holding women are the same as in Nggēsár. KUB. mentions as god a Ugél galid with a question mark, as well as a female god Toylogorúr.

Industry: — Pottery (KUB. VIII p. 199).

//Krämer, Palau, Vol. 2, Plate 8//

District Ngatēngál

1. Ngirtemeî from Nggëssár.

2. Bai a Dok and boat-house in Nggëssár.

3. Bai Debi, boat-house, bai Besós, bl. nr. I in Ngarsúl.

4. Bai Gongëpëáděl in Ngarsál.

bai l pelú (village house): a Ilapelú

galíd (god): a Ugél'lēgalíd

klóbak (council): Ngara ilapelú

female council: ar Guódēl'lagád

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang	kleblīl (clan):	ardil (women):
I	Ngirageruáng	Geruáng +	II	Geruáng (rub. VII)
II	a Usákl	Ngúes +	I	Ngúes (" V)
III	Ketīt	a Ilemāu +	I	Reguták (" ?)
IV	Rēgēl'lūl	Ngénget +	II	Ius (" VI)
V	Gemeás	a Ibódēl +	I
VI	Rurekódēl	Ngertūg	I
VII	Mad ra ngtūl	Ngergeáng	II

Further blai: a Ugélngél, Ngeremegeséngēl, Ngerukuám.

gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house):	táo (channel):	bitang (side):
Ngarasénges	Gelkēam	Gelkēam	Right
Ngaratēmakái	Ngarebabul	Ngarebabul	Left

41. Ngarengasáng.

(KUB. Ngarangasáng.)

Description of the place: —lies north of Ngarsúl, but in the east of the river. The entrance to the táo is situated between the two points Taprengēsáng and Ngatgúiēl (plan 3 φ 27').

The path winds from the boathouse up to the summit (ca. 30 m) where the deserted place of the rubak-bai Ngarekīl is situated, which in 1907 was in ruins. From here you have a nice view to the west into the valley of the river Ngardórok.

Industry: — pottery.

Privilege: — dance of the women at funerals (see KUB. III p. 11).

History: —the people of this place settled first in Ngatanggā u on Pelíliou, then they moved here (see story 160 of Kesebōkú ra Dengasík). They are supposed to have come from the island Dengasík in the east.

Story 161 reports about the courageous spear thrower Sesengés who was from here.

But most remarkable is story 100. The people it tells us about come from here; they gained eternal youth and lost it again. The footprint of the daughter can still be seen at the bathing pond Ngaregókīl.

KUB. mentions a Ugér'rérák as the galíd (see Goréör); Dórom kerīk as the goddess (see female council of Ngarevíkl). I heard that galíd a Guódēl from Pelíliou is venerated here.

Constitution of Ngarengasáng.bai l pelú (village house): Ngarekīl*galíd* (god): a Guódēl*klóbak* (council): Ngarekīl female council ?

nr.:	arubak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	kleblīl (clan):	ardil (women):
I	Ngiragoirémōg	Goirémōg	I	Goirémōg	Guódēl'lagád
II	Ngiratulúk	Toluk	II	Toluk	Bageklđl
III	Ngiraremóiog	Remóiog	to I	Remóiog	Diraremóiog
IV	a Iegád	a Bitaltáog	" II	Klemedáol	Moeád
V	a Mibúk	a Ibáb	" I	a Ibab	Dilmibúk
VI	a Ugél díkēs	Ngaremerdél	" II	Merdél	Dibugedíkēs
VII	Mad ra ilúd	a Gebáiēd	" I	Gebáiēd	Diragebáiēd
VIII	Mategeiaū ²¹¹	Ngaremókēt	" I	to II	Dila mategeiaū
IX	Madremelsóged	Ngaremelsoged	" II	" II	Dira melsóged
X	a Sngórog	Geisāu	" II	" II	Dilageisāu

nr.:	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngarapngákl	a Míkēd	a Míkēd	right
I ♀	Ngaragotelóug
I ♂	Ngaragoetál	a Merádēl	a Merádēl	left
I ♀	Ngarabiteláol

The deserted villages of Goldiáis.

42. a* Ibút + north of Ngarengasáng.

43. Ngámíngēl +, north of Ngarengasáng. Just before Nggēsár, the mountains come close to the sea. There lies a small valley, overlooked by the mountain Gēdēsír a Ngaragáem "Their Stone Path From Ngaragáem", a men 's club , which once built the road in the village that has now disappeared . The destruction of the village by 4 people from Goréor is depicted on the gable front of the rubak -bai Gosobulngāu in Melekéiok.

44. Ngardiól + between Kerdēu and Ngarengasáng.

The villages of Bung l kelāu .

45. Ngarsúl

(KUB. Ngorsúl).

In former times, a big place, which enclosed several villages as bung l kelāu "Flowers of the Ironwood Tree". Still today the young men of the village have this name.

Description of the place (Plan 12^b): Ngarsúl, before called Dmágel, lies hidden in the mangroves, next to the mouth of the river Ngardórok or Ngdórok, which has its source in the north behind Melekéiok (see Vol. 1 p. 240). If you come from Melekéiok, that is from the north, around the stony point Taprengësáng, around the nearby tip of mangroves Pkul a ngatgúiël, then, always going along the Plan 12^a a. b.

mangroves towards the west, you reach the rocky point Ngurugúiël (resting-place of Merúpélau, KUB. V p. 61; see story 14). This is the southern tip of the eastern wall of the mountain ridge formed by the Ngardórorok River. In the west of the latter mentioned point, the mangroves start again and soon you can find in them the entrance to the channel, *táog rdórok*²¹². You have to follow this one at high tide for about 3 km always in-between the mangroves until you reach a stream, which comes from the

Ngardók Lake (Plan 12^a). A now deserted place at the mouth of the stream is said to have been called Ngardórok. On the western side of the mouth of the channel a smaller channel forks off, which, just like the main channel, winds in a western direction through the mangroves and reaches the foot of the mountain where in former times Dmagël was situated. There at the foot of the mountain lies blai D Gonëgpëádél (plate 8⁴). High above, on the slope also runs a stone path coming from the north. Here on the slope and down at the water, where the stream Mangúliong flows there were still 7 houses in 1910. Among them bl. VII a Gerëóng, built high on the hill; a long water pipe, made of bamboo, was leading from the upper bed of the stream there. In the south, a stone path leads to the stone terraces, which border the basin of the harbor towards the south (plate 8³). There lies bai B Besós and on its southeastern corner the recent rubak-bai A. Dmágel where on the ilíud-pavement stands a stone chair-back with a stone face on it. It comes from Meróng. In the east, built directly on the ground, is the boat-house, and in the south of it the kldókbai C. Debí. All this together forms the part of the village called Ngaremegú. Just above bai D. an old stone road forks off from the before-mentioned stone path, leading uphill in a western direction; it mounts steeply over the nose of the mountain, leading to the west. In former times, bai F. Ngartógëd was situated there at a height of about 40 m. The foundations still indicate the place. The path continues through a forest to the ridge of the mountain, until, $\frac{1}{4}$ of a kilometer from the starting point, you reach in 125 m height place A', where bai raidmágël stood, the former rubak-bai. The former mountain stronghold Dmágël is deserted. Below on the coast and in the valley lies today's Ngarsúl, with the bital pelú Ngaremegú and Gelókl. On the northern and southern flank of the mountain ridge of Dmagël some streams come down that can become roaring whitewaters after heavy rains, as can be inferred from the basalt blocks in the southern bed. The northern bed of the Mangúliong is wide and jagged. The southern water current a Imeráp, which forms the border between the northern Ngaremegú and the southern Gelókl, irrigates a taro patch situated in the swampy triangular flatland. It has a length of 100 m and a width of 50 m. Several houses, among them the house of the priest, nr. I, are located there along a small side stream, called Ngeskós. It comes from the hills in the southwest; at their foot at blai 13 is the women's bathing place. In-between taro patches a stone path leads from the rubak-bai to the south, to the foot of the hills; the further in the south they are the closer they come to the water. After 200 m of road you reach the landing place, from where a view over the lagoon and the sea opens up. Here on the rocky point ends the stone path. A few steps further south, on the other side of the sheer rocks, around which you can only go with difficulty, the mangroves start again, which accompanied the way from the north. Some poor looking blai are situated on a small piece of flat land. Once the formerly important place Meróng was situated here. At the foot of the receding mountain, next to the taro patches, is the stone foundation of bai B Gosiáol, from where a stone path leads up the hill to bai Meróng, the long decayed bai l pelú ARióbögg, which, similar to Ngarsúl-Dmágël, lies in an altitude of 130 m. In former times, there was a chair back (ptangg) with a face on it. This stone is now at the rubak-bai in Ngarsúl. From the summit a trail leads over to Dmágěl, thus these two villages, situated so high up, once had a direct connection. A bathing place is said to have been halfway up the slope of the mountain.²¹³ If you climb from the upper Meróng further up, you reach the about 185 m high Ngarsúl Mountain (see Vol. 1 p. 238, Figure 43). On its summit there is only a small space of a few square meters. A few meters below the summit, in a small hollow, is a rock as big as a man. In 1910, the remnants of a hut were next to it, in which rub. a Rdiál was looking for the galid of the place. In 1910, there were still 5 blai, two of them a little bit separated next to a stream, which flows into the mangroves.

History: — The grassland Ngădăsákěr is said to be located near Ngarsúl (s. distr. V nr. 34), where Magád, the sister of Iegád re ngěl, lived. She created together with him both sexes of the human beings, as told in story 7. The area of Ngarsúl, thus, leads back in to the oldest history.

Ngarsúl is a child of a Guáp (story 2) and of poverty (story 3).

a Răklăi constantly attacked Bung l kelău and the main villages were conquered twice. Once the inhabitants went to Ngarebagédasău on Goréör and twice to the grassland Desekél near Ngarbagéd (distr. VIII), where also a rub. nr. I Rióbog is mentioned (compare the rubak-bai of Meróng).

In 1883, KUB. II p. 136 writes: "it was deserted within the last 10 years, because Korryor clubbed the high chief to death, and the inhabitants, weak in numbers, did not want to remain at the remote border post. They moved over to Ngarangasang and founded a new home."

This correlates with what I learned, that a Ibědul of Goréör destroyed the place in about 1875. Club nr. III Ngaratėkángěl had its first fight when they went "fishing" (blogodókl) for the first time and captured a head. Later on, the inhabitants returned to their place.

Concerning galid Ngira meredáng I heard the following: He was also called Góbak lě galíd and lived in blai Ngaremegú in Dmágěl, his galid house, as the house galid. But as he sought greater power and people tried to kill him. At night they came with torches and, with an ulóiog-spear, they speared his son Gad ra pup²¹⁴ in the hand²¹⁵. Then the old man fled with his son to the ked of Ngardelúngg, which lies between Ngarsúl and Ngátpang. From here they hiked to the resting place Ngarbád lmángěl near Ngátpang. Here the boy got thirsty. They looked for water, but could not find any. Thus, Ngira meredáng stomped against the ground and soon enough water came out of the hole, the spring Ngebúiet. But also

The son, who had his favorite pet, kētát, (coconut crab) the Birgus-crab with him, also got hungry. The father advised him to eat the crab, which the boy finally did. Since then only blai nr. I Ngaremegú in Ngarsúl is permitted to eat this crab. Then both of them went to Ngátpang (see there in Ngardmau). The father asked: "do we want to stay here?" — The son replied: "no, from here I cannot see the mountain of Ngarsúl." — Thus they continued to Ngaramlungúi where they saw from a Gatiroír the Rois r súl, and from there they continued to Ngardmau. Here they felt comfortable and stayed. One day, they received a message that a sickness had broken out in Ngarsúl, and many people had died because of it. A man called Godíu rengós²¹⁶ had made a divination and had found out that the disaster was connected with the expulsion of Ngira meredáng. Therefore, they sent an emissary with money to Ngardmau, in order to bring him back. Thereupon, the galid gave them some advice regarding how they could end the epidemic, but he himself did not leave Ngardmau. Soon afterwards, Godíu rengós died in Ngarsúl and seven other Góbak remegú came and took the title, but all of them died one after the other. Then the galid possessed Ngira meltél, rubak nr. I Bagés from a Ulimáng, who came running to Ngarsúl and took the federation Ngarakamaírs from Ngarsúlto a Imelík, in order to bring the woman Gëtiráel from Galëgúi to Ngarsúl, because Ngiramerédáng loved her very much. Then Ngira meltél revealed himself as Gobaklëgalíd and the people from Ngarsúl gave him power over their place; from then on all was well.

I still have to mention that in former times in Ngarsúl as well as in Ngátpang and Ngardmau galid-women were called Mlagëi, as it is known from Gólei and Ngabiúl. KUB. V p. 32 rightly points out that Ngiramerédáng comes from Medegëipélau. Further, the following is mentioned in his report concerning these events: "When the inhabitants of Ngarsul had killed the priest of the god Kwódol (Guódël Kr.), this one fled enraged to Ngardmau, to the land Ngatpúyok, where he took the place of a chief. The high priest was called Sagaltpúyok, who often equaled Iramerda (Ngira meredáng Kr.). The father of Iramerda and of Kadj er bub (Gad ra pup Kr.) is said to have been Augél le Galit." — So far KUBARY. KUB. I p. 24 mentions Góbak aramogou as priest (këróng) of the god, thus meaning rub. nr. I Góbak re megú, who was the high priest just like in all the villages that belonged to Medegëipélau.

Constitution of Ngarsúl .

bail pelú (village house): A. Dmágël or Bai raidmágël galíd (god): Ngira meredáng klóbak (council): Ngaradmágël

female council: ar Ibíl

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	Bitang (side):	kleblīl (clan):	ardil (women):
I	Góbak remegú	Ngaremegú	I	Ngáremegú	Gëbíl
II	a Ksau	a Iegúr	II	a Iús	Bilseksau
III	a Rëgëtúkë	a Ipel'ílu	to I	a Iús	Diregetúkë
IV	a Rekerëáng	a Imëóng	" I	a Moai ²¹⁷	Direkerëáng
V	a Rmdágël	Kauderáiël	" II	a Ităog	Diremdágël
VI	a Segemlóng	Gongëlútël	" I	a Deremáng	Dilsegemlóng
VII	a Rekeuís	a Gerëóng	" I	to I	Dir'rekeuís
VIII	a Bíd ²¹⁸	Meketí +	" I	to III	Dilebíd
IX	a Regemīg	a Utlilóng +	" II	to II	Diregemīg
X	Gupedei	to VII		to IV	Dilegupedei

Further blai: 11. Ngurutegei. 12. Telilei. 13. Ngeskós.

nr.:	galdëbegël (club):	bai (club house):	tăog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngarasoilëkí	B. Besós	Debí	Right
II	Ngaratúmetum	C. Debí
I ♀	Ngarameríkl
I ♂	Ngaratepëkpúp	D. Gongëpëádël	Gongëpëádël	Left
II	Ngararús	E. Debangiól +
I ♀	Ngaragedidīg
II	Ngarabiteláol

F. Ngartóged + (s. above).

46. Meróng.

The name means "famous".

Description of the place: see Ngarsúl . The places for the former bai A. bai l pelú Rióbög and B. Gosiáol are indicated in Plan 12^b.

History: — Destruction of Ngasuás see there; further see story 101 about Rekemís and Rekebés.

In 1910 there were still 5 blai standing:

1. Tiaráelblai.
2. Góngoviklpúp.
3. Lulk.
4. Gëtëgeiep.
5. a Urétëg.

Concerning the constitution I could not learn anything more detailed. From the song in story 227 we find out that rub. nr. I was called Ngireklsóng. The council seems to have been called Ngarameróng.

//136//

Deserted Villages of Bung l kelâu.

47. Kerdëu +, situated north of Ngarsúl at the foot of the mountain Bítalkéd. A mountain with the same name is in Ngaregolóng (see p. 10).
48. Ngardórök +, situated at the mouth of the river in the big channel táog r dórok. Its rubak-bai Galdéng is mentioned in story 208.
49. Ngádvad +, situated at Ngardiól, see story 82.
50. Bitang +, situated south of Meróng; only 2 blai are still there
51. Ngarebekál +, situated above the rock Madalaĩ, south of Meróng.
52. Ngaregemerákl +, next to point Pkul a bangikói; in 1910 a newly built house stood here on a rock on the beach next to the point.
53. Ngaragëbúkl +, formerly situated on the northern part of the bay of Nggasagáng. Place of Milad and of Terkélel. Right next to it Ngaramagarákl, because the nut of the 7 galíd was hung there on a hook (tagarákl) (see story 19).
54. Ngasuás +, near the southern border of the district, next to Nggasagáng where it formerly belonged to. But one day, Meróng attacked the village from the water as well as from land, chased away the men, and killed the women in the village. Thus, it came to Ngarsúl and was depopulated (log on the front gable of the bai Gongelútël in Goikúl). People from Ngasuás had burned at a post a group of female travelers from Meróng.

District V. Ngaramlungúi.

WILS.: Aramalorgoo, CHEYNE: Aramanewie, SEMP.: Armlimui, KUB.: Aremolunguy, v.M.M.: Naramelungui.

The number of inhabitants is not known, it seems to be included into Ngardmau, distr. III.

Number of villages: 8, deserted 26.

klóul pelú (main village): a Imeúngs.

rubukúl (its chief): Ngirturóng.

armeâu (people): Kerengil'liáged.

galíd (god): Ugér ë rák.

If nobody is there to take over the title Ngirturóng, then they turn to family nr. II in Goréör (see there) or to Ngaregól on Pelíliou (see history of a Imeúngs).

There are no political groups in Ngaramlungúi. But the small district Ngátpang is affiliated, similar to Ngivál at Melekéiok.

Description of the Land:

South of the Goirúl mountain chain, which reaches all the way to the basin of Ngátpang and in the east to about the middle of the island (border see p. 86 at Babldáob geography). This part of the landscape of the west coast reaches all the way down to the bay of Gámliangĕl in the district a Imelĭk has been depicted as especially mountainous. South of point Pkulagalíd (or from the southern part of the double-point, called Debúsög gurúr) lies the Ngaramásag-Bay, which is bordered in the south by the small island Ngamólei. Here, the people of Ugélkeklāu took a rest (story 8) and it is also mentioned at Boi (story 11). The neighboring point Pkulabád borders it. Then follows a coast going straight from north to south, with a small mangrove- and a rock-point, until you reach the entrance Ngaluóng, which is on both sides bordered by low, layered rocks, just like a door. This is the door of a Iméungs. In the south the mangroves jut out very wide, forming the mangrove point Pkul ngrĭl. A shortcut channel (galipĕl) offers easy access by boat through the water-forest. In the south the mangroves reach all the way to the entrance of Ngaremeténgĕl, which is marked on the reef by the rock Gasāu with its hole. Further south the mountains come all the way to the water, forming the northern door to Ngát pang, already mentioned above. The great entrance in the reef on the west side is opposite of this side of the coast, south of Pkul ngrĭl. It is called Toágĕl mlungúi, "the only good passage through the western reef"²¹⁹. In order to go through, you keep the Agatiroir-mountain in rw. 107° (mw. ESE $\frac{3}{4}$ E); see view B of D. Adm. Krt. nr. 180 (Tit. XI nr. 401)." The double-mountain of Ngaramlungúi, called Rois mlungúi, consisting of the eastern a Gatiroír, 195 m high, and the western, lower Ngáruak (see Vol. I p. 231), dominates the entire landscape. On the eastern side of Gatiroír is the place of the former village Roispelú and the ravine a Ibaberóng. The view from up there to the south is especially beautiful, over the entire southern part of Babldáob, Goréör and the Gogeál, as shown in Figure 30 in Vol. 1 p. 226. From here you can also see the hilly landscape at its foot, which stretches between the mountain and the entrance into the inland water. Next to the entrance strait you can see the rock-hill Sisngabáng, from where you have an especially nice view over it [the entrance strait], as Figure 35 shows (see also Vol. 1 p. 225 a. 231). In the north of the double mountain the landscape is also hilly. There the 75 m high ked-mountain a Iduderóng (see Figure 42 in Vol. 1 p. 236) offers a view all the way to the Goriúl-mountain chain, the range mounting from west to east with its small cylindrical elevations as it is characteristic of a volcanic landscape. Bay Ngaramásag lies especially beautiful in front of the visitor, as already mentioned in district III. A double-hunched hill is there right next to the waterfront, forming a small tip of land denting the curve of the coastline somewhat. Right in the south of a Iduderóng lies a Gatiroír, right in the north of point Pkul a galíd. The direction of the forest-mountain Ngaramagaróang is 40°. The mountain a Ibárs is 53°, behind lies the valley of Gobagád, where the river flowing into Taog ra másag is supposed to have its source. Further bearings from here: wood-mountain Ngadasákĕr 71°, Rois r ngkebedül 135°, Golúmĕl argeisép 147°, Gometógĕl near Melekéiok 125°, Rois r sül 152°, a Ibaberóng (pass at Roispelú) 156°. The eastern part of the district and the step-mountains were already mentioned in Vol. 1 p.166 and p. 238. I still want to remind the reader that the formation of the grassland with its steps at the northern foot of the double-mountain of a Uluáng is especially beautiful. Worth mentioning are also the three forest-mountains east of a Imeúngs, next to the rivers that flow into the Klóul táog of the Ngátpang-Bay. They are also mentioned at Ngarameskáng (see Vol. 1 p. 166). The three mountains are called Ngatkokói, Rois bakái²²⁰, and Ngěángěl. I suspect that lava columns are standing there.

//137//

History see a Imeúngs.

1.a Imeúngs (plate 9).

MCCLUER: Emewngs, SEMP.: Emungs, KUB.: Aymyungs.

with the three secondary places a Ulegetóng, a Nglabáng, and Ngěrutegeĩ.

The people, ar Geimeúngs, are considered to be rough. There is no bital pelú.

Description of the place (see plan 13): The long Táog mlungúi, whose door Ngaluóng was just mentioned before, connects the open water with the village. Going with a relative current you can cross it punting in a quarter of an hour, therefore its length can be estimated to be about 1½km. Within the southern doorpost lies bai l dort Ngaluóng, similar to the exit of Ngabúkěd the fishermen's bai a Urúng.

Towards the village the mangrove-wood gets wider, criss-crossed by numerous channels, until it forks into two main arms, which are separated by the hill a Ingeságěl. The northern arm leads to the main landing place in a Ulegetóng, which lies on the southern side of the arm, whereas on its northern side the village a Nglabáng is situated, which is nearly deserted today. The southern arm leads to the place Ngěrutegeĩ, which is completely separated from the actual a Imeúngs by the before-mentioned hill.

On the southern side of the northern channel are three landing places. The first at bai K, a Ulegetóng, which was in ruins in 1907. A boathouse stood next to it in the south. The stone pavement protrudes into the water that widens like a lake all the way to the second bai F. a Melénegěl. There the channel is narrow again, and here I still saw the remains of a water pipe, which was coming from the northern shore. It is mentioned in chant 207. The stone pavement is also built into the water so that the access to the third landing place Galsegeĩ, with its boathouse and the ruins of Bai J is rather narrow.

From each of these three landing places a stone path leads to the south, and all three meet the mounting main stone path, going from west to east. On its southern side, in the bushes of the slope of the hill, the actual blai nr. 1 a Klang is situated. Its ornamental decorations are also mentioned in part. VII. But on its eastern end, at a height of about 10 m, where it meets the 3rd stone-path, there stand the village houses Gorúkei, in the middle of the actual a Iméungs. In the south A. GosobuIngāu and next to it in the north B. Bilekélěk (plate 9¹). Further north and quite nearby, but a little bit lower is bai D Bungaruāu (see also story 207) and further north, on the east side of the road coming from the third landing place, is Bai C. Ngërulegāu, next to the above-mentioned bai J of Galsegēi.

Plan 13.

Two bai on the east side of the middle path are similarly situated. Next to Meléngēl is bai G. Blissang, the place of our residence, and further in the south only 50 m away bai kldók H. Bálang. Where the stone path Didlbad meets the pavement of the rubak-bai it widens quite a bit and mounts up among tall trees.

From the southeastern corner of the stone square of the village bai a stone path leads up the hill in a southeastern direction, then to the south. On the corner bl. II

Ngërturóng is located, where an asylum-stone, as high as a seat, is standing. It is called í re Ngërturóng (Figure in part VI, law). On the summit, the stone path ends with a tebedál-stone pavement, a big stone square, the ptelúl a gáng Gamráeg. From here you have a spectacular view over the mountain range of Roismlungúi, which is separated from the spectator by a valley in which Ngërutegeî is situated. Its green slopes look grandiose, even though the eastern a Gatiroír is only 195 m high and the western Ngáruak a mere 180 m. On the western trailhead Gamráeg lies bai E. Diberdí at a wonderful spot. From here you descend in a few minutes south, down to the village part Ngërutegeî, which is situated at the southern side of the before-mentioned southern arm Táog mlungúi, and which consists more or less of one stone path. Only in the south a stone path forks from the middle down to the bathing pond. On its western end is an imposingly constructed stone square, connected by branches with the main road where the village-house A. a Ibangeleî lies. Next to it, in the west, is bai B. a Ibúngěl lěgáng, together with a boathouse, both are lying at the táog with the same name. Separated in the east, also situated on the waterfront, was bai C. Mels. Now only its stone foundation is still there.

As already mentioned before, the third village part a Nglabáng lies in the north of the northern arm. Only three houses were still standing there, as well as the remains of a bai. This place seems to always have been rather insignificant. Just a few steps in the east the stream Debúsóg flows into the táog. This rivulet waters the taro patches Gěsmóng, which you reach from Galsegeî crossing a wooden bridge. The fields are well organized and nicely decorated with hibiscus-roses and other decorative bushes, as well as surrounded by breadfruit and palm trees.

The setting of a Imeúngs, especially the lower part on the waterfront, gives the impression of being recent, as the roads are less impressive and tall trees are missing. It is also said that, in former times, the village was situated further east on the hill a Ingeságěl which is today only recognizable by its numerous steps. Often there are 4 on top of each other, which give the impression of the wall of a fortress.

The step formation, on which only ked grows, stretches all along the northern foot of the Roismlungúi. It shows a very exemplary form further in the west, on the step mountain of a Uluáng (Figure 34). In the west, passing this mountain, a footpath leads from a Imeungs to Ngarameténgěl. It starts in the village part Ulegetóng, crosses the hill Ingeságěl and fords the southern channel.

Privilege: catches and sells dugong (KUB. VIII p. 176), gets bai-girls from Melekeiók (see there), exchange with Ngarekeai (KUB. II p. 123).

History: In the old stories it is well known because of the woman Milad, who was killed during the great flood on the high mountain. Her good son a Imeúngs was turned into stone here. But this stone²²¹ was given to Ngel'lau in Ngivál (see there), because they, together with a Ulimáng had helped the people of Imeúngs to destroy their oppressor a Uluáng. The club Ngaragoududí from a Imeúngs was also destroyed in Ngivál, but not as KUB. II p. 98 thinks, because they had burnt a visit of beautiful women from Melekéiok, but because of the revenge of Dir 'rungūlbaiof Ngarekeai (see story 207). This place was considered to be a sister of Mílad; therefore, dispute and quarrels happened frequently between both of them. In fact, they had more disputes with Melekéiok, therefore they tried to achieve an agreement (see story of distr. IV). Story 112 tells how a Imeúngs was attacked by Melekéiok, but its inhabitants were saved by the people from Goréör, who were called to help by a fire on a Gatiroír (ca. 1780). Thus it became more and more dependent on Goréör. There was a federation with Goréör and Ngarekeai to fight Ngatēlngál, to which also Mangal'lang in distr. I belonged (see there). Ngabúkēd sided with Melekéiok, whereas usually a Iraī seems not to have taken part in the fight. When Wilson started his friendship with Goréör in 1783, he was also brought to the ally Ngaramlungú, which is mentioned in Vol. 1 p. 114 a. 115. During my presence a son of a Ibēdul was Ngirturóng of a Imeúngs (see blai nr. II).

The strong dependency on Goréör is also expressed by using the same galid, the village-god a Ugérérák and in a Ibēdul of a Ulegetóng.

Some of the Ngáruangēl-people also came into blai nr. III Ngarutelegei (see story 20).

Constitution of a Imeúngs.

bai l pelú (village house): Gorúkei or a Imeóng A. Gosobulngau galíd (god): a Ugérérák

B. Bilekélēk

klóbak (council): Ngaraiméong female council: ar Bug²²² lēgulóng

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	ardil (women):
I	Ngirakláng	a Kláng	I sēgēlēi	Dirakláng
II	Ngirturóng	Ngērturóng ²²³	II friends	Dirangerturóng
III	Ngirutelegei	Ngarutelegei	I	Dirutelegei
IV	Ngirasipóng	Sipóng	II "	Dirasipóng
V	a Jegád	Gēdúkl +	I	Diragēdúkl
VI	Regētītēróng	a Jtēróng	II "	Diraitēróng
VII	a Ulebēdūl	Sumáng +	I	Diras umáng
VIII	Mangesebūg	a Ugēsbaī	II "	Diraúgēsbaī
IX	Galíd	Ngarungēláng	I	Dirungēláng
X	Dingeliús ra kláng	a Tmēlēu +	II "

blai nr. II has the overall control; nr. VII and X in a Nglabáng. Nr. X is kěmèdángel(messenger) for I; nr. II for bitang II. Sogosóp is considered the main keblīl (clan). The smaller ones named themselves after the first five blai.

nr.:	uriúl rúbak	blai (house):	bitang
11	Dingeliús ar ngirturóng	(Goiláng in Ngërutegeĩ)	to II
12	Gotáoěr	Gáramang	" I
13	a Ju	(Merés in Ngarameténgěl)	" II
14	Gádlbai	(Dórt in Ngërutegeĩ)	" I
15	Gotú	(Mogoáng in Ngaremeténgěl)	" II
16	a L'lau	(a Igěráng in a Nglabáng)	" I
17	a Rimíreg	Ngabeĩ +	"I
18	a Regeiríkl	a Duáp +	" I
19	a Ugérderár ²²⁴	(Ngarumesemóng in Ngërutegeĩ)	" II
20	Gedelengód	Gobekébóng	"I

nr.:	gálděbe gěl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaratēmākái	C. Ngërulegáu	Galsěgeĩ	right
II ♂	Ngaragotílěg	D. Bungaruáu
III ♂	Ngarabersóiög	E. Diberdí
I ♀	Ngaragamaióng
II ♀	Ngaramalekaurád
III ♀	Ngaragolegěsěg
I ♂	Ngaraiús	F. a Meléngěl	a Meléngěl	left
II ♂	Ngarabelós	G. a Blíssang
III ♂	Ngaratepelík	H. Bálang
I ♀	Ngarakokerdí
II ♀	Ngaramesíkt
III ♀	Ngaramegerúr

2. a Ulegetóng

(KUB.: Aulugotóng) W. part of the village, on the táog Ulegetóng, where the remnants of bai K are situated on the waterfront; in the west of the middle path (see above).

KUB. V p. 18, mentions Aybadúl as galid, thus the same name as the head of Goréör; the female one is Kobíl²²⁵ Mesagál.

klóbak (council): Ngaramangal'íáng bai l pelú (village house): a Ulegetóng.

nr.:	arúbak (chief):	blai (house):
I	Bedúl ra teláu	Melilt
II	Bedúl ra delkú	Bingdóng +
III	Bedúl ralbóng	a Lbóng
IV	Bedúl rabárs	a Bárs
V	a Rdeságěl	a Duáp +

There are two more blai: 6. Ibut and 7. Gëtebóng.

3. a Nglabáng

(KUB.: Ngangalabáng); only a few blai left on the northern side of the táog, opposite of bai F Meléngěl.

galíd (god): Ngiragerók and Ulukusuk (KUB.)

klóbak (council): Ngarapkói.

Only one bai, in ruins on the beach.

nr.:	arúbak (chief):	blai (house):	táog (channel):
I	Ngirubúruk	Ngërubúrük	Tungúl, where a boathouse is situated
II	Ngiragoráol	Goráöl +
III	Ngiragoluáng	Goluáuḡ +
IV	Ikérekúr ra ...	a Jëgolú +
V	" ra ...	Sumáng

6. blai: a Igërang.

blai Ngosekí from here has to take care of the women, of blai Ibedagál in Ngarameskáng, who have just given birth.

4. Ngërutegeĩ²²⁶ (KUB.: Ngarutekey)

bai l pelú (village house): A. a Ibangelei galíd (god): Gorekím, ♀ Kogiamogóu (KUB.)

klóbak (council): ar Ugél.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bai ra gáldëbegěl (club house):
I	a Ugélrutegeĩ	Ngamés	B. a Ibungěl'lēgáng
II	Gomúiek	a Dórt	C. Mels +.
III	a Ugérderár	Ngarumesemóng
IV	a Tkepau	Góliang	táog (channel):
V	a Skul'í	Manglóí	a Ibungěl'lēgáng.
VI	Goukerdéu	Mangederáol +
VII	Galíd	Ngërë mekríkt
VIII	a Regebiál'í	Gëtingáng +
IX	Tegeltóiög	a Ugélkumër
X	—	—

Further blai: 11. Dëgedúi, 12. Gologúgau, and 13. (name?)

Families in a Imeúngs.

blai nr. I a Klang. Title ♂: Ngirakláng, ♀ Dirakláng.

The house lies hidden in the bushes, about 5 m above the road, west of the village house (see plate 9²).

Ngirakláng does not have any power, a long time ago it passed on to Ngirturóng nr. II, but before the present one this title was held by Ngira ngotél from the house Kláng.

♀ a Uděs. Marriage to Ngiralsau in Ngapedég

a) ♀ ↓ Uldák married to Nggamaséd a') ♂ Ngiraiegól. Marriage to ♀ Kekerédlil from Mangal'áng in 1910 still very young b') ♂ a Ngkedíng. Marriage to Diralúlk in Ngarameténgël (no children)

b) ♂ a Jekár. I. marriage to ♀ Gosubed + a') ♂ Teruadel

b') ♂ Bagadoi

II. marriage with Ngataruóng (blai nr. VII)

c) ♂ Rungūlailild Ngiragarabói in Nggamaséd. Marriage to ♀ Jóulsau in Ngarameténgël (no children)

d) ♂ Ngiraibúóg. Marriage to Gongelípël (see IX).

blai nr. II Ngérturóng. Title ♂: Ngirturóng, ♀ Dirangérturóng.

The current family comes from blai nr. II a Ikelau from Goréör (see its keblil). Nowadays Ngirturóng is Petél, the son of a Ibědul from Goréör (see blai nr. I there) from his marriage to ♀ Gómogobai from blai 25. Mangaláng also there, it belongs to blai nr. II.

The relationship of a Ikelau and Ngérturóng is supposed to have happened like this: Melebál madál ♂ from blai a Ikelau had the "evil eye", and many people died because of this. Therefore, people from Goréör wanted to get rid of him and abandoned him on the western reef Ngardilúgés, where he built a wall, which even today is still called Gaděs uréör (see Vol. 1 p. 219). He ran to the north, until he met by chance a canoe from Ngaramlungúi that took him along. He stayed in a Imeúngs and got the title Ngirturóng. Thus it happened that these two houses were connected. Even now, when need arises, they exchange chiefs.

♂ Ngirturóng Petél (see Figure 33) marriage to ♀ Bílung Táru (see bl. I Goréör and At. 4); both lived most of the time in blai Mogoáng (Gongerol?) in Ngaremeténgël, the residence of the family since ancient times.

The former Ngirturóng was called Rěmăngăsau; he died because of dynamite; marriage bl. 25 of Goréör.

1. Blai Bungaruaŭ and Rubak-bai Bilekélek and Gosobulngaŭin a Imeúngs (from the west).

2. Blai nr. I a Klang with the master of the house in a Imeúngs (from the west).

3. Rubak-bai Geisaū with shrine in Galëgúi.

4. Blai nr. I Delangabiáng (in form of a bai) in Ngimís-Ngátpang (from the east).

blai nr. III. Ngarutelegēi is deserted; nobody holds the title Ngirutelegēi. A young boy called Gáripuk seems to be the only descendant. A so called a Tkepāu is said to belong to the blai, but does not really. Adopted children are from Ngátpang and Nggēsár. see also bl. 20.

blai nr. IV Sipóng. Title ♂ Ngirasipóng, ♀ Dirasipóng.

The blai is situated right next to the village house , in the east. Ngiramangerengei from story 207 comes from this house.

♀ Dirai kripóng + marriage to ♂ Ngiratáp from a Irāi.

↓
a) ♀ Makiei marriage to ♂ Rekāmesikt nr. II from Ngátpang a') ♂ Maluát marriage to ♀ Gongerōl in Galēgúi
↓

b') ♂ Ngiraibūg marriage to ♀ a Ingás in Nggamaséd

c') ♀ Tópēd marriage to ♂ Tárkong in Ngaremeténgēl

d') ♀ Bengkol marriage to ♂ Ngatkebúi in Ngardmau

e') ♂ Belodák

b) ♂ Bagáp Ngirasipóng marriage to ♀ Dildelúi from a Irāi with 4 children ♀ Moivai, ♀ Martáng, ♀ Mangaliúd and 1 boy.

c) ♂ Gomúd.

blai nr. V. Gēdúkl. Title ♂: a Jegád, ♀ Diragēdúkl.

At this time, the title is held by Gēlebúgēl, the Ngirubúruk of a Nglabáng, who was installed as master of the house by Ngirturóng, because the sons of a Ubád are too young.

♀ Ngēkói +
a) ↓ ♂ Risép +

b) ♀ a Ubád + I. marriage to ♂ Bakrebau from Nggamaséd a') ↓ ♂ Ngirakerēi

b') ♂ Ngirademók marriage to ♀ Diraurékēd from Ngaremeténgēl

c') ♂ Gomouróis marriage to ♀ Dirateráng from Nggamaséd a'') ♀ Dóng

a'') ♂ Ngirasmāsērúi

II. marriage to ♂ Ngiramerīl from a Imeúngs (blai Ngarameketí +)

↓
o.

Figure 33 Ngirturóng Petél nr. II.

b) ♀ Butlbai marriage to Sérek from Ngarsúl (lives in a Imeúngs in bl. 12 seethere)

a') ♂ Beóug marriage to ♀ Dóngēs in Ngardmau

b') ♀ a Jegád

c') ♀ a Isebóng

d') ♀ Ngedíkēs

e') ♀ Gēbil

f') ♀ Rosang

} young

c) ♂ Meduei Mangesebūg marriage to ♀ Gomoguóng from Ngērutegēi (s. Gor. bl. 44)

a') ♀ Diraivóng marriage see bl. VII

b') ♂ a Irókl (s. bl. III in a Ulegetóng) marriage to Sariáng

d) ♂ Bagés marriage with ♀ Goiúngil from Ngabúkēd.²²⁸ [in Ngardmau blai nr. IX. Ngarungēláng. Titel ♂: Galíd, ♀ Dirungēláng.

♀ Iluái remásāg +

a) ♀ Diradái + o.

b) ♀ Kengrád + marriage with Kerāi in Ngabúkēd (see I. marriage bl. VIII)

a') ♀ Gongēlípēl marriage to ♂ Ngiraibūg (see bl. I) a'') ♂ Malsól

b'') ♀ Delangabiáng

c'') ♀ Dípeg

d'') ♀ Ngaremóket

} young

c) ♀ a Miótel o.

d) ♀ Tēmól o.

e) ♂ Samoáng

f) ♂ a Iroei

blai nr. X. a Tmēlēu +. Tit. ♂ Dingeliús ra Kláng, ♀ —

In ruins (a Nglabāng). Those who belong to it live in bl. I Melílt in a Ulegetóng.

♂ Gotáng Dingeliúsrakláng (s. bl. I Ngērubúruk in a Nglabāng), marriage to ♀ a Idúp, who comes from blai Gobagatáng, which is now in ruins; belongs now to bl. I a Kláng. Mother Júngēl, grand mother a Mióu.

blai 12. Gáramang. Titel ♂: Gotáoēr.

Belongs to bl. 6.

♂ Sérek Gotáoēr marriage with ♀ Bútlbai. s. bl. VIII.
(from Ngarsúl)

blai 20. Gobekēbóng. Titel ♂: Gedelengód.

♂ Gērúngēl (see bl. VIII Bengkól) marriage to ♀ Mērél from bl. III.

blai 21. a T

ád.

♀ P l

u

t marriage to ♂ Ngirgētēt in Ngardmāu

♀ Gētór marriage with Ngirutáng in Ngërutegeĩ.

Families of a Ulegetóng.

blai nr. I. Melílt. Title ♂: Bedúl ra telāu.

Inhabitants see bl. X in a Imeúngs.

blai nr. III. a Lbóng. Title ♂: Bedúl ralbóng.

♂ a Irokl (s. bl. VIII in a Imeúngs c. á.) marriage to ♀ Sariáng in Ngardmāu.

blai nr. IV. a Bárs. Title ♂: Bedúl ra bárs.

♀ Galëós from a Rois marriage to ♂ Kěrai from Ngabúkěd (III. marriage)

↓
a) ♀ Mangerengēi marriage to ?

↓
a') master of the house a Rgúld marriage with a Táoěg from Nggamaséd
b) ♀ Gētei

↓
o.

blai 7. Gētebóng.

Master of the house a Rungūl. Marriage to Maguágěd (s. bl. V and VI. a Imeúngs).

Families of a Nglabáng.

blai nr. I. Ngërubúruk. Title ♂: Ngirubúruk.

a) ♀ Ngamés

↓
a') ♂ Gotáng marriage to ♀ a Idúp (see both bl. X in a Imeúngs)

b') ♀ Gěgěrí marriage to ♂ Ngiramoai (s. bl. VIII in a Imeúngs)

b) Master of the house Gomesiáu marriage to ♀ Tutód from blai a R'rekóng + in a Nglabáng

↓
2 ♂ and 2 ♀ died young

c) ♂ Ngiramesúběd marriage to Běrei in Ngardmāu

↓
o.

blai 6. a Igěráng.

♂ Sangúr from Ngarenggóng marriage to ♀ Getingáng in Nggamaséd (blai Ngěskebei)

↓
a) ♂ a Ulenggóng + marriage with Dirangeremāu Ngarekngóng

↓
a') ♂ a Irevei +
b') ♂ Ngirageúngěl marriage to ♀ Gomoguóng in

2 children [Ngaremeténgěl

c') ♀ Mariei +
b) ♂ Kukmei Ngirai baióng + marriage to ♀ Ngetuperei in Nggamaséd (blai

↓
o.

c) ♂ Marsíl + [Ngěskebei)

5. Ngaremeténgël

(KUB.: Ngarameténgel).

Description of the place (plan 14): In former times the place was situated more to the west, in the mangroves. After crossing the height of a Uluáng by foot for half an hour it is situated in the south-west of a Imeúngs in a flat valley which gets deeper towards the water. A stream flows through the village and, carved in, it falls over a rocky mound of 2—3 m height down to the channel, where a boathouse is standing. On the southern side the water is towered by a vertical 20 m high, bare rock face (see Vol. I p. 241).

Plan 14

Like everywhere, it consists of green tuff with inlayed pieces of lava. On a rock above the mouth of the stream stands a new building (a) with a corrugated roof, which Ngirturóng from a Imeúngs has built here (s. bl. II). During my visit in 1910 he lived in the five-door bl. IV Mogoáng, which has been already mentioned in story 157.

The channel Godar ar deróng is about 400 m long; in front of its mouth in the lagoon lies the rock Gasáu, which is about as big as a man, and which has a hole (see Figure 29a in Vol. I p. 226). See also the grassland behind the settlement with a view of the Ngáruak in Vol. I plate 6.

History: Gorágël from story 13 was born here. How Galid Gad ë gadúg came to be venerated here is told in story 157. The following story 158 alludes to Galid Ngirukdápël and to Roispelú. However, both emphasize the wealth of fish in the channel of Ngaremeténgël due to the galid, which is one and the same. KUB. V p. 18 mentions Medegêi pélaúas galid, but without any reason.

In former times the community of rubak (klóbak) was called ar Ugérgëóu, when the people of Ngaremeténgël were still living on the lime rocks; later they adopted the name Ngarabedagál based on bai Bedagál, which is now a club house. Incidentally, the name Bedagál points to the famous blai with the same name in Roispelú; its influence most likely reached all the way to Ngaremeténgël.

Constitution.

bai l pelú (village house): A. Bedagál

klóbak (council): Ngarabedagál

galíd (god): Gad ě gadúg.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Ngira dílúbög	Dílúbög +	a Ugélebil
II	a Jegád	Mordilóng	a Diltengrángěr
III	a Bedúl	Ngarabúiel	Dilugelióu
IV	a Rungūl ra mogoáng	Mōgoáng	Dilng nglósög
V	Dingeliús	Gongeróel	nr. V
VI	Rungūl railíld	Taplivál	nr. VI
VII	nr. VII	Mádlbai	nr. VII
VIII	(Ngirasumáng from a Nglabáng)		—
IX	a Ililau	a Irisóng +	Délilau ²²⁹
X	Kěmědángěl	a Blulúkes +	—

Nr. X is the "distributor". Further blai: 11. Smaserúi, 12. a Meréd.

gálděbegěl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
Ngaratógědulík	B. Bedagál +	Bedagál +	right
Ngarakáep	C. a Ugulalúlk	a Ugulalúlk	left

6. Nggamaséd

(KUB.: Kamesét).

Description of the place (plan 15): 25 minutes from Ngaremeténgël; situated rather strangely on the hills, which border the Ngátpang passage to the north. A mere 300 m to the west of the village lies a sheer mass of rocks, the 100 m high Sisngabáng, which you can climb easily from the west (from the path still about 30 m high). Like everything else it consists of green tuff with pieces of embedded lava. From the summit you have a magnificent view over Ngaremedú, the entrance of Ngátpang and over the Uleúl'í-Basin, which I photographed in five connected photographs (see Figure 35). From those islands in the entrance the ones outside, in the north, remain hidden, namely Kleil búdög, Lild, a Ugul a maráděl, and Ngěsebókěl. In the west the mountain Bád ě gamelēi with its 3 rocky hilltops lies in front of them. Also

Also towards the north one can see Roismlungúi with its summits, a Gatiroír in 61° and Ngáruak in 56° (=NE to N) as well as the entire landscape Ngaramlungúi; of course a Imeúngs is hidden by its hill. You can see the W-coast all the way to Pkula galíd and even point Pkul a pelá u at Gólei appears a little bit hazy and far in the north. Yet nearby, in the southwest of the western trailhead, the double rock Ngaremegóng lies on the grassland, about 20 m high but so steep that both rocks cannot be climbed. You can pass in-between them. All around is wasteland; only down at the entrance on the peninsula a Ilagauír can you see some woods. When you pass the Sisngabáng-Rock, coming from Ngaremeténgel, the path soon drops while turning to the south. A short stone path, bordered on the western side by an earthen wall, towards the east it looks down at the 3 blai 14, 15 a. 16. It passes an earthen projection, about as big as several men, and meets the middle of the main stone path leading from west to east. There lies the stone quad of the 2 village-houses Ngaramelóng, A Gosobulngáu in the north and B Bilekélék in the south.

Plan 15.

On the eastern head lies bai D Ngëtítóng, on the western head bai C a Iksíd +, next to it an ilúd-pavement and a water for bathing. A road leads from here to the landing place Ngarebái, which lies in a bay, formed by the peninsula Gomekrengúkl. It lies in the west of Idudersáng, thus on the secondary plan b of plan 3 in Vol. 1 it is indicated too far in the east.

History: Despite the strangely romantic setting of the village, there are no special stories known from here. Obviously, it was dependent from Roispelú (see p. 156); they also share galíd Damlë galíd.

Constitution of Nggamaséd.

bai l pelú (village house): Ngaramelóng. A. Gosobulngau, B. Bilekélëk.

galíd (god): Adam le Kalid (KUB.).

klóbak (council): Ngaramelóng.

female council: arBaul'liád

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):	kleblil (clan):
I	Bagés	Ngaramakeár	Gobagád	Kéd
II	Gadlpelú	Magëveî +	a Guódel'lagád	a Iterír
III	a Rungūl ra berém	Mesebēlau	a Róu	Gogád a rugél
IV	Sagarkebúr	Gobēketēl +	Gobagád a úgul a rois	a Ugular rois
V	Rungūl ra ilíld	a Ilíld	Gobagád ra ilíld	a Ilíld
VI	Gádlbai	a Klëkéd +	Gobogóu	a Klëkéd
VII	a Jegád	Ngaragumangál	Gëbíl	a Tkelau
VIII	a Ulonggóng	Gongriúr +	Gëmói	Ngëdég
IX	Gadëruángël	a Jár	a Ugëlebíl	—
X	nr. X	Miserengúl +	Goilúes	—

11. a Medop

14. Galípël

12. Ngërekebeî

15. Ngítóng

13. Godelí

16. Temaséngël

nr.:	gáldëbegël (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel)	bitang (side):
♂	Ngarakladíkm	C. a Iksíd	a Iksíd	right
♀	Ngarmeliveî
♂	Ngaramogerógër	D. Ngëtitóng	Ngëtitóng	left
♀	Ngaradelegëdeg

7. Ngareklngóng.

A small place of no importance, in-between Ngaremeténgël and Nggamaséd, situated on a hilly and rocky terrain above a cave.

In 1910 there were only two blai, Blulblai and Magëveî.

Deserted Villages.

8. Ngaramedángep +.Exact location is unknown. This place was known as the oppressor of Ngimís and Ngátpang, therefore galid Medegeîpélau set fire to it (see story 197). Its inhabitants fled in boats and according to the belief of the Palauans, they are supposed to have reached Japan. The Japanese are said to have come from Ngaramedángep (see story 114). Galid Medegeípélau is supposed to have taken from here the Janus-headed wooden figure Maráelkéd.

9. a Uluáng +. In former times situated in-between a Imeúngs and Ngaremeténgël. Its characteristic is the step mountain, already mentioned at the first place (Figure 34), which forms a step pyramid, the Bukl ra uluáng (also Bukr'ra uluáng). On the summit the house of rub. nr. I Goukerdëu is supposed to have stood, but this seems hardly possible,

Buk ra Uluáng house-place house-place
-- path nr. I. nr. II.

Fig. 34. The step-mountains of a Uluáng

as the upper most area is rather small and unsuitable. Probably the house was next to it in the west, where a stone pavement is still situated, whereas further west, on a small elevation blai nr. II of a Rengíl could have been standing. Between these two elevations a footpath leads to Ngaremeténgël.

Story 113 tells about a Rengíl, who was poor and became wealthy. The relationship with title nr. III and IV in Ngarekobasáng is unmistakable. In former times, this place was powerful and for a long time oppressed a Imeúngs until this place allied with Ngel 'láu and a Ulimáng and disposed of the trouble -maker (see story 113). The fugitives went to Ngërutói in Ngardmá u and also took the stone table there, where it is still standing (see above p. 77 and Figure 27). However, the family Udës turned to Ngaregúr and then moved to Melekéiok, where they soon came into power (see above p. 104).

10. Gorul'l +. Half way between a Uluáng and Ngaremeténgël you cross the small stream Lūl; at its mouth, down in the mangroves this place is supposed to have been situated.

11. Ngarbagéd re ngül, north of Ngátpang (see Ngardúbög) in the interior, on the upper reaches of the stretch of water that flows into the Klólú táog of the Uleúl'l-Basin, near the 3 wooded mountains, mentioned on p. 138. Concerning the destruction of Ngarbagéd rengül, the following is said: once upon a time, there was a great famine. Everyone went into the bush, looking for water and fruits and ate leaves. A boy from Blissang got lost and arrived here where another boy found him and took him with him. They stayed together and grew up. Soon there was again an abundance of food. However, when the parents of the boy from the place came home with their catch of fish, they gave their son something to eat but nothing to the foreigner. This enraged him. When rubak nr. I held a terígöl-feast, the foreign boy went home to Blissang and told his people to come and to observe the dance and then to destroy the place. Hence they came. In the early morning, when the dancers were tired and went to sleep in the bai, the boy from Blissang closed all the doors, called his people, and set fire to the bai, so that all the people of this place perished. Nobody of this settlement survived. — Story 116 about rubak nr. I and story 117 about the tútau-morning bird take place here.

12. Ngūkl + provided the porters for the litter of Góbak ra ibedagál in Ngarameskáng (see story 104). See also story 115 about the production of fire.

13. Ngkebedūl +, situated on the mountain with the same name, Rois ngkebedūl. It was founded by people from Ngáruangēl (see story 20). It was situated not far from Ngarbagéd re ngūl, right next to the eastern slope of a Gatiroír; see also story 121 about Góbak ra tkedēsāu, who seduced the wife of the chief of this place. It is depicted in Bai Diberdí in a Imeúngs.

14. Ngátmadeĩ +, situated on the Klóultáog-River. See story 119 about the alligator, which wreaked havoc here. Obviously this is SEMPER's Tamadé (see Vol. 1 p. 140), thus the settlement must still have existed in 1862. There is a channel called Ngátmadeĩ in Ngabiúl (see plan 1^d).

15. Metëğërákl +, west of the Klóultáog-River, on the southern foot of the big mountain; its inhabitants once fled to Ngarsúl.

16. a Idëğór +, situated north of the big mountain, Dilukāi's residence (compare 33. Ngabekāi). Its inhabitants fled to Ngūkl.

17. Ngaremeskáng + (poet.: death)

Description of the place (plan 16): like Ngarbagéd rengūl it is situated in the interior, between the feeder streams to the Kloultáog, hence on the western slope of the wooded and 125 m high Rois meskáng (Meskáng-Mountain, see Vol. 1 p. 166

Plan 16.

On June 7th 1907, crossing Babldáob from a Imeúings, we reached it in one hour (see above p. 138). Shortly before, you cross a feeder river on a tree trunk²³⁰. A few steps to the south it flows into the 10 m wide Kloultáog. A few hundred steps further east you wade through the other arm of the river. Both are about 2—3 m deep carved in to the ground of the forest. On the other side, in the east, after climbing gently you reach the stone square of the blai of rubak nr. I Góbak ra ibedagál.

A wide stone path, about 100 m long, mounts from here to the east to the height and ends with a wide head. Towards the north is the big stone square of the former village houses, bai l pelú Ngarail'láng. In the north of this are two legend stones: one a two m long and 40 cm thick, hexagonal basalt column, said to have been broken by drunken ghosts. Right next to it a stone that depicts a big iléngěł-vessel for ailáot-beverage (syrup water); from the feast of Góbak ra iláměs (story 17^b). From here a stone path first leads to the north, passing the blai of rubak nr. V Góbak ra iláměs²³¹. Then reaching the summit of Rois meskáng it turns to southeast and then ends nearby, in the vicinity of a 2 m high waterfall, where a nice resting place exists. The stream Manga ra galdeóng flows in a southern direction.

Ngaremeskáng is a famous place with many legends, as shown in story 17 about Típětip a kmíěg and in story 104. The legends about Góbak ra ibedagál and Góbak ra iláměs are well known in Palau. It is said that Ngaremeskáng was the biggest place in Palau. At the time of a Răklăi 8 Temól (about 100 years ago) it reached all the way from the east to the west, from despadál'l to keúkl. Each bital táog, in the east *ra ikertăi*in Ngát pang, in the west riklbai, had six men's clubs, each with about one hundred members, see also story 103, 105 and 106.

From Melekéiok to Nggěsár the mongol went to Ngaremeskáng where each bai, those of the clubs as well as those of the rubak, took 5 — 6 each. Story 104 tells about the destruction of the place, which, once it had taken revenge on Melekéiok, did not feel safe anymore and therefore moved to Tegebóug (19) and Roispelú.

Constitution of Ngaremeskáng.

Two clans: Keklil raibedagál and Keklil negëremobáng.

klóbak (council): Ngarail'láng.

ardil (female council): arIbíl.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Góbakraibedagál	a Ibedagál	Gëbil
II	a Rengúgël re ngëre mobáng	Ngëre mobáng	Gobilogóng
III	Regës urúl	a Tepëdál	Dirogóng
IV	Ngira keturáng	Ngulítël	a Jëlëg
V	Góbakrailámës	a Ilámës	Bilëdil
VI	a Ridësîl	a Ikëám	Dirariáng
VII	a Regóng	a Pedóng	Diraregongáiër
VIII	a Regëdúdës	a Kamángël	Gëtëgëtëoáng
IX	a Mad	Tëuid	Ngameúsëg
X	Ngiramogalás	Ngaramogalás	Diramogalás

18. a Rois +, also known as Rois pelú, the "Mountain Place"; it is situated on the ledge of the mountain a Gatiroír in about 120 m height in the east. There are still some palm trees and stone foundations. KUB. V p. 28 talks about Royos pelu as the "starting point of history". Further he says II p. 119 that the house Bedagál comes from Ngáruangël (see also story 20). He also notes that the former god Adam el Kalid²³² has been replaced by the later Ira baulbéy. Story 104 also mentions Dam lë galíd as the god of Rois pelú, but at the same time also as servant of Góbak ra ibedalgál from Ngaremeskáng. All points to the fact that Rois was a subject of this mighty place. However on the other hand, Rois was also powerful and respected. It was allowed to buy dugong (KUB. VIII p. 176), but was not allowed to catch it; on the other hand it had fishing rights in Ngaremeténgël (story 158). Compare the village Rois on Ngeaur where bl. II is called a Ibedagál; see also story 108 about the thief from a Rois in Ngesisëg who was caught (21).

19. Tegebóug +. Settlement from Ngaremeskáng (story 104).

20. Ngaridëóngël +, in the east, not far away from a Imeúngs, on the way to Ngaremeskáng and Melekéiok, where now is a dense forest (see Vol. 1 p. 166). It was lying on the river next to a rectangular pudding-hill with a flat top, about 8 m high and slopping at 45°. On the summit there is a rectangular hole about 60 cm deep and with 30 cm water. Not far away there is a 2nd second hill like this one, called a Ugul a búög, the "Trunk of the Betelnut Palm Tree", because, according to a legend, out of this hollow on top of the hill a palm tree had grown towards heaven (see Ngesisëg).

21. Ngesisëg +, situated nearby Ngaridëóngël and well known due to its betelnut plam tree, which has already been mentioned. Story 107 mentions both blai Sekmesúk and a Iterír of Ngesisëg. Further it mentions that the ringworm first came here and that the women of Ngërugóp in Ngát pang were bai-girls here; see also story 108 in a Rois and 109 about the galid from Ngiraibaberóng.

22. Ngaramagaroáng +, situated right in the north of the former two, at the foot of the wood-mountain with the same name, which has been mentioned above on p. 137. KUB. V p. 27 says: "Amlahél a Ngasmasóang is the protection goddess of the land Ngasmasóang, the mother of the protection god Kaymagey of the same land. She is the wife of Ngirunhór, the main god of Ngaragolunk"; see p. 87, 121 a. 122.

23. Ngërutóël +, situated north of aImeúngs.

24. Ngadesiúr +, situated on the western coast next to point Pkul a bad. Here, story 110 about the fat a Ilúlk takes place.

25. Nggesúg +, was situated near the bay of Ngaramásag, in the north east of Ngadesiúr.

26. a Irisóng +, was situated between Nggesúg and Ngaramásag, east of Ngadesiúr (Ngaramásag + see distr. III).

27. Ngátpang(Figure 35 and plate 9⁴).

(KUB.: Adpang).

Number of villages: 1, and 6 deserted ones.

Just like Ngivál it is a small secondary district, which seems to have long lost its independence.

Political division: Gëdelibúköl, consisted of Ngardúbög +, the main village, Ngimís and Ngërugóp +.

Description of the land (plan 17): The characteristic of the area are the mangrove woods and the adjacent hilly, slightly mounting terrain in the southeast of the Ngátpang-Basin, which has been mentioned above on p. 137 and in Vol. I p. 170, 225, 235. Fog, gatúl a Gobagád, named after the goddess (see p. 47), is here quite frequent. A sort of white clay gasagáem is also found here.

Industry: Pottery, especially the strange big clay lamps with figurines are produced here.

Privileges: The dipping of the wooden gorovidël-ornaments and the storage in a Klim during the ruk-dance in a Iraĩ (see there and Galáp p. 58 and Goréör). Also the blowing of the conch shell, KUB. II p. 111 does not mention this (see Ngërupesáng p. 110).

History: Concerning the creation of this area see Ngardúbög 29. Already in former times, Ngátpang was closely related to a Iraĩ especially because of galid Medegē i pélaui (see story 197). His mother is Duói, whom KUB. V p. 7—20 mentions often as a goddess for different places, comes from Ngátpang. Also at Ngarsúl and Ngardmau Ngátpang is often mentioned in relationship with this god, especially the resting-place Ngarbád l mángël on the grassland, which is also known as the dying place of the bersóiög-snake, the mother of Gorágël (story 13). Ngira meredáng (Medegēi pélaui) created the spring Ngebúiet there.

Stories 119, 120, 121, 123, 124 and 135 take place in Ngátpang. Of all those the one about the boasting spirit and the alligator are well known. Also the story about the spondias tree (a édel) is likewise much told in Ngátpang. The tree had big, sweet fruits, which were always collected by the stronger half of the village, whereas the other weak one had to look on (log. Mel. bai Gádēs i gebíl, see Vol. 4).

28. Ngimís, also pronounced Ngímēs.

(KUB.: Emis)

generally now called Ngátpang as the only place.

Plan. 17.

Description of the place (plan 17): Can be reached through a 900 m long and narrow táog and can be reached from the Uleúl'l-Basin. The southern one seems to be shorter. It takes about one hour to go through the channel. On the landing place bai C. Ngërutegeî, next to it is a boathouse. A stone path leads from here with a little ascent up to bai B. Gosiáo1, which lies at the spot where the stone path meets the main road. Along this one, the village bai A Berokóng lies in the south on an elevated stone foundation. Not far from it, in the west, lies bl. I of Replkūl, built in a bai-like fashion, like the one of rubak nr. I a Rāklai from Melekéiok with 5 aimúl-beams. It has a big stone pavement (see plate 9⁴). However even stranger is blai 11 a Urékéd (see nr. I Ngabiúl p. 28) on the northern stone path, which has similar conditions as the house of the priest of rubak nr. I. In 1910, it still had a fortune-telling-chamber and a cupboard filled with mats for food offerings. In the surroundings were several consecration huts and old carvings, a sun-hut, a stone with a face and in the bushes a device like a turnpike with wooden figurines, this was called Geimobedúl "His One Head". blai 11 stood formerly near bai C (see part VI: galid cult).

Concerning the constitution, I have to say that nr. II is the sovereign. He is so holy that he can only eat food prepared by his own cook; just like a Răklāi in Melekéiok. The basis of his leadership can be found in story 119. But, in former times, rub. nr. I a Replkūl seems to have had a leading position, as can be deduced from the story about Ngarekeai (distr. VI).

bai l pelú (village-house): Berokóng A.

klóbak (council): Ngimís.

female council: ar Ibíl.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Replkūl	Deláng a biáng	Gëbil
II	Rekămesíkt	a Inglaî	Bagëklidil
III	Segauás	Sngés	Bogoiláng
IV	a Ruběáng	Gëtët	Dirangeldégäl
V	a Regeiváng	Ngarbáblblai	Dir' regeiváng
VI	a Ugeldíkës	a Idegór	Dilibédúl raidegór
VII	a Ridép	Ngërekdoi	Diridép
VIII	a Bedúl	Ngaramokisóng	Dilibédúl ra ...
IX	a Mad ra sikós	a Sikós	nr. IX (kěmédángël)
X	Mad ra ketóm	Ngururéor ²³³	nr. X

Further blai: 11. a Urékéd (galid bai), 12. Goeáol, 13. Ngaragelbóng, 14. Imadëráng; ♀ nr. IX is the "distributor of food".

	gáldëbegël (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaragolík	B Gosiáol	(Gosiáol has no	right
I ♀	Ngaramangidáp		landing place)
I ♂	Ngaraiús	C Ngërutëgei ²³⁴	Ngërutëgei	left
I ♀	Ngarabóug

29. Ngardúbog +,

as already mentioned, in former times it was the principal place of Ngátpang; now it is deserted. It is situated north of Ngimís, on a side branch of the main channel (see plan 17).

A Bedagál-man married a woman of bl. I a Tkedēsāu. When he visited the family he heard the people of this place constantly talking about catching pigeons and other sports. He asked them why they did not take care of their fields, and they answered him that they did not own any land. Out of compassion he gave them the grassland from Ngarbāgéd rengūl all the way to Ngardúbōg as well as the mangrove belt of Uleúl'l. A rubak nr. I from here bought for one galebúgēp the spirit boat of Góbak ra ilámēs from Ngaremeskáng.

Concerning the purchase of the sacred boat of Góbak ra ilámēs by rub. nr. I see also story 17^b. Concerning the marriage of rub. nr. II a Irókl see story 136. Then see also above story 121 at Ngkebedūl.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):
I	Góbak ra tkedēsāu	a Tkedēsāu +
II	a Irókl	Ngaramáolseī +
III	a Lbai	Ngabúōg +
IV	a Itágǎřǎgár	a Iklbóng +
V	a Bduraibúōg	Raibúōg +
VI	a Gomói	Telígo +

30. Ngērugóp +.

The third village that belongs to Gēdelibúkōl . It was situated half an hour west of Ngimís , on the way to Ngarekeāi, halfway in-between this place and the river Tabágading . It was situated near the pudding -hill Roisugóp, which has a quadrangular hollow on the top, just like the Ngamedú-Mountain (above p. 126 and Vol. 1 pp. 170 and 238). The women were bai-girls in Ngesisēg (see story 107). Place of refuge for Melekéiok (see there history).

31. Gēuáng +.32. Ikdíd +.

In 1850 some houses were still standing.

33. a*Ikr pelú +, "Outer Village".34. Ngabekāi +, mentioned in story 122. Bagei, [who was] from here, had his sister Dilukāi made into a gable figure, because of her bad way of life (see about it in part V Bai). 16. a Idegór also claims her for himself.

35. Ngădăsákěr +, was added here, although it is not sure that it once was a place. The sister of god Jegad re ngél was called Magád rengădăsákěr. The place is said to be a grassland near Ngarsúl (distr. IV; see story 7). Probably, it was situated east of Ngátpang, story 125 about the snake Ngădăsákěr also points in this direction. On the ked-mountain a Iduderóng (see above p. 137) a wooded hill top with the name Ngădăsákěr was shown to me, of which I took a bearing in 71°, of course this one should be situated in the Ibars-Chain.

District VI. a Imelĭk (Figure 36 and 40)

MCCLUER: Emmeleigue and Eimellegue, SEMP.: Eimelig, KUB.: Eymeliik, v.M.M.: Emelik, COELLO III: Fimeleg, MISS.: Aimeliik), politically called Gě oalbai, though this applies most of all to the 4 places "four bai" a Imŭl, Ngaramidár, Ngapědég, and Gámliangěl, which were considered strong so that Ngarekeā i observed a policy of silence concerning their resolutions. Only Rungulbai himself could give them orders. It is said when a bai receives a new floor, the four divide it into four parts.

Number of inhabitants: 1.1.11: 264.

Number of villages: 7, deserted ones 11.

klóul pelú (main village): Ngarekeāi.

rubukúl (its chief): Rŭngŭlbai.

armeāu (people): Ngarabúngs (see story 200).

galíd (god): a Itúngělbai.

Political Groups:

Gě oalbai, mentioned above, consists of a Imŭl, Ngaramidár, Ngapedég and Gámliangěl.

Description of the Land:

Geographically Lower-Aimelĭk, Ióulimelĭk, everything situated north of Gámliangěl, is distinguished from Upper Aimelik, Báblimlĭk, everything south of it. The district is situated on the southwestern coast of Babeldáob, south of the Ngátpang-Entrance all the way to the great passage, the Toágěl mid. The mountainous character of the northern part, the peninsula Lower Aimelĭk, which is formed by the Ngátpang-Basin, the Ngátpang-Entrance and the western reef-lake (see Vol. I p. 226 Figure 30) has already been mentioned in Vol. I p. 206 as the mountain of Gámliangěl. The view of this richly wooded part is indeed very charming, if you enjoy it from a boat following the coastline or from the treeless a Lmŭt-mountain (see Vol. 1 p. 230 Figure 39, also Figure 40 and 41) which lies between Medórōm and Gámliangěl. From here you can also see very well the bay of Gámliangěl, called a Imelsúběg (Figure 36). After going around the rocky promontory Pkurengél it opens. Similar to Pkul a galíd it has a second point; here it is called Pisagĕrād, after the Crinum-plant. The mountain chain that reaches from Rois Gámliangĕl to the point (see Vol. 1 pict 38 pp. 230 and 232) has, as already mentioned, the following summits: Tóirōis²³⁵, a Lmūt, Smirsbād²³⁶, Ngardelúngg, Ngartelogáng, Gomógĕlbesós, the moon-mountain²³⁷ Roisbúiĕl, and Tapingáng. Here is also the piece of land Ngarengĕl, where god Jegádrengĕl created the sun and the moon, and is still standing there in form of a stone (story 6 and 7). The southern point of the bay is called Pkurengesúk²³⁸. In the south of the bay of Gámliangĕl the coast is mainly a flat range of hills, which stretches along the beach. Its summits are Roisbóng, Ngategúm, Ngĕsibáng, etc. A ked-grassland is on the western slope of the range of hills of Lower-Aimelik, on the peninsula of Gámliangĕl and in the south of this place (see there), then at a Imūl and on the mountain Ked ra túnd, which is mentioned in more detail at Ngatkip. In the south, the coast forms two gently curved bays, the one of Ngarengĕivóg, its northern point is called Gomgelólĕl l mud and lies next to the island Gokerdūl. It is well known because of galíd Boi (story 13) and because of the attack of the people from Goréör (story 49); then there is the bay Medéur Geos. Both can be distinguished on Figure 31 and 32 in Vol. 1 p. 226 and 227. The channel of a Imūl, called Ngĕrtúkĕr, flows into the first bay, into the last one the channel Ngarderár. In the south of the bay Medéur Geos is point Gogológol; in its mangrove forest lies a small rocky island called Búngungau le gútūm "Red Earth" (see plan 3), a resting place for fishermen.

Industry:

Rich in taro, betel nut palms, and betel nut pepper (KUB. I p. 34);

History:

Wealth is buried in a Imelik (story 3). First the district was under Melekéiok but then changed to Goréör, once this one had conquered Ngaragúmĕlbai; more about it in the history of Ngarekeāi and the history of the land. Without any doubt, the chiefs of Rūngūlbai sometimes had great power (see story 207 about Dir'rūngūlbai 7, as can be seen in Ngk At. 2 Gen. III). Concerning story 19 about Milad see Ngarekeāi.

In 1911, exiled Ponapeans were settled in this district; 300 namely in Mekér, in a Imīg 25, in Ngardāi 75. P. Placidus (A. d. Miss. 1912 p. 26) reports about it. Because of a lack of plantations, which still had to be planted, food was very poor.

About the god of the land a Itungĕlbai it is said that he came from the west, from the Philippines. He came with his friend Medegĕi pélau (see a Irai and story 197). Both of them first slept on the sandy island Ngaregebál (plan 2 □ 25). Itúngělbai had a cudgel made of a gavés-tree as a cushion for the head, Medegeĩ pélaui one from an udūiēs-tree. Itúngělbai took this away from his friend while he was sleeping and gave him the one from gavés-wood instead. Waking up Medegeĩ pélaui noticed the theft. Angrily he said to Itúngělbai: Well! You shall never eat bats from the udūiēs-tree, but I will take the gavés with me to a Iraĩ and all people shall bring me pigeons from this one, their favorite tree. Thus it is custom that the people from a Imūl bring the first five golik, which they caught during the first udūiēs-blossoming to Rengěgěl, the priest of Itúngělbai. However, the rubak of a Iraĩ, together with those of Goréör, ate pigeons at the time when they were fat in all places of Ngaragúmělbai.

a Itúngělbai, so it was said, lived in the "Crab-Wreck", in *a Ulemásag 1 galěgěd*²³⁹. Either the demon broke the crabs, or people thought that he lived in the stranded and broken animals. He was very unruly. When the bearer of taro, a Iluógěl, the mother of Golungīs (story 170) passed him with the taro slippers on her hands, in order to delight Pélaui with her gifts, he asked her for food. When she wanted to put him off until later, he wanted to have his own way and grabbed her. Then the woman dropped one field right in the most remote place. Thus, it happened that Ngarekeai has its taro patches far away from the village.

About another galíd Melbútl, people say that he lives in a big stone on the forest-mountain Roisbóng. From time to time he blew the conch shell so that people thought somebody was attacking them. When the enemies did not show up, then people thought that war was not far away.

1. Ngarekeai — a Imīg.

(KUB.: Ngargeay)

formerly inland, situated 120 m high as Pelúrekeai (Old-Ngarekeai). It lies in Bablimelīk. In 1907, the last houses were moved to the harbor place a Imīg, where New-Ngarekeai was built. The distance between the two places is about 35 minutes.

Description of the place (plan 18^{a, b}): Today's Ngarekeai lies at the border of the sea. Two channels lead through the about 100 m wide mangrove belt to the landing places Ngěrudelóng (S.), formerly the entrance to Mekér and Gasél (N.) the one of a Imīg. The two are about 200 m separated from each other. Each landing place has a bai, but only in Ngěrudelóng is a boathouse. Here the stone pier leads from the bai out to the open water, because this landing place is the most frequented one. From each of the two landing places a stone path leads about 20 m up. Both are separated by a flat basin, where the stream Bār'rák flows to the sea. Up on the height, both stone paths meet at the stream and unite over a wooden bridge, which crosses the more than 2 m wide rocky bed of the stream (see Vol. 3). The northern stone path has two branches, the eastern one ends blind. The village-bai A' Bai rekeai is situated on it. At the trailhead a Idók the north-eastern one continues as a footpath, which forks after 100 m into the roads to Galégúi and Ngapedég. In 1910, some cows were grazing here. The southern stone path sends only one branch to the east. In the corner of the starting point lies the blai of rubak nr. I, the "Great Blai", Klóulblai, on a beautiful stone construction just like a bai. On the trailhead lies bai D' aRóu. South of it, in a small wood lies the village Mekér, also called Ngaramidár (see p. 170).

Plan 18 a a. b

From the trailhead a Róu you reach, slowly mounting in about 35 minutes the former Ngarekeai — Old-Ngarekeai — situated about 120 m high on a mountain ridge. First you reach the lower head of the stone path where bai D a Róu was situated on the deserted stone square, which now stands in Imig. The stone path mounts straight eastwards up the slope of the mountain. After about 200 m it passes bai C Gasél¹, which stands now below at the northern landing place. After another 100 m you reach the summit and the stone path turns at a right angle to the south. On the corner the wide stone quad of the village-house A Bairēkeāi was in ruins in 1909. I took both the lower planks from the fallen front-gable; they are now in the Museum of Ethnography in Hamburg (see Figure part VII). Opposite of the front gable, on a small earthen mound, overgrown with vegetation, stood a big bowl for cut-off-heads (Figure 37). The golekáng-pot of Milad's daughter is also supposed to be next to the bai; I did not see it. The southern stone path leads over 2 ilíud-places, Goluál and Ngaregolual. From the road, in-between them, you have a beautiful view of the mountain a Gatiroír at a Imeúngs. Then, after a mere 100 steps, you reach a stone square where the village house A of a Imūl stood (plan 18^a and below 3).

Figure 37. Cut-off-head-bowl made of stone in

A 400 m long stone path leads from here straight south to the head a Utlilóng (only at the beginning lies an ilíud a Ugul a medú). In the south of it lies bai B a Iregēreke i on the grassland Goubaláng, which is covered with black stones. From here you have a beautiful view of Goréör (see Figure 31 in Vol. 1 p. 226). In the near surroundings are several ked-hills with steps and stone slabs on the summit.

Industry: Nothing special is known.

Privileges: Catches, sells, and buys dugong (KUB.: VII p. 176), see a Imūl and Gámliangēl. A boy from Ngarekeāi is supposed to have been the inventor of the dugong-bracelet (KUB.: VIII p. 181). Exchange of bai-girls with a Imeúngs (see there).

History: Ngarekeāi is a child of Mílad (see story 19), precisely the sister of a Imeúngs, Melekéiok and Goréör, therefore the brothers, according to custom, liked to come to the sister in order to get money for feasts. When she was not willing, armed force was used. Thus Ngarekeāi was several times attacked by a Imeúngs, as has been mentioned there (p. 144; see also story 207). The pot of the sister is standing next to the rubak-bai. The oldest Ngarekeāi seems to have been situated next to the coast. Therefore, it was lead up to the height by rubak nr. I a Replkūl in Ngátpang. He knew about its advantages from his pigeon hunting. Sometimes the inhabitants had fled to the grassland Klsóbēl, where Gorágēl (story 13) landed. Up there Ngarekeāi developed splendidly, especially under Rūngūlbai 6Goukalsól, who must have lived before 1800 (see below p. 168). To this day this fact is well established in the site of the village. Up there they cherished their friendship with Melekéiok, which protected them and brought them back down. But down below they became dependent upon Goréör with which a Imelík is supposed to have been associated for a long time. In 1783, at the time of WILSON, Ngarekeāi definitely was situated up on the height, because he said (Vol. 1 p. 115) that he was in Emillegue in a big city, which was about one mile from the beach. Because of the local high chief the Ibēdul stayed on board. The house a Idíd on Goréör was united with the Rūngūlbai by marriage of the 4. (At.1) with Goráol (Gor. At. 4 Gen. III), a sister of Měáng Ibēdul 8. Story 135 tells about the bad marriage of a daughter of Rūngūlbai, also story 136; both are connected with Ngátpang.

Even though Rūngūlbai belongs to the great chiefs of Pelau, he does not have to be freed by a blebáol-head-trophy at the inauguration of the title (KUB.: II p. 78). The wealth of the family is explained in story 13 where Dir'rūngūlbai steals a money-fruit. See also story 207, which tells about the prestige of this woman. Concerning the same name with Rungūlbai of Yap see Gor. At. 2 Gen. V.

Constitution of *a*Imīg (Ngarekeāi).

bai l pelú (village-house): A. Bairēkeāi.

galíd (god): a Túngēlbai.

klóbak (council): Ngarekeāi.

female council: ar Pisagērád²⁴⁰.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	kleblīl (clan):	ardil (women)
I	Rūngūlbai	Klólubai	I	a Ugélkeúkl	a Dir'rūngūlbai
II	Ngireblekú	Ngarablekú +	II	Blekú	Dirabés
III	Ruregērúdel	a Sób	to I	a Ugélióu	Dirúrugerúdel
IV	a Rengégēl	a Roismogúd +	" II	Gēlúi	Direngegel
V	Gérabai	a Ikelāu	"II	a Ikelāu	Dilerabai
VI	a Rogūldak	Ngērúlebugel +	" I	like I.	Diraguldák
VII	Sagarmidar	Ngerudelsang	" I	Mengiteretár	a Guódel'lagád
VIII	Garbagáng	a Isóbei +	" II	like II	nr. VIII
IX	Ngiraēgēre i	a Iagērei +	" I	like III.	nr. IX
X	Ngiraipeāu	a Ipeāu	"II	like V.	nr. X

In 1910, a Ibēdul of Goréōr held title nr. VI; blai Goráol is considered to be a wealthy house, see At. 2. nr. IV is galíd, see above p. 163.

nr.:	uriúl rúbak (secondary chiefs):	blai (house)	further blai :
11	Belúdēs (in Ngapedég)	Mid +	21. Gorúgei (in Old-
12	Ngirautegeĭ	in nr. VIII	Ngarekeāi, in 1909
13	Geiár (in Gámliangĭl)	a Rbailegúr	the only one still
14	a Iegád regamāi	in Ngaregamāi	inhabited)
15	Ngiragaulemāu (in Gámliangĭl)	a Ildékĭl +	22. Melái
16	Geregúr	in Galëgúi	23. Ngaraker'róng
17	Sagaruét	Smengseĭ in Mekér	24. Ngareklíbai
18	Métíláp	a Irétāg	(belongs to I)
19	Meseroái	Gosisiáng	25. Ugul a bambu
20	a Itúngĭlbai (galíd)	his priest rubak nr. IV

nr.:	gáldebegĭl (club):	bai (club-house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaraiús	B. Sageivóng +	a Gasél	Right
II ♂	Ngaramelós	C. a Gasél	(landing in a Imĭg)
I ♀	Ngarapngákĭl
II ♀	Ngaraderúdĕm
I ♂	Ngaradtekrár	D. a Róu	a Róu	Left
II ♂	Ngaratebér	E. Golegerĭl +	(landing in
I ♀	Ngaraririáng		Ngerudelóng Mekér)
II ♀	Ngaraulelbógĭl

The high chiefs of a Imelĭk, the Rūngŭlbai and the title-holding women Dir'rūngŭlbai, who are sitting in Ngarekeāi in the house Klóulblai, are known in the following order²⁴¹:

Rüŋǔlbai:	Big Names:	Small Names:	Remarks:
1.	Kluk ra buk	?	when he was old and frail, he was carried around in a buk wooden bowl.
2.	Merengūs a réng	?	colored his gray hair with curcuma yellow, reng , in order to make it red; merengús to oil hair.
3.	Măldúl ra ngău	?	died in a fire ngau .
4.	Mělívet	?	was tall and slim (At. 1 Gen III.)
5.	Ngira medengelei	Ngiraměkiróng	lived in house Medengelei in Melekéiok (At. 3. Gen. III.). blai Mekiróng, whose master he was. Gave the 3. branch of the Kloulbai its name.
6.	Gadrdei	Goukalsól	wore "pants" calsol , Span. calzon (At. I. Gen. III. 3.). see story of Ngarekeai. Probably lived like a Ibědul 6 around 1800; he seems to have gotten his pants from Ibargoitia in 1800 (see part vol. 1 p. 128). Marriage Gor. At. 3 Gen. III.
7.	Gelegelúi	Gabál	"gray hair" (Meketéket At. 3. Gen. IV. 2.), his mother is Diremesegebál.
8.	Sekelau Busegesúg	Mlad ra blil	"died in his house" (see At. I Gen. IV.).
9.	Ngiraklengsél	Ngira Mekirong	lived in the house Mekiróng, see nr. 5 (At. 3 Gen. IV.) According to KUB. VIII p. 185 the wife of the murdered king of a Imelík, Ardila meragong, married afterwards a Răklai from Melekéiok; this could have been Dira mekiróng.

10.	Gosekéd	a Iliis	looking from his seat or from his work. He was deposed by the Bezirksamtsmann, because he did not come to the meetings in Madalaí. At. 3. Gen.V.)
11.	Beblūd	Ngiradelsáng	lived in the house Ngërudelsáng (bl. VII).

Dir'rűngűlbai:	Names:	Remarks:
6.	Guóděł'lagad	Title nr. I in Mekér Ngarekeai).
7.	Gălútăm gogíl	"tattoos her leg", means richly tattooed.
8.	Brital	"shivering with age".
9.	a Ideleî	—
10.	Sipăloi	—
11.	Dir'ra ilóng	—

The Kloulbai is now the seat of Rűngűlbai, and consists of 3 "branches".

1. Gemauráel, 2. Goráol, 3. Měkiróng.

Goráol seems to have been the name of a woman; even today a blai in Ngërupesáng is called Gemauráel, p. 112. Měkiróng probably was also the name of a blai. The following three genealogical charts point to this fact.

Ahnentafel 1 (Ngk. At. 1).
Zweig Gemaurâel
des blai Nr. I Klôulblai in Ngarekeâi.

Zu Seite 168

Gen. VII											1. ♀ Dilngeri	2. ♂ Poropesóng ¹	3. I. ♂ a Tkól	2. II. ♂ Tume gup	3. ein Kind 1913
• VI											+ jung	1. ♂ Remengesóng +	2. ♂ Ngiratelegí ∞ ♀ a Ilel v. Ngatkíp	3. ♀ Medengír ∞ I ♂ Domok v. a Iebúkúl ∞ II Ngiratei v. Ngarmíd	1. ♂ Ngirakéd
• V											1. ♀ Dirailóng ∞ Ngirakéd v. Goréör (Gor. At. 1 Gen. V)	2. ♂ Ngirapilúk ∞ ♀ Sariang v. Ngariélép	3. ♀ Dort + jung	1. I. ♂ I Romóket ∞ ♀ Kitang v. a Irai	2. I. 3. ♀ Gomesil + ♂ Gádlbai +	4. II. ♂ Roisebóng +
• IV	Große Nachkommenschaft Gor. At. 4.		♂ Remelik	Große Nachkommenschaft Gor. At. 3.		1. ♂ Sekeláu Busegesúg Rüngülbai 8 ∞ ♀ a Iebúkúl von Ngarevíkl	2. ♀ Dibuk ∞ ♂ Ngirasoáng v. Ngardmau	3. ♀ Susui	4. ♂ Derengás ∞ I ♀ Rrobel v. a Imul ∞ II ♀ Rrobel v. Nggeku- diangél ²
• III	1. ♂ Melivét Rüngülbai 4 ∞ ♀ Goráol (Gor. At. 4. Gen. III.)		2. ♂ Ngirateruóng ∞ ♀ von Goikúl	3. ♂ Gadrdei Rüngülbai 6. ∞ ♀ Gädēlengáng Bilung 7. (Gor. At. 3. Gen. III.)		4. ♀ Diragoluáng ∞ ♂ Ngiragoluáng in a Imul
• II	1. ♂ Ngiragokoláng		2. ♂ Ngiramangedóab	3. ♀ Dir'rüngülbai ∞ ♂ ?
• I	Mutter ? Stamm Gemauráel

¹ nach mir Professor (Poropesóŋ) genannt.

² Lage des Ortes unbekannt.

2. Mekér or Ngaramidár.

on the coast at a Imīg (see plan 18^b), one of the four of the Geoalbai-Federation (see above p. 161). High chief was Sagarmidár, who was also friendly with Gámliangēl (see story 129). Story 6 tells a lot about him. Once upon a time, this place must have been big and powerful. Its landing-place was in Ngērudelóng, which now belongs to a Imīg, of which Mekér is at the moment only one part of the village. Its rubak Sagarmidár is now rub. nr. VII of a Imīg. There are only 3 blai left, 26 Gokengiáng, 27 Smengsei, and 28 Kélebīd.

WILLIAM GIBBON writes about the new settlement with people from Ponape, as has already been mentioned above on p. 162: we had to work in order to clear the place Mekér, in order to build houses, plant taro, sweet potatoes, yams, coconuts, sugarcane, bananas and all that is fit for consumption. The road was repaired and a channel was made for the people from Ponape in order to live there. They arrived on Feb. 12th 1911; first there were only a few families, then many came in December. Thus, Mekér was settled again. Two parts were made in two villages, on both sides of a Imīg, Mekér and Ngardai. — — —

I do not know the constitution. Rub. nr. I was Sagarmidár, the female title I was Guódēl'lagád; both names appear also in Ngk. At. 3 Gen. II and the latter also as the name of Dir'rungūlbai 6. The title Sépsis was recorded, too, just like in story 20 concerning the settlement of Ngáruangēl and next to it the female title Dilsépsis (see Gor. At. 4. Gen. II), who became the new clan mother of the a Idíd line, next to Dilgoroség of Ngatkíp.

3. a Imūl

(KUB.: Aymúl).

Lies in Bablimlīk. The site has already been mentioned at Ngarekeā i. It is remarkable that this place stayed alive, even though the neighboring Old-Ngarekeāi moved to the seaside.

Industry: It is well known that bats, golik, are caught here, when the udúišs-trees are blossoming, see p. 163, see also story 132 about the golik.

Privilege: It is allowed to buy the dugong-bracelet, but not the entire animal.

History: a Imūl is a child of a Guáp (see story 2). Rangatágēl (story 134) originates from here. Story 133 tells an amusing incident. The importance of rub. I Sagárimūl is apparent in story 80 about Mad ra klai, then also in story 61 and 137. Title nr. II Regēkemúr is also said to be found in a deserted village called Ngurúngel near a Imūl (see story 20). Concerning the channel Ngértúker see above p. 162 and story 137 about Tur'rengerád.

bai l pelú (village-house): A. a Imül.

klóbak (council): Sagáramül. galíd (god): Ngirteláp (KUB.)

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Sagáramül	Terékēd +	Dilsagáramül
II	a Regëkemúr	a Lulk	Dil regëkemúr
III	Golikóng	Ngaramelál'l	Dil'lolikóng
IV	Mekëkerengáp	Klebúkl	Dil'lolikóng kékerei
V	Gosëgád ra delép	Madalaráng	Dil'losëgád klóu
VI	Gosëgád ra rekóng	Rekóng +	" kékerei
VII	Kmirengákl	Gadëlékl +	Diltmirengákl
VIII	nr.	?	Dilmesép

táog (channel): Ngertúkër

Only one club-house B. a Iregeréké i.

4. Galëgúi (figure 9³)

(KUB.: Goleguy)

politically also called Ngaragëu. It is situated in Bablimelík . Once upon a time , it seems to have been more powerful than Ngarekeai; later it was a kerr of it. Had friendship ties with Ngarekobasáng.

Description of the place (see plan 19): situated 15 minutes north of a Imīg, on an elevation, which is situated south of the bay of Gámliangël. Towards the sea there is a hill shaped like a pyramid, Buk ra ngabáng, with point Pkurengesúkl (see Figure 36). The footpath crossing the grassland meets the eastern head of the stone path, which first moves northwest, then in a southwestern direction until it turns westward. On the spot of the sharp bend lies bai l pelú A Geisáu. In 1910, a tet was still standing in the north of it (plate 9³). From the spot, where a small stone path leads to the gal.dúkl[sic] stone square, a path forks to the north, leading to the landing place and bai l kldokUgul a róro on the bay of Gámliangël. Near to the end of the western stone path lies on the southern side bai C. *a*Medéu. In former times, the much used *táog*Ngertóng was situated in the west of the trailhead of this side.

Privilege: People from Galëgúi are allowed to take unfinished boats away from Ngardmāu, because this place was settled by the bird of Klubudsingál from Galëgúi (see story 18).

Plan 19

History: It is said to have been more powerful than Ngarekeāi. This place became well known because of the snake (story 128), which lived on the grassland Gëuíd bersëgël "The Seven of the Bersóio-Snake", nearby the village. The liberators came from blai nr. III Ngerding I ked, which received rights to the taro patch on the "Head of the Water" Ngaramadál a ralm. Further on, the master of the house Meluát was allowed to bring his child into the rubak-bai, and it was allowed to choose the best from all the food. Story 113 describes how Galëgúi got its close relationship with Ngarekobasáng. Next to the rubak-bai is a heap of stones, the grave of Malsól, whose corpse had been stoned here. It remained untouched by the war between a Imelīk and Ngatēlngál because Galëgúi had been so brave at the revenge of Dir'rūngūlbai (story 207). There is also a money related story (130) told about this place.

Constitution of Galëgúi.

bai l pelú (village-house): Geisau.

klóbak (council): Ngarageisau galíd (god): a Guóděl

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Reblūd	Ngaramedengír	Gëbil
II	~Rëgadiól	a Ikéd	Diltëgëpúp
III	Meluát	Ngerdingelkéd +
IV	a Ibau	Goumangerengér +
V	Ngiraulau	Metëulögól	further blai :
VI	Bitálurëi	Gëurós +	11. Ngítong
VII	a Regódöl	to nr. IV	12. Kereoél
VIII	Kesuál'l	a Klei
IX	Gad ra bedúl	Kerúal
X	Mad ra ikëkang	a Ilíld +

nr.:	gáldëbegël (club):	bai (club-house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaragónged	B. Mereberókl +	Mereberókl	right
I ♂	Ngaraiólt	C. Medéu	Medéu	Left
I ♀	Ngaramelós

Landing-place: Ugularóro.

táog: Ngertóng.

5. Ngapedég belongs to the Gëoalbai Federation (see above p. 161). Belongs to Bablimelīk. On the way from Galëgúi to Gámliangël, ¹/₂ an hour directly from a Imīg you pass a group of houses in a hollow of the road. The stream Iklóng flows westward to the bay of Gámliangël. Of the former 10 blai were only three left. One bai was no longer standing. Towards the north the road mounts a bit. There Ngaraberūg was situated (see below).

Constitution.klóbak (council): Ngaragoróměłfemale council: ar Tógědeksíd

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Ngirametúkūr	Ngurusúdel +	Dirametúkūr
II	Ngirukél	a Merés +	Dirarukél
III	Ngiragělëgóng	a Iëgolú	Diragělëgóng
IV	Ngirakíu	a Kíu	Dirakíu
V	Ngiraüél	Mangëkóng	Diraüél
VI	Metiláp	Tudersí +	Dirarisóng
VII	Ngirengél	a Sëgërīg	Gobaklubíl
VIII	Iegádremłél	Ngaremlál'l +	Gobaklubilremłál'l
IX	nr. IX		Diragedál'l
X	nr. X		a Idelád táog (channel): Segëvë i.6. Gámliangěl.

(KUB.: Komliángl)

belongs to the Federation Gëoalbai (see above p. 161), lies in Ióulimelík.

Description of the place (plan 20): a big place on the northern side of the bay of Gámliangěl, which is called a Imelsúbëg, opposite of the landing-place Ugularóro which belongs to Galëgúi. Politically this village is also called Ngarangás and it consists of 2 parts: in the west is IkIngás, "Outer Ngas", where the road, crossing a mountain, comes down from Medórö; in the east is ËmeIngás, "Inner Ngas", on the road to Ngarekea i. The 8 m high hill Blúelkë i belongs to the first one. On this hill is bai B. Túlau; on a small elevation, south of the road, which drops steeply down to the taro patches where in the middle of them blai III a Idéngës is situated. But the chiefs do not sleep in bai Túlau, because here all the small demons, the relatives of the village god a Ugél'lēgalíd loiter about. The Gámliangěl-People actually came from Pelíliou²⁴² where a mountain with the same name is located. When they were leaving they left the god behind²⁴³; he came after them and as a punishment he installed the small demons. Ngardolólók drove them away with their friends from Goikúl. A túngěl, a devil's grove, is next to the bai. Because of the bush-spirits the rubak built a second village-bai A Gëbúd.

All together Ngarangás is situated along a single, nearly 1 km long stone path that winds with a few bends and turns, but without any branch, from W to E (ESE).

It runs along the southern foot of Rois Gámliangĕl, the strange mountain of Gámliangĕl, which is nearly 100 m high, and separated from the 75 m high Tóirois by a sharp cut. This is a mighty rock, and it forms an overhang in the east. It catches the eye of the viewer already from far in the south (see Vol. 1 p. 230). Tóirois means "Passage-Mountain", because the above-mentioned cut seems like a passage between islands, like a toi. As mentioned before, because of its remarkable form it is also called Ngarabiúl (see Vol. 1 p. 230 and 232).

When you hike on the treeless height to the west, the mountain ridge drops from 75 m to 50 m. Here runs the mountain pass from Medórĕm to Gámliangĕl; later on, it mounts to 80 m at the wide mountain ridge a Lmut. This is a beautiful vantage point, as already mentioned before on p. 161. Once upon a time, a village was here. Others say that a bai of Gámliangĕl was also situated there (see below). If you walk the mountain pass from the basin in a zigzag course down to the south, you reach the western trailhead, which, after leading another 100 m further to the south, turns abruptly to the east. Before you reach the corner a small part of the stone path forks to the west, which soon turns into a footpath, the old road to a Lmut. From this spot you can see over the boat-house Gĕbúd, which is situated on the southern corner of the main road, to a pudding-shaped hill of rare beauty, because it is lying on two steps, the ked-hill Ngaramelik is situated in the area of Ngapedég (see Figure 45 in Vol. 1 p. 239).

Right next to the boat-house and landing-place Gĕbúd is the village-bai A of Ikngás with the same name. Directly opposite of it, on the northern side of the road was in former times the club-house E. a Idegór. A hundred steps further the stone path turns suddenly to the south, mounting between red earth walls, in order to bend after a few steps again to the east. On the height Blúelkei where the above-mentioned chief's bai B. Túlau is situated, is now a galíd-bai. From the height you have a view over the taro patches to the east. Then you walk a few meters steeply down and hike through the taro patches and over a stream to the east, until you come to ĖmeIngás. The border is about 40 steps east of the stream. In former times, the club-house D. a Pkés was situated there in the north on the road. Once again the road makes a double bend, passes bai C. Bailĕgáng and, after another hundred steps, it crosses the impressive stream a Isemei and reaches the trailhead *a*llepdúi where the footpath to Ngarekeā starts, which can be reached in less than an hour.

Gámliangĕl lies on a side bay of the big bay of Gámliangĕl. On plan 20 the side bay is only recognizable because of its 4 hill-projections that come down to the channel; they are called Melsúbeg, Ngilíld, a Ikisáng and Ngaramelóged. It is completely filled with mangroves, so that you only reach the landing-place Gĕbúd following a 1 km long channel. It is even further to the river a Isemei. I could not find out the form of the side-bay. In the west of the entrance of the channel is a point Melkíko.

Privilege: Is allowed to buy the dugong-bracelet, but not the entire animal (see Ngarekeā and a Lmūt).

History: Ked ra golakáng, the grassland of the pot, has been already mentioned at Mekér. Story 129 tells also why the people from Pelíliou were driven away and where still today the mountain Gámliangěł in the north of the island reminds us of the old place. Also story 152 still takes place at the old place. First they were settled in Ngaragamér, but there was not enough space. Story and chant 206 of Mangitíp, who was a bai-girl in Gámliangěł are especially well known. Her pimp, rubak nr. II Melágěłpelú, took revenge on her by not giving her her monetary reward. Here her name was Dílilong (see also 8 a Lmūt).

Concerning god a Ugél'lëgalíd, I want to point to Ngërupesáng, distr. IV. One piece of the mangerengér-snake, which was sacred to the god, also drifted here (story 98). The galid is rub. nr. VIII of Ikngás. The constitution of the 2 village parts Ikngás and Ėmelngás is peculiar. The former has 8, the latter 6 rubak. Each puts up 5 for the big council of Gámliangěł, Ėmelngás the odd and Ikngás the even numbers. The two chiefs in the sixth position are the messengers (kěmědángěł).

Constitution of Gámliangěł.

Ikngás.

bai l pelú (village-house): A. Gěbúd. B. Túláu. galíd (god): a Ugél'lëgalíd (Ngiraiděi).

klóbak (council): Ngaratuláu.

female council: ar Maděrúr.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I (II)	Melágěłpelú	Ngasěgedúi	Gobaklubíl
II (IV)	Diángěł (a Ubai)	a Ugelbáng	Díl'lubai
III (VI)	Kékerel Melágěłpelú	a Idéngěs	Ngíoi
IV (VIII)	a Urepau	Ngarekedólang +	Dilaurepau
V (X)	Ngirěgěłúi	a Ivongedóng +	Gomělsremelóng
VI	a Kěmědángěł	(a Idéngěs)	nr. III
VII	Golikóng	a Ilták +	—
VIII	a Ugél'lëgalíd	—	—

Nr. IV lives in Medóröm. Further blai: 9. Gapdúi, 10. Kubang, 11. Tekeréng, 12. Guděl. — Club-house E. a Idegór +.

klóbak (council): Ėmelngás.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I (I)	a Idelodáol	a Ngěáol	Gobaklubíl
II (III)	Ngirauaug	a Gebíběg	Goderái
III (V)	a Geiár	a Ikeláu	Gomělsremelóng
IV (VII)	Ngirěmíl	a Imedú	Gomělsremelóng
V (IX)	a Ugel	(I)	Uadíl
VI	Kěmědángěł	Teláel	—

uriúl rubak (secondary chiefs): 1. Madralúlk, 2. Golikóng, 3. Golikó ra gabíbeg, 4. Golikoaugelbáng, 5. Golikoraikelâu, 6. Kěmēdángěł.

Further blai are: 7. Kikói, 8. Galep, 9. a Itáog.

Club-houses: C. Bailěgáng, D. a Pkés +.

7. Medórõm

(KUB.: Akmodhórom)

Belongs to Ióulimelik. Its inhabitants came from Medórom on Ngeaur.

Description of the place (plan 21): Had two bital pelú (village parts), Golugâu and Kíděł, lower and upper. The last one had been deserted and was settled from the Golugâu-Half, which stretches along the slopes of a Lmüt. Therefore, blai nr. I to IV of Golugâu are now located in Kíděł.

Plan 21.

Through a nearly 1 km long táog you come from the bay, between point Pisagerád and Toi ra iláng in the mangrove forest to the boat-house Gotertóng²⁴⁴. Shortly afterwards you reach the galíd-bai 11 Gatailěgáng, which is situated on a big pavement on the waterfront. It did not offer anything special. From here a stone path leads to the east, turning your back on the big stone square of the village-houses Bakái, in the south A. Gosobulngâu +, in the north B. Bilekělěk. The shaded path mounts up the mountain, after about 8 minutes of brisk walking you reach the 50 m high pass, which has been already mentioned at Gámliangěł.

History: In story 170 about Golungīs, it is mentioned that Ngátmadeĩ and Medórõm formerly lived in Ngaramáság on Ngeaur. Thus, the entire SW -corner of the islands was called Medórõm, which means "sharp, pointed". Also the village parts Golugâu and Kíděł point to two deserted villages on Ngeaur with the same name. Story 13 about Gorágěł talks about the traffic between Medórõm and Ngeaur. KUB. VIII p. 181 tells that the growths on the cheek of a dugong species point to a woman of Medórö̃m, who during her pregnancy put taro shoots in her ear and was scolded because of this. She ran into the sea, where she turned into a sea cow, which is now called dil a modorom. KUB. V p. 18 mentions Apagáy as galíd, as woman Ardir a kamin. However, Bakai is the name for the rubak-bai; it is also possible that a megapode bakai has been the galíd of this place, as could be deduced from story 6.

Constitution of Medórö̃m.

Village-part Golugāu.

bai l pelú (village-house): Bakāi. A. Gosobulngāu +, B. Bilekélēk.

klóbak (council): ar Ugél.

female council: ar Malteréng.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Ugél	Gongál'l	a Ruóng
II	a Ugëremelél	a Dngurúr	a Regamagaïs
III	Krekrí	a Idelbóng	a Remelágēd
IV	a Ibēdul	a Ulegēvēi	Bagagāu
V	Túrurur	a Tongét	Remengeútēk
VI	a Remárek	Delongāi	Garāu
VII	nr. VII	nr. III	nr.
VIII	etc.	Gulemau +	—

Nr. V lives in a Itáog in Gámliangēl. Further blai: 9. Gomagerál, 10 a Telbóng, 11. Gatailēgáng (galíd-bai), 12. Pedór, 13. a Longāi.

nr.:	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club-bai):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngarakadú	Modngerúr +	Modngerúr	Right
I ♀	Ngaramegeróger
I ♂	Ngaragosóngd	Ngurusegúr +	Ngurusegúr	Left
I ♀	Ngarabogógōd

Now boat-house and táog Gotertóng.

Village-part Kídēl.

klóbak (council): ar Iegád.

female council: ar Iegáldil

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Ngirabekú	a Lemāu +	Dirabekú
II	Ngateltáng	Sangór +	Dirangateltáng

III	Goilál	Ióulbai +	Diragoilál
IV	Bagés	a Bukl +	Dirabagés
V	nr.	—	—

//178 //

Deserted places.

8. a* Lmut +, belongs to Bablimelĭk, situated on the mountain ridge with the same name, between Gámliangĕl (see there) and Medórĕm (see plan 20). The village had two parts: Ngarabilis with bai a Lmut and Geisau, and Ngaratemrĭng with bai KI'lang where Mangitíp stayed (see story 206). All points to a close relationship with Gámliangĕl, by which it possibly was suppressed. A tree, the ríamĕl (Pangium) is well known from here, as has been told in story 126; it indicates the kinship of all the people of Palau.

9. Makáĕp +, situated north of Medórĕm, probably at the mountain Itegórei (plan 3 □ 28'). The strangers of a Ugélkeklāu rested here (story 8), as has been mentioned above p. 7. I want to point out the strait between Ngeāur and Pelĭliou with the same name (see Vol. 1 p. 221 footnote 1). In story 13 (compare Medórĕm) is probably an explanation for it.

10. Ngardebotár +, on a small bay with the rock-island a Ilápis north of the Toirailang and the island Ngeil. During a visit on 11. VII. '10 the táog is already very overgrown. One more field-house in the taro patch. Once upon a time, a Tkedlúkl lived here, who received a money-bearing lemon tree from Gorágĕl as salary (story 13).

11. a* Itáog +, situated north of Ngardebotár.

12. Ngaraklemádĕl +, on the southern foot of the double-mountain Klbáiĕl, which is mentioned in story 127 and 127^a. Pict 40 in Vol. 1 p. 231 shows the mountain and the setting of the village. There, in Figure 29^b, you can also see the mountain from the north and next to it the place Omrótĕl delásĕg, where the inhabitants of Ngaraklemádĕl deposited their pictures after the feasts. Probably like a Iraĭ did it in Ngareklím (see p. 186). Thus this village seems to have had a special importance, but hardly anything has been handed down. The destruction of the village was accomplished by the 7 punishing spirits of Ngarsióu in Pelĭliou, as can be read in story 73. But it is not explained what the people of Ngaraklemádĕl did wrong.

13. Ngaraberuog +, belongs to Bablimelĭk, situated north of Ngapedég (see there). Here stood the cradle of Klubúdsingál (story 18 and Galĕgúi). The snake-mother Dilĕdĕgú went from here with her son Gorágĕl in a kaberúög-boat to Ngeāur (see story 13, footnote 13, see also chant 196, verse 3).

14. Ngaragabáb +, belongs to Bablimelĭk, situated nearby Galĕgúi, formerly only one chiefly family with rubak Gerabāi.

15. Ngardai + north of a Imĭg, where half of the exiled Ponape-People were settled (see Mekér).

16. Ngarderár +, once a big place in the bush: the táog to the former village was in a mangrove-point between the bays Gogológol and Buk ra kéángĕd (see above p. 162). Rub. nr. I was a Ugérderár²⁴⁵. It is said that his house that there are 4 big chair-backs made of stone (ptangg), where the stretcher was put down when the rubak was carried to the grassland for warming up. When people got tired of it, they let him tumble down the rocks near to the stream (compare story 127).

17. Gomáog + belongs to Bablimlik, situated south of Ngarderár. Nothing more precise is known.

18. Ngaragamér + the most southern place of a Imelik, already nearby Ngatkíp, hidden in the mangroves next to the small Island Bungungâu l gútũm. People from Gámliangël (see there) first wanted to settle there but found the place too small for them.

Distr. VII. Ngaragúmēlbai.

(CANTOVA: Mogulibei, MCCLUER: Omerkomaboy, CHEYNE: Arakaumully, KUB: Land Eyrráy, COELLO: Omerquemaboy, Miss: Ngarchumelbai.)

Amount of inhabitants: 1.1. '11: 396.

Amount of villages: 9, 6 deserted ones.

klóul pelú (main village): a Iraĩ armeâu (people): ?

rubukúl (its chief): Ngirakéd

galíd (god): Medegeĩ pélau

Political Groups:

Under Despadál'1 ("East Side") the following are grouped together: Goikúl with Madál and a Iúáng, and Nggasagáng.

Under Ngarekédám: Ngarsúng, Ngurusár, and Ngërluóběł

Description of the Land:

The landscape takes up a great part of southern Babldáob. In the west we may assume point Tetúdel as the border where the volcanic island Bungungâu le gútũm "Red Earth" is situated in the mangrove forest. A mountain range stretches in a semicircle from W to E. In the west Ked ra túnd²⁴⁶, with the neighboring top Gasél at Ngatkíp barely 100 m to the east, towers over the treeless height. In the east is Rois malk ra bések near Goikúl (see Vol. 1, plate 10^{1a.5} and p. 168). The last one has a bearing from the first one at 84° (E 1/2 N). They were already mentioned, just like the Gogeál-lime rocks that collide²⁴⁷ here on the southern end of Babldáob with the volcanic land of the Pelau-land and with the offshore islands Gosegósu²⁴⁸, Delépebai, and Ngkesil'1 (see Vol. 1 p. 192 to 195). On and in the bay of Ngurusárstory 16 of Ugélsúng takes place. The ngás-tree on the rock Rětág looks down on it.

Gogeál Ngara kedlúkl, the eastern side of which is also called side of Ngirakéd (see constitution a Iraĩ), separates this three islands bay from the bay of a Iraĩ, also called Debógel or Uleúl'1 just like the Ngátpang-Basin. This three islands bay connected from Ngurusár by the Góngolungēl channel was constructed by Ugelsúng and connects with the Toágēlmid. The river Ngerikil enters the bay. On its upper course a few villages and the famous mountain Ngeráod are situated. As can be seen on plan 3, it once had a double top; on the western side the "big" or "inner" klóul or ēmél Ngeráod, on the eastern side the "small" or "outer" or kekerél or eíkl Ngeráod; the bearing of both tops was taken from Rois malk ra bések at 316,5° and 309°. Towards the south the bay is nearly closed off by the Gogeál Ngarduáís, which was already before thoroughly described and reproduced, in Vol. 1 p. 205 and plate 10 p. 224; only a small exit is left free. From the bay a Iraĩ you can reach the long mangrove channel by a funnel called Tngēbárd, there Goikúl is situated on its northern end. On both sides are rather precipitous limestone rocks. In the middle where the lime stone rocks come close to the channel there is a shallow double cave (Figure 38) which is mentioned in story 143 (see plan 23^a). This is already quite near to Goikúl. From Ngarduáís onwards the land of Semdíu is well known, where galíd Semdíu, formerly the god of the land, had been living; story 14 tells about him. Medegēi pélau killed him as told in story 197.

Figure 38. Double cave near Goikúl on the channel Tngēbárd.

Industry:

The best canoes of Palau are constructed here. (KUB: 1 p. 34).

Privileges:

klepkál of the weaving of mats, blsebúd, klolil'l, telutáu, kleiángěł, and the blowing of the conch shell debúsóg, this became the right of the main village.

History:

It is said that once upon a time Ngaragúmělbai had been a place between Ngurusár and Ngarsúng where in the last years was still an a ilíud-pavement. It was large and important and was called the mother of all places. Its people dispersed into all directions. At an early time galíd Medegěi pélau made the land famous; he settled in a Irai (see there) and reigned from here over the entire archipelago. galíd Boi (story 11) with his swarms of fish is also part of this story, as told in detail in section VI about the galid-cult. The mountain Ngeráod also contributes as a place of magic, and is mentioned in story 17d, 137, 138, 139, 140 etc. In 1783, WILSON already heard about these places of worship. In Vol. 1 p. 122 is written what MCCLUER heard. Accordingly, the importance of the landscape is regarded. It seems the region has not participated in the wars between Ngarkldéu and NgatěIngál. Formerly, Ngaragúmělbai is supposed to have sided with a Imelík under Melekéiok, until it finally came under the power of Goréör at WILSON'S time, more about it at a Irai and Goréör. In all places of the district the rubak of Goréör were eating the fat pigeons at the season, as is mentioned above at a Imelík p. 163. Concerning the settlement of the Ngardolólók-People see story 161.

1. a Irai (plate 10)

(MCCLUER: Iri, CHEYNE: EyeRye, SEMP.: Eirei, KUB.: Eyrráy, v.M.M.: a Irai, COELLO: Yiri.)

The name is said to derive from rái "flounder", because god Medegěi pélau made a comb from its backbone. With all the parts that belong to it a Irai also calls itself Pělías, as can be seen at the end of story 200. The village has two sides, Bitalpelú in the east and Nggaráu (KUB: Ngkarau) in the west.

Description of the place (plan 22): The village lies on a round peninsula of about 400 m diameter and about 10 m height. In the north and the east, there is water, the above-mentioned bay of a Irai. The entire coast is covered with mangroves, which are especially dense in the south. There is the entrance to the táog Diberdí that is about 500 m long and ends at the boathouse and the bai F. with the same name.

In the northeast of the entrance to Diberdí is the fisherman's house Úgul a ngás, also a common stop for travelers between the south and the east coast; I had also spent some hours there. The house is situated on a stone construction free by the water. From the stone quadrangle a stone path leads through the mangroves in a northern direction to the steep edge of the country, about 150 m away; to the west you cross over the stone bridge Meribáng (see story 197) and climb a staircase made of stone. Bai E. a Meléngěl lies about 8 m high. From here you have a nice view (see Figure 39) over the limestone island Ngarakedlúkl (see Vol. 1 p. 204). On its top Medegeîpélau's mother lies buried (see story 197) and on its southern summit is the rock face Ngareklím where the god's wooden images, which are used for certain festivities, are stored.

Plan 22.

Figure 39. Blai E. Meléngěl and the view to the island Ngarakedlúkl.

This island is connected with the mainland by a 520 m long causeway made of stone called Megórei, as shown in the map. It is peculiar that the dam that is built in the water starting from Ugulangás, first goes east and then 200 m northeast before bending sharply to the south. Near a bend there is a 12 m wide gap for boats; at low tide as well as at high tide it is always a torrent of water, though at low tide it dries out. A second smaller gap for boats that is also raging during high and low tide is situated in the middle of the part that leads from the bend to the south. Altogether, it is a construction to admire.

Towards the north, on the northern part of the hemisphere, opposite of Deberdí is the landing place Gokemí²⁴⁹, which you can reach coming from NE from bay *a*Irāi via a not even 100 m long mangrove channel.

The boathouse Gokemí looks out towards the east. Club-bai H. a Uldángēs is right next to it on the northern side, and on the southern side, separated by a stone path, is bai G. Gokemí situated quite high on an impressive stone dam. The before-mentioned stone path leads inland (to the west) and ends after about 100 steps on a beautiful wide trailhead. On its northern side bai I. a Desíu is situated nearly exactly in extension of the boathouse. It is situated on the land Gomerúl (see story 197) and surrounded by green grassland. Diberdí and Gokemí boathouses are here, separated by about 350 m (see map). Between both of them lies the village part Nggaráu. The land to the east of the main path is called Bitalpelú "Part of the Village", just like the whole east of a Iraí. More or less exactly in the middle between bai Diberdí and Ugula ngás, at the same height as bai E. Meléngēl from where the small stone path leads to the place, there the land called Risóng is situated (see below).

A stone trail leads from the landing place Gokemí south to the rubak-bai "In the Middle of the Village". On the wayside to the west, between bai G. and blai nr. IX, you can see black bands in the red earth, the before-mentioned "brown coal" in Vol. 1 p. 156 and 236 that for some time made feelings run high. The modern houses nr. III of the head Ngirakéd were situated east of the trail; south of them is a díong. A stone path leads from all three landing places to the middle of the peninsula, meeting at the big stone quadrangle, where the village houses Bai ra iraí are situated: A. Gosobulngáu (in the north), B. Ngardúbog I bai (named after the main village of Ngátpang), C. *goutáng-bai*²⁵⁰, a two-story building like there were once in Ngabiúl, Gólei, Ngrīl in distr. 1. In 1907, the roof of the last one had collapsed, but the two floors were still standing, dedicating it as a galíd-bai (plate 10¹). In 1883, the magnificent sop Ngousáus, named after the numerous sáus-corner posts (described and reproduced by KUB: VIII p. 254 and plate 38) stood on the land a Udékl, in place of the former blai nr. I a Tkar on the northern side of bai A. on the other side of the stone path. KUBARY does not mention the name and the place where it was situated. It must have been a splendid building that probably could only be compared with the house in Ngasiás (SEMP. II p. 283).

On the stone pavement in front of the 3 bai is a smaller a ilíud-pavement, called Gokuíd I bad, which means "70 Stones and 70 Strong Men". This is the seat of the high chief (plate 10²). On its northern side is a stone column with a rooster (see Gólei and story 11). West of the pavement stood Golsógōl tet, a shrine for the betelnuts of the village god. On the northern side of the big stone quadrangle a stone path leads towards the east, suddenly ending after about 100 steps at the head Dmongosóng.

In the west going over a bridge you reach the third stone path that, after widening a great deal, reaches

//Krämer, Palau, Vol. 2, Plate 10//

a Irai

1. The Bai rarirai, right the decaying two story góutang-Bai 1907

2. Left Bai rarirai, bl. Gomisáol, Bai Medūlbai. Gokuidlbad. Rooster

3. Blai No. III. Ngerekiu new houses of the village police man Ngirakéd

4. Triton Shell, Hammer, Temdókl, Armring, Owl, at Glaidbai a Ildegädēlgīl

the bathing pond Ngadëgëibël.²⁵¹ Then it turns to the south, bridges a small saltwater bay and south of it curves sharply to the west. From the nearby trailhead a footpath leads to Ngarsúng and Nguarusár.

The 4th path forks from the village pavement to the south. It is especially wide but only for about 50 steps until it reaches bai D. Medūlbai (plate 10²). From here a winding stone path leads a few meters up to the height, after which it drops to the earlier mentioned bai E. a Meléngël.

Opposite of bai E's western gable, a small stone path forks from the main road; after about 100 m it reaches a very special place of worship that is laying hidden in the forest of Risóng.

There were the cult houses of the great galid Medegē ipélau "The Punisher of Pelau" as indicated on the small map in map 22: a) galíd-bai a Idegädëgil, overgrown and half collapsed, with the same shape as the one of a Rāklāi in Melekéiok Figure 29 p. 89; b) one ulangáng-spirit hut Ngërekikláng; c) the sop-cult-house Ngërekikláng, its owner was called Ngirakikláng (v.M.M.: Irigiklák, KUB: Ngirigiklang); d) a vum-cooking house; e) a gólbed-pavement and f) ulangáng-spirit hut for galíd Goltegei. In 1910, when I registered the place only rubble remained of sop c., everything else had completely disappeared. In July 1910, shortly before my departure, the last priest a Rungúl had died, who had jealously guarded all the remains of former times, even though his prestige had faded long ago. After his death, I finally could save the famous Temdókl (see story 19), which had been stored here. Next to it were Semdíu's conch shell and dugong bracelet (see above p. 180), an owl and a hammer (gongosuāi), which I photographed (plate 10⁴). Worth mentioning is that a giant land turtle, left behind by a ship, lived in this place. It was considered a sacred animal. Ngareklím has been already mentioned above on p. 183. Among the figures there was the Janus-faced Ngiraklím, also called Maráelked, who with both his faces could see his favorite places a Irāi and Ngátpang. He was the most important [statue] one among Medegēipélau's booty from Ngaramedánp (story 197). Only blai nr. II of a Irāi and blai nr. X of Ngátpang were allowed to carve the kingfisher (tangadik) the favorite bird of his wife Turang.

Privilege: Blowing the conch shell trumpet during the ruk-dances.

History: After the destruction of Melekē i in Ngaregolóng, the children of the bamboo (story 15) have immigrated here. From Ngáruangël people came to blai Telebádël; story 20 mentions it and also what applies to the galíd of a Irāi. Finally, there came people from a Ugél pelú (see story 195^a). Since ancient times a Irāi was considered a holy city, like another Rome. Here everything revolves around god Medegēipélau, who is described in detail in story 197. Additional information in the part about the galíd-cult and the ruk-dance in part VI. During the latter one, the seclusion is very strict because of the god's nearness and gorovidël-fish maynot be eaten during this time.

For the dance the high priest ordered the construction of an a ingíng-platform, on a scaffolding about 6 m high. The deck was about 1 m wide and 2 m long and a small hut was erected on it. Here the wooden image of galíd Goltegei, created by Medegeipélau himself as a secondary god (story 197), received food and drink. When the ulitǎg-doormat fell down, it was considered a sign that the great galíd himself was present inside and looking at the dance²⁵². Goréör let the ruk-dancers out and the dipping of the gorovíděl-fish was done by Goréör, Galáp and Ngátpang. KUB. II p. 110 mentions Melekéiok instead of Goréör, but this is not correct. He describes how the foreign guests were fed in the bai l pelú by the villages around a Iraĩ, how they bring delúl, "a present of taro, even though it consists of raw roots" and how the despadál'-l-villages, coming from Diberdí, march to the middle and the Ngarekédám-villages arrive at Gokemí with their wild gongúrēs-shouts. On the big village platform in front of the Bairairai both parties meet ; none of them will step aside, thus a bloody conflict starts if the chiefs do not interfere in a mediating manner by distributing presents and money. The pictures of the kingfisher and of Túrang, the god's wife, made by blai nr. II, are also on exhibit. They are safeguarded in the small ulangáng-hut of blai nr. II Gësuroi, which is paid for lending it out during festivities. All other idols, sometimes also these two, are kept at a place of worship in the woods of Risóng or in the rock cave of Ngareklím; its master is Ngiraklím, the galíd Maráelkéd (story 197). Only the high priest is allowed to bring them there, and each evening they are brought down.

It is quite remarkable that in November huge swarms of měás-fish appear in the waters of a Iraĩ, which are caught by the jubilating inhabitants. These fish are a present of Medegeipélau, too, using a cunning trick he got them from galíd Boi (see story 11).

Being a holy place a Iraĩ seems not to have participated in warring enterprises. First it was under Melekéiok and later on Goréör protected it. In chant 199 it is even said that at one time this place had been destroyed by the people from Goréör and that the inhabitants had fled to Ngátpang, which was also closely connected with the god. Even today, the chiefs of Goréör have to be invited to the big pigeon feast of the rubak of a Iraĩ. Ngiragókēbai, the hero of a Iraĩ was married to a daughter of rub. nr. I Góbak rátkar; he was killed by the hero Ngiramoai of Ngarsúl (story 198 and 199). Finally, I have to mention that after the destruction of Ngardolólók its inhabitants settled for a certain time in the north of a Iraĩ (see map), near to Ngaradesúm, just like in a Ulangaráng (story 161).

Concerning the constitution I have to remark that the house of rub. nr. I a Tkár has long vanished, even though it is still considered to be the leading one. It is reported that house nr. IX Ngasmús has the right to select the successor for Góbak rátkar, but it is too poor to do so. The power is held by nr. III Ngirakéd and he is situated in Bitalpelú north of the road, whereas rub. nr. II a Rdiálul reigns in the south, though actually it is galíd Medegeipélau, as told in story 197²⁵³. That house nr. II Gësurói has the right to carve the holy kingfisher for celebrations, has already been mentioned; as well that rub. nr. VIII a Rungúl was the last high priest, who died in July 1910. Finally, I have to mention that a Iraî has no uriúl rúbak (secondary chiefs) because Medegeipélau devoured them all. That is to say, he wanted to have them for himself, as can be seen in chant 197 line 18. For the sake of the god only the high priest is allowed to wear the dugong bracelet just like in Ngivál and Ngaregolóng (see KUB. VIII p. 176).

Constitution of a Iraî.

bai l pelú (house of the village): Bairairai: A. Gosobulngau, B. Ngardúbogl bai, galíd (god): ♂ Medegeipélau, ♀ Duói

C. goutáng +

klóbak (council): Ngarairai female council: ar Ngasekëbúi

nr	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	kleblil (clan):	bitan a	Ardíl (women):	galíd (god):	delásëg (totem):
I	Góbak rátkar	a Tkár +	Goloklsú mög	I	Gëbíl	Bilmororóu ♀	kălát (mullet)
II	a Rdiálul	Gësurói	Babliús	II	a Dil	Túrang ♀	gëdúi (blue lined bream
III	Ngirakéd	Ngërekíu	Tmëlëu	to I	a Ubád	Dira mas l bai ♀	klúdël (grouper)
IV	a Rguld	Ngarangás	Ióuliús	" II	Dirangás	Túrang ♀	gorovidël
V	a Ilápsis	Ngarmëu	Ngarmâu	" I	Diremëu	Bilmororóu ♀	hang (Cranax) (skin kălát (mullet)
VI	a Belëgël	a Dai	Gobángadang	" II	Diráurei	—	—
VII	a Rbagál	Ngaragámúl	Ngărăgamúl	" I	Diragamúl	Bilmororóu ♀	kălát (mullet)
VIII	a Rungúl	Ngatogóng+	Ngatógong	" II	Borotekíl	Gobitogúm ♂	kălát (mullet)
IX	a Iáüag	Ngasmús	Ngasmús	" I	Diliáüăg	Dira mas I bai ♀	klúdël (grouper)
X	a Iáüag	Goivar'rang	Gamalókl	" II	Diliámag	—	a itótog kl'ibei (black spot

nr.:	Gáldēbegēl (club):	ptelúl (its head):	Bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngartuāu	a Ilápsis	D. Medūlbai	Diberdí	right
II ♂	Ngaratōlók	a Rbagál	E. Meléngēl	"	Left
III ♂	Ngaramekabúd	Gogíp	F. Diberdí	Gokemí
IV ♂	Ngaratogadí	Ngirakéd	G. Gokēmí	"
V ♂	Ngarageiūs	a Rdésebagál	H. a Uldángēs	"
VI ♂	Ngarabrás	Lē bál	I. a Desú	"
I ♀	Ngargogo pngí	Gēbíl	—	—
II ♀	Ngara gardókēd	Diragoivar'ráng	—	—
III ♀	Ngara sēsep	Bagás (wife of Golegeríl)	—	—
IV ♀	Ngaraiámēl	a Tióu	—	—
V ♀	Ngaramesekiu	a Ubad	—	—
VI ♀	Ngaragasisvalík	Dirasibóng	—	—

Further blai:

11. Ngaramelíkl
12. Dmongosóng
13. a Itíp
14. Ngēúngēl
15. Mangēsúp
16. a Idegādēgil and Ngarakikláng (galíd-bai see secondary map)
17. Deldēlágēl
18. Tungalél
19. a Ikídēl
20. Bars
21. a Ibēpngīl

23. a Iromél
24. Ngatbúiēl (boathouse)
25. a Dmol
26. Smasērúi
27. Meseremóng
28. a Ilúlk
29. Gomisáol
30. Ngurusiáp
31. Tugoi
32. Nggalíbēl
33. Mesarál

22. Tarolí

2. Goikúl, altogether also called Klou loikúl, (KUB.: Koygúl)

situated on the land Ngarebések and it was called by this name before the inhabitants had brought the name of the Gogeál-rocks here. It consists of 3 parts: Madál in the east, Goikúl in the middle and *a*Iuáng in the west.

Description of the place (plan 23): The three parts of the village together with the following Nggasagáng are called Despadál'l, all lie on one stone path that stretches about 1½ km from the east coast (on the south eastern tip of Babldáob) toward west to the bay of a Irai. The road also crosses the small peninsula of Goikúl, which you cannot see from the sea, because the view is blocked by the craggy gogeál-mountains of Ngarduáís, which are about 100 m high. Between Ngarduáís and the peninsula leads the above on p. 180 mentioned mangrove channel Ngarduáís táog; in the east it is called Táog ra klāi, from the bay a Irai towards the deep eastern lagoon of Babeldáob. So you can go all the way from a Irai to Melekéiok without coming to the open sea. Close to the northern exit into the lagoon is the landing place of Madál, called Ngerungaī, towards the east separated by some mangroves from the open water.

Plan 23.

Madál is situated on the southern foot of the 100 m high volcanic Rois malk rabése²⁵⁴, also called Ngarebesūk. From its treeless summit you have a beautiful view, similar to the one from Kedratúnd behind Ngatkíp, to the southern lime rocks as mentioned in the description of the district. Madál itself is towered over in the SW by a high vertical white rock face of the Golidīl-Lime-Mountain. In the northwest of Golidīl the houses of Goikúl are situated and to the west the lime rocks that split off from Ngarduaī is and lie about on the mainland, Matudīl, Ngareptágēs, Melengóikéd, Melengiáog etc. (see plan 23^a).

A remarkable stone construction lies in the water on the landing place Ngerungaī. After a few steps from the boathouse following a footpath you reach the bathing place Sageimáng where the stone path starts. In its course to NW it leaves the club-house B. Pkulagútūm and passes bai l pelú A. Mangidáp towards its right hand side. Shortly afterwards, it bends to the north, slowly mounting a height where it ends on the grassland of Rois ra bések with its trailhead a Irai. Here Medegeīpélau is said to have first founded a Irai, therefore its name (see story 197). The stone Tkakl, the "Support" for the outrigger of his boat, in the Táog ra klāi is also from him (see map). Such a stone is also said to have been at the former blai Ngarteluáng.

On the before-mentioned bend a stone path forks to the west. After about 100 steps it reaches a low door in the lime rock that is formed by a foothill of the mountain Golidīl. Close by, on its southern side, the cave a Iskímēl can be found, a small and low cavern where in former times the population resorted to. Looking from blai 5 Kumerēu in Madál to the south it offers a beautiful view of the Golidīl rock face. In 1907, the magic fish post kumerēu for galíd Risóis was still standing lonely in the green bush. The trail from the rock-door leads for about 150 m through taro fields until, after crossing a small stream, it reaches the stone path of the actual Goikúl. Following this stream, leaving the rubak bai A. Ugubúngēl to your left, you reach after about 200 m the landing place Mangaderáol where both bai B. Iklbai²⁵⁵ and C. Gongēlútēl are situated on a big stone construction next to a big boathouse. The táog that leads here is a side channel of the main channel and has a dead end in the north. You cross over it by a bridge made of planks 80 m west of the boathouse. Then, the stone path leads around an earthen mound; it crosses taro patches and after 200 m reaches the trailhead a Kasók followed in 50 m distance by another one called Ptelúl a ngarakíděl. The beautiful secluded stone path now leads 200 m northwest until the road drops northwards to Nggasáng. Then 80 m south-west until another stone path leads about 80 m south; at its end the last 4 blai of a Iúáng are situated, whereas halfway from these a small road leads to the nearby boathouse, to the táog in the bay a Iraĩ. Here is the boathouse a Ugél'lëgalíd, formerly called Delemāu. a Iúáng is close to the river Ngerikīl.

Privilege: see below rub. III Rengūl and bl. 13 a Urák.

Industry: pottery, catching sharks²⁵⁶ (according to KUB.: next to it on its southern side, VIII, p. 128 there are knowledgeable magicians like in Ngërupesáng and Keklāu).

History: As already mentioned in the history of the settlement p. 5, once upon a time, Goikúl was a place on the Gogeál Ngurukdápěl (see Vol. I p. 201) and belonged to Ngaláls for whom the drop there marág ra Ngaláls was named. The place was founded by the people of a Ugél keklāu (story 8) and was called Metúkěr uikúl "Bay of Goikúl". Then Goréör destroyed it²⁵⁷. The touching story 17^c about Máriar and Góreng takes place there, or rather in the respective village Ngaramíëg. There is also the well-known story 141 about the chain of eggs, which explains the privileged position of rub. nr. III Rengūl of a Iúáng during festivities. In the double cave of Goikúl (see above p. 180) the story 142 about Berípěr and Gamarëdóng takes place. Quite remarkable is also story 144 about the female thief without toes and then the one about the missing ray (145).

The wealthy house bl. 13 a Urák in Goikúl has the right to build for their women an a ining-scaffolding for the presentation of the young mother; the young woman nr. I Diraurák seems to be affiliated with this house.

According to KUB. V p. 18 the galid of Madál is a Ugél'lëgalíd, ♀Dorom kriik, though it is not mentioned among the villages of the god in story 98; in contrast I want to point out the landing place with the same name a Iúáng. This one and Goikúl have Gomúiëk as their god, who has been mentioned before in Ngivál (Ngaremegāu). Recently, in January 1872, Goréör attacked Goikúl; this was when rub. Gádlbai fell (S.-K.S. 543).

Constitution of Madál.

bai l pelú (village-house): a Mangidáp

Ngardép

galíd (god): a Ugél'lëgalíd klóbak (council):

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	gáldebegěl (club):	bai (club house):
I	Dingeliús	Ngarangáp	A. Mangidáp
II	a Ugél	Ngara pkngákěl	B. Plkulagútüm
V	Gád l bai ra golebasáng	táog (channel): Ngerungai
VI	a Terebórop	there are the following blai :
VII	nr. VII
VIII	a Rengabáob	1, a Ingoingoi	4. a Bárs
IX	Kěrák	2. Gomaoagáng (?)	5. Kumerěu
X	Mad ra iüengáier	3. a Ingél (?)	6. a Idesóng

Constitution of Goikúl.bai l pelú (village house): a Ugubúngěl*galíd* (god): Gomúičk*klóbak* (village council): Ngarangebúngělfemale council: ar Búngělpelau

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang	kleblīl (clan):	ardil (women):
I	Ngirageitei	Geitei+	I	Kekíěl	Diraurák
II	Gad rdēi	a Tkelkáng	II	Ngatagamásăg	Dirakelkáng
III	a Iegád	Godolóměl +	to I	Babl túngěl	Diragodolóměl
IV	Gádlbai	a Dmú +	" II	a Dmú	Dilagádlbai
V	Mad ra bars	a Bárs	" I	Ióultúngěl	Dilibáb
VI	Mad ra pel'lú	Pel'lú	" II	to I	Dirapel'lú
VII	a Ulonggóng	Lédēs	" I	to II	nr. VII
VIII	Golikóng	Kmerengerău	" II	to II	nr. VIII
IX	Gobagád	Ngarabrák +	" I	to I	nr. IX
X	Mad ra gokók	lives in a Iréd+	" II	—	—

Concerning bl. V Bars see story 143.

Further blai: 11. Tangalagáng. 12. Túdong, 13. a Urák, 14. a Ingólom, 15. Magělbáng, 16. a Iveáol, 17. Ngaramesegabóng, 18. a Iréd.

nr.:	gáldebegěl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):
I ♂	Ngaragologódog	B. Iklbai (a Ikrěbai)	Mangaderáol
II ♂	Ngamekebúd	C. Gongělútěl	"
I ♀	Ngarakerísepsup
II ♀	Ngaragoldiáng

Constitution of a Iuáng.bai l pelú (village house): Bailiuáng +klóbak (council): Ngamëbáep nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):

I	Rëgëlúlk —	a Ugelbáng	a Ugél'lëgalid
II	Rëgelúlk -	ra Kláoang	(Delemáu)
III	a Rengül ²⁵⁸	Tikei
IV	a Rëngaïs	+
V	Riūd	a Idësei
VI	a Rebei	+

3. Nggasagáng

(KUB.: Kasagáng)

belongs to Despadál'l; a small place in the north of Goikúl, on a bay that opens in the east to the lagoon, though flat and filled with mangroves in the interior. From Rois ra bések near Goikúl you can see beyond the village on the northern coast the ked Mekekisóus; otherwise the surrounding area is very wooded. The road has been already mentioned at a Iuáng in Goikúl; it leads to the place in a northerly direction for 2 km over a gentle range of hills and grassland along the foot of Rois ra bések.

Description of the place (plan 24): From the above mentioned trailhead, starting with an iliud-pavement, a stone path leads undulating about 300 m to the north, down to the water. There a good bai, A. *a*Ingéls, is standing on a long stone construction at the waterfront, not far away from bai kldók B. a Úgulamaráděl. From here the táog leads first to the north, then to the east out towards the lagoon.

Plan 24.

History: A number of inhabitants are said to have come from the east, thus are immigrated; they mostly settled in Ngariáp (see there) on Pelíliou. KUB. V p. 18 mentions as galíd♂ Takalbáy, ♀ Kamáng; I noted Dágǎlbai, which means "Master Builder". Later on, it is said to have been Medegei pélau; who was meant anyway. In story 16 a galíd a Nggei is mentioned from here; he sailed a boat called Gogadú at a sailing competition. See also above at a Irai p. 186, KUB. II p. 111 mentions that the wooden images of Angkey and his wife have been kept safe in a cave situated high up on the water side of the lime rock Matál a bay, thus on the mountain Madálabai on Ngarduais.

Constitution of Nggasagáng.bai l pelú (village house): A. a Ingéls*klóbak* (council): Ngaratkobél*galíd* (god): Dágǎlbai nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bai (club house):

I	a Psis	Gasél	B. a Úgul a marádél
II	a Rděgór	Ngkeklau
III	a Rugelmiěg	a Iblóng
IV	Gádlbai	a Megár	further blai :
V	Búikapsís	a Kerkúr
VI	Búikrděgór	(Ngkeklau) see II +	11. Gabíbeg
VII	Búikrugelmiěg	Ngėdikóng	12. Reméd
VIII	Buikagádlbai	a Delegóng	13. Měóng
IX	Tkulagúděl	a Gadél +
X	"	(Ngkeklau) see II

4. Ngadiúl (KUB. Ngadyúl) between Ngėrulák and a Iraĩ, nearly deserted.

5. Ngėrulák (KUB. Ngarulak) east of Ngarsúng, only one house.

6. Ngarsúng (KUB. Ngoršúm), east of Ngurusár, almost completely abandoned, only 3 blai down at the waterfront; belonging to Ngarėkedám. The old Ngarsúng was situated up on the road about 40 m above, where some piles of old stones are still next to two groups of trees (see p. 195). Famous because of a Ugėlsúng (story 16) and the story about the "death-crab" Galauoságal. Quite remarkable is also story 146 about the revenge of Matageiau; see also chants 198 and 199 about Ngiragókebai of a Iraĩ. Galíd Iraybubú, whom KUB. V p. 18 mentions, seems to be Ngirapúp or Gad ra pup mentioned at Ngarsúl, p. 133.

7. Ngurusár (KUB. Ngarusar), together with Ngėruluóbel and Ngarsúng it is called Ngarakėdám. All three lie hidden in the mangroves on volcanic land north of the high gogėál-rocks of Pkulapgnei and Ngeream that shove along from the south to the southwestern tip of Babldáob but they are separated from the mainland by a belt of mangroves (plan 25^a). Here runs the channel of Ngurusár that the snake of Ngurukdápél had broken in (story 156). You can cross it, starting from Toágel mid where you enter about 250 m east of the entrance to Ngatkip. There are 2 entrances here in the west Meldóbog, in the east is Ulabágad which is always deep and never dries out (see stories 8 and 200). The first 300 m lead in a northern direction (at 200 m in Pdúl a Bói, a tree where Boi fastened his fish [see story 11]). Then the táog bends sharply to the east. After another 100 m a channel forks towards the left (north) to Ngėruluóběl. After another 200 m you pass on the northern foot of the steep lime rocks the stone of Tuápěĭ (a deserted place on the Gogeál which is mentioned in story 8). There is a saying about it: a ruvúmk a mlai a tekil a Tuápěĭ "a heavily loaded boat is brought to Tuápěĭ". That means, it has to cross the mangrove channel and cannot go in open water, where water might get in. 100 m further north you reach the western entrance of Ngurusár. But the main landing place is about 300 m further east, as the crow flies. During the passage to the east you always have to follow big loops detouring to the south, so that finally the distance is twice as long. The last loop is so narrow that you first pass the boathouse Ngitoái on the western side and then on the eastern side. The local people use this to their advantage, like Gamasiógěĭ (story 158), and take the gokosóděĭ-present twice (see Goréör). People from Ngáruangěĭ (story 20) once gave money twice which has been noted on a log in bai A. of Nagbúkěĭ.

Description of the place (plan 25^b): From the landing place Ngitoai in the lowlands ióul pelú where a boathouse and bai C. Ngitoai are situated, you walk up north on the beautiful stone path, passing after a few steps on the right hand side the newly constructed bai l pelú B. Ngarmalábag. The stone path continues upward to a height of 30 m. There, the road meets a big stone square where in former time the rubak-bai A. a Imig was situated. In 1910, there was nothing left but a pretty little offering house tét for galíd Gomís, standing on four legs. In 1910, a government road led from the upper trailhead to a Irai's western trailhead about 3 km distant. After $\frac{1}{3}$ of the way in a valley of the stream Ngaralogúi with lots of water, after 2 km on the height you reach the old place of Ngarsúng (see Vol. I p. 195).

In former times, the four-legged tét-shrine was standing inside bai a Imig; when this one crumbled it was moved out. The actual reason for this is said to have been people from Ngěruluóběĭ, who once performed in the bai a golsóls-chant the whole night through and the tét was in their way. The galíd Gomís (compare district VIII Ngarekesauásol) was a part of a Guóděĭ (see story 161). Whenever he stopped here or in Ngarekesauáol during a sailing competition (story 16), he received a piece of money. Therefore, a galíd-boat has also been attached to the tét (Figure see part vol. III galíd-cult).

History: Once upon a time, Ngurusár was a very important place, though now it is small and unimportant. It is a child of a Guáp (story 2). Many legends deal with this place. Above all, it is galíd Boi, who was mentioned above fastening his bunch of fish to the tree a Pdul a Boi, when he was coming from Ngarmíd. For his wife, whom he met in Ngurusár (story 11), he removed the eel, which swam through the channel up the river a Ulogúl. Even today, people from Ngurusár still refer to it as goddess Diraalogúl. Boi lived in a Ulabágad, as Tuápěĭ is also called based on its entrance. People of a Ugélkekláu flew their hair-kites from this place to Ngarmíd (story 8). Ngurusár, being the southernmost point of Babldáob, had relations with the northernmost Gólei as story 33 about the girl Dingáladúi and the boy Dupsgasél shows. The breadfruit tree next to the house of Tegógo in Gólei moved his roots all the way to blai I of Tugěřémél in Ngurusár (story 34). Both chiefs often appear together in stories side by side. Story 147 as well as story 148, about galid a Uél, the turtle, whose head was still talking in the cooking pot, is about the last one. Finally, see story 149 about the cripple Keluláu. The myth about the moon is also closely connected with Ngurusár, as is shown in story 147 and is told in more detail in story 6.

Plan 25 aa. b

Constitution of Ngurusár.

bai l pelú (village house): A. a Imīg +

galíd (god): Bói

klóbak (council): Ngaraimīg

female council: ar Ungíl

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Tugěřémél	Klai	Gėbil
II	Gád l bai	Ngururéor	Guóděł'lăgád
III	Búikpělau	Bedagál	Dilemalăgěł
IV	Rageiríkl	a Iríkl	Gėbilrairíkl
V	Risóng	Goivél	Gėbil risóng
VI	Sěgěsúg	a Ibáu+	Dilsěgěsúg
VII	Dmėoáng	a Ikeláu +	Gėbildmaoáng
VIII	Golikóng	Ngartēmikéd	Dilolikóng
IX	Rokoikái	a Síl	Dir'rokoikái
X	Gabás	Ngarusėbék	Gėbilgabás

nr.:	gálebegel (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bítang (side):
I ♂	Ngargoldól	Metëuldíong +	Metëuldíong +	left
II ♂	Ngargotíleg	Ngitoái	Ngitoai	right

8. Ngëruluóběĭ also called Ngëruluóng,

(KUB. Ngaruluóbel)

about $\frac{1}{2}$ a km west of Ngurusár, where the entrance of the long táog has already been mentioned (plan 25^a). Today, the place is only small, like Ngurusár, and it is completely cut off from the sea by mangroves.

Description of the place (plan 25^c): At the landing place a sort of peninsula juts out into the basin. There, the boathouse and bai B. Garabúd are situated. The small bay in the west of the peninsula has the same name, whereas the one in the east is called Mangalbáng, just like bai C., which stood nearby on the other side of the stone path. Another stone path comes from Garabúd; both meet north of the peninsula, from where a main path with a bend leads to the east up to a height where village-bai A Bairuluóběĭ is situated.

History: It has been founded by poverty Galebūl (story 3). After its destruction by Ngarmíd (in story 8) its wives came here.

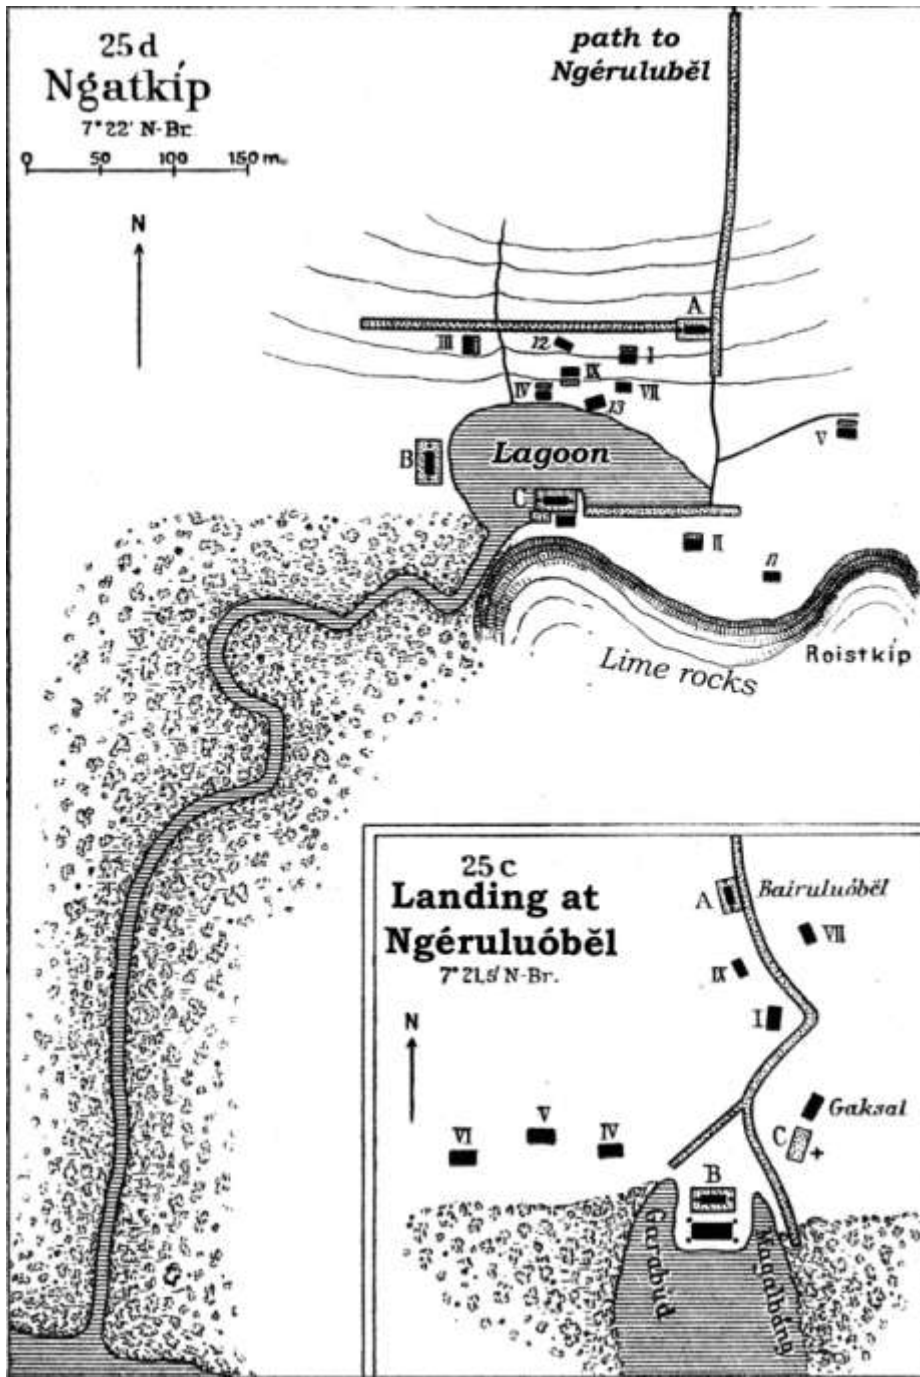

Constitution of Ngëruluóběĭ.

bai l pelú (village house): A. Bairuluóběĭ + galíd (god): Geimekéměk²⁵⁹

klóbak (council): Ngëruluóběĭ

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Iegád r teluáng	Gásēbar	Gěbilēdíl
II	a Guóng	Tegúbel	Gěbiragéptang
III	a Regebúōg	+	Gěbiregebúōg
IV	Góbak ra depkár	a Depkár	Gěbiradepkár
V	a Ulenggóng	Gomsúl	Dirameríngěĭ
VI	Gěríu	Gongklúngěĭ	nr. VI
VII	Ragespús	Bailagasél	nr. VII
VIII	Regeptáng	Gaklsél	nr. VIII
IX	a Rulípěk	Ióulketebongáng	nr. IX
X	Skēsáng	belongs to IV	nr. X

nr.:	gálděbegěĭ (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaragarítm	B. Garabúd	Same	left
II ♂	Ngaragěleátěĭ	C. Malalbáng	"	right

Plan 25^{c a. d}

9. Ngatkíp

(KUB.: Adkip)

politically it belongs to Ngarkldéu (distr. VIII). It is situated on the channel Toágel mid, at the foot of the sheer gogéál-rocks rois Ngatkíp, also called Roistkip (see Figure 17, Vol. 1 p. 194). Opposite is Goréör and Ngëruluóběl is the neighbor in the west (plan 25^a). The lime rocks reach from the south all the way to the village, which itself is situated on volcanic land.

Description of the place (plan 25^d): The táog that you have to follow among the mangroves until you reach the village is about $\frac{3}{4}$ km long. Leaving it you have, just like in Ngarmíd on Goréor a lake-like widening in front of you that measures about 150 m from W. to E. On the right hand (in the east) is bai C. and the boathouse a Itáog gatkíp (see chant 200); on the left hand side (west) is bai B. Tongelói. North of the tidal lake, just opposite of the entrance, most of the blai are situated on the steeply raising land. A stone path leads up on the eastern side towards the north, passing bai l pelú A. that in 1910 had fallen into disrepair. This trail ends about 250 m further on the height and continues as a footpath to Ngëruluóběl. But about 250 m further in the west a stone path starts from bai l pelú, crossing a small stream and following the bank. Whereas on the southern side of the inland water the above-mentioned Roistkip is situated, covered by dense wood, the gently curved 80 m high Ked ra tund is lying in the north, as already mentioned above on p. 162 and p. 179, and in Vol. 1 p. 192 and 227. East of it, not even 100 m away, there is a second hilltop called Gasél. Bamboo is growing on this ked. The place is called Bekëu lă gasél "The Brave Ones of Gasel", because the inhabitants of this place let the captured tufts of hair of Melekéiok-People fly in the air on long bamboo poles. Further on towards the east is a hilltop called Dup and covered with trees, which is a land sign for the shark-fishermen of Goikúl when they are far out at sea (see p. 191).

History: One piece of the snake Ngirateî, which had been sacred for a Ugél'lēgalíd, drifted here after it had been killed (story 98). This is the reason why this galíd is venerated here beside Risóis. There was immigration from Ngáruangěl (story 20) to blai nr. 1; it was the woman Diragoroség; her granddaughter married an Ibēdul in a Iebúkúl and this is probably why Ngatkíp came to Goréör.

Constitution of Ngatkíp.

bai l pelú (village house): A. a Imig (?)

galíd (god): Risóis (a Ugél'lēgalíd)

klóbak (council): Ngaramig female council: *ar*Bau l melik

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Tagadíp	Ngerëmëlkíg	a Guódě'l'lagád
II	Remengesâu	Goeáol	a Guódě'l'lagad rengeremëlóng
III	Kerkerél Tagadíp	a Urepâu	" " raurepâu
IV	Kerkerél Remegesâu	Ngardīl	" " ra búkl
V	a Remesegâu	Ngaramangráng	Diramesegâu
VI	Ngiragálilai	Sagepíd +	a Guódel'lagád ra gálilai
VII	Goitablái	Ngardángěl	—
VIII	Sákang +	belongs to III	—
IX	Rutegarár	Gadpötói	Dirategarár
X	Gad l bai	Ngèderebeî+	Dil a gádlbai

Further blai: 11. Ngërugár, 12. Geingereklí, 13. Megegúi.

nr.:	gáldebegěl (club):	bai (club-house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaramelivēi	B. Tongelói	Tongelói	right
II ♂	Ngararóro	C. a Itáog gatkip	a Itáog	left

Deserted Places.

10. Tuápěl +, near Ngurusár where it has already been mentioned.

11. Goltabád I káep +, it must have been situated near the island Bungungāu 1 gútūm at the border to a Imelīk, next to Ngaragamér.

12. Ngaradesúm +, on the river Ngerikīl, next to the mouth of the bay of a Iraī; KUB. V p. 18 Ngorsúm and p. 29 Auger dusum from Ngardusum, the competitive sailor for the ngas-branch. This is a confusion with a Ugélsúng of Ngarsúng (see there). In the west of Ngaradesúm the people from Ngardolólók, who had been chased away, were settled there, as was already mentioned at a Iraī.

13. Ngediáol +, in the vicinity of the before mentioned place, further up along the river.

14. Ngerikīl +, same name as the river, and situated on it, upriver. Seems to be near the spirit-mountain Ngeráod.

15. Ngarduaīs +, the place of Semdú (see p. 180 and 185 and story 197 a. 14).

District VIII. Ngarkldéu

(CANTOVA: Tagaleteu, MCCLUER: Eri kli thu, CHEYENE: Erkelthow, v.M.M.: Arkledeu, KUB.: Erekeldeu, MISS.: Ngarkldeu), in the southwest of the main island Babldáob, consisting of the inhabited volcanic islands Goréör, where the high chief a Ibēdul lives, Ngarekobasáng and Malágal, including the related uninhabited volcanic islands and the gogeál-rocks. Politically, the village Ngatkíp on Babldáob also belongs to it (see district VII).

Inhabitants: 1. 1. '11 = 709.

Number of villages: 10, uninhabited ones 2, uninhabited gogeál-places 13.

klóul pelú (main village): Goréör.

rubukúl (its chief): a Ibēdul.

armeāu (people): Gērungul.

galíd (god): a Ugélkldéu.

Political groups: none.

Description of the Land (see map 2 secondary map and plan 3).

The district is separated from the main island Babldáob by the deep Toágěl mid, the Ngarmíd-Channel. A more detailed geographic description was already in Vol. 1 p. 190. Now it is only necessary to consider more closely each single island:

The Island Goréör.

In the pictures of Vol. 1 one overlooks it from the west on p. 189, from the north p. 192 and above Figure 36. You can reach it from the ship's anchorage in Malágal-Harbor by Toi rē gúio (plan 3 secondary map a), but at low tide it is dry. After crossing it towards the northeast, you reach the deep water by punting over the reef; you cross the deep-water-drainpipe Lebugöl²⁶⁰ rowing (map 2 secondary map). On the other side, on the southern edge of the northern fringing reef, lies the head of the long stone bridge (see Vol. 1 plate 8¹) that the German government had had built, in order to be able to reach the police station in Madalái²⁶¹ dry-footed at any time. It lies about 3 m high on the volcanic western point of the island, where hardly any trees are growing. From the house of the head of the station you can see in the south the Gogeál, which you just left by the Toi rēgúio (Vol. 1 plate 9²). In the west is Ngargól, in the south the northern tip of Ulupságēl where a bright rock face, with the opening of a cave madál a íí, sticks out of the green. In the west, you have also a nice view of the nearby mountainous island Ngarekobasáng and in the north and northeast is the area of Babldáob, with district VI a Imelík, separated by the big roadstead Ngartág a bëap (see story 150), the northern anchorage of Goréör (R.M.A. I part IV p. 56 Gorör-Harbor).

The government station lies nearby bai F. Miskabasáng; in former times, it stood next to the boathouse a Delúi in the village Goréör. It was transferred to this place by the head of the station, in order to provide shelter when the chiefs of the archipelago are called together. To the east of here, everything is infertile grassland, until after about one quarter of an hour walking on the broad government road you reach a copse where the village Goréör is situated. This bush, called Ngaragăbál (story 154) also extends to the south, offering shelter for the village Ngarbagéd. Once you have crossed the shadowy stone path of Goréör you reach again the grassland, which extends all the way to the eastern edge of the island where the wooded lime rocks adjoin volcanic land. At the same time the country rises more and more. On the ridge runs the continuation of the stone path, a wide and comfortable trail that was created by the government. First there is a turn off to the north to Ngaregama³ i, then there is one leading to the south to Ngarekesauáol (see plan 26^a). In the eastern corner, between the last-mentioned one and the main road, lies the 30 m high, treeless hill Túkūr; from its flat top you have a wonderful panorama view in all directions. The western Goréör with Ngarekobasáng (see Figure 40) looks especially beautiful, then the gogeál-maize Songél a Lise, which has already been described and depicted in Vol. 1 p. 191 and plate 8,^{3a.4} finally in the north you can see the entire south western coast of Babldáob (Figure 41).

On Tukur Hill is the burial place of "Poverty Galebul" from story 3. This is also the place where the women from Ngardolólók, who were on a visit in Ngarekesauáol, had to wave for one month with mats towards the west, as told by god a Guóděł. Then in 1783, the "Antelope" came as a gift from the god, as related in story 161. This made Goréör wealthy and powerful. Once upon a time, blai a Imangél stood on the mountain; all that remains is the legend-stone Madál aimangél, depicting a mother crying over the death of her son, who fell into the táog Gokér near Ngaregamāi; out of sorrow she turned into stone.

The main path continues to the east; a small path forks to the north to Ngarebóděł, then it turns to the south down into the valley, which leads to Ngariélep where on the way the water hole Tíbedul is situated. From here the trail mounts up, around the hills Bablkéd and Ngurungevíkl, to the bare northern flank of the mountain Ngeiángěs (the southwestern side has some wood) to the ridge between this one and Ngurungevíkl from where it finally leads down in the east to Ngarmíd. From Goréör to here it is about $\frac{1}{2}$ hour. Ngerungevíkl, which is about 80 m high, has on its top a square tolknégel-area (see Vol. 1 p. 238). In the west, in a distance of about 60 m, stands a single coconut palm, which can be seen from afar. When a bearing is taken on it from the station house in Madalai it is O 2°N (magnetic). The distance between these two points is more or less exactly 3 km (Vol. 1 p. 169). From the highest area and from the second top Bab l kéd nearby in the west you have a marvelous panorama view in all directions. One sees the islands especially beautiful: in the north Ngátmedug (30 m) and Ngarkebúit (6 m), which have already been mentioned in Vol. 1 p. 190, and in the west is Ngarekobasáng.

The Island Ngarekobasáng (plan 28^a).

(WILS.: Pedul, MCCLUER: Imungs, KUB.: Ngarekobasánga, COELLOIII: Arracapeisadle).

Only a strait, about 600 m wide, separates it from Goréör. During low tide, it turns dry, so that during this time one can walk from point Kemúr to Goréör, as the girl from Goikúl did in story 143^a.²⁶² From the exterior Ngarekobasáng looks the same as Goréör, many hills without any trees, only on Rois Desóměł, also called Golivelógěł, about 75 m high, there is some wood in the NW and on Rois Kobasáng in the SW, which has about the same height, as well as around its rocky head (see Vol. 1 plate 7¹). It is the seat of the god of the island a Ugél kobasáděł, who participated in the creation of Ngarkldéu as well as of the island Goréör, as already mentioned (see story 14). In 1791, the English probably built Fort Abercrombie on this mountain (Vol. 1 p. 120). On the mountain lies the plot of land a Itáp. There the cave was situated where the noncombatants in the war against subjugated Goréör stayed and were slain by the people from Goréör, so that their blood flowed into the sea at point Pkultaitáp (story 195^a and story 195^b verse 4). There the stream a Ideraú is said to be where the girl from Goikúl washed Ibědul before she killed him (story 143^b). In the west near the bath Iulói (see below) must have been grotto Gongobítěl' l' dělág, where the human sacrifices were disemboweled (gongobítěl heap of offal, dělág entrails) and Bad a riáp the "Stone of Ngariáp", where the smoked bodies were later on buried.

Towards the west Rois Kobasáng forms the low rocky point Ngarieúog, which is separated from it by a small passage Toi rieúog, which a boat can hardly pass. In the north of the point lies the bay Gěgól with a sandy beach and a small low-laying area where in December 1906 people from the island Pulana were settled (see Vol. 1 p. 161). Already in 1875, people from Nggeiangěl (see there) have been settled here by the aggressive Goreots.

This low-laying area is separated from the bay a Ilúd by an only few meters high rise, the point of which is pointing seaward to the rock island Ngardís, which is as tall as a house. In this bay is a small rock called Ngeridmólog. To the north of this second bay is a low-laying area and further towards the east mounts an embankment where the village Ngarekobasáng lies. There is a rocky promontory, richly overgrown by bamboo, which is said to have come from heaven and drifted here from Ngarakeúkl on Pelíliou. This is the reason why people from there have the right to fetch bamboo here, even to take masts and other pieces of ship equipment.

The spring Ngareksóng in the north of this promontory is in a small wooded ravine, through which one can get up on the hill Ngeritáng, the place of an old settlement. Nearby is Rois Ngedmók, about 70 m high, and in the east of this mountain lies the village *a Meúngs*²⁶³ which again is leaning to the east against a small hill of about 20 m height, from where you have a surprisingly nice view of Goréör and the harbor of Malágal (see Vol. 1 p. 189 Figure 15). Especially grandiose is the panorama view in all directions from the bare peak of Rois Ketúnd²⁶⁴, which is about 80 m high. Otherwise the mountains of the island can best be seen from the bridge of Ngarekamais on Goréör. South of Ketúnd lies the 50 m high Rois Besáis, on its southern flank the cave Goamogársagél, which has been mentioned in story 195^a. Adding another historical aspect to the many that have already been mentioned, the ulói-blowfish, which had swallowed the spider Mangidáp, stranded on the island Ngürúr²⁶⁵ northwest of Rois Desóměl; later on it drifted, already rotten, to Bád l ulói (see above). More information in the history of the village.

The Island Malágal (Vol. 1 plate 7²)

(MC CLUER: Amalakell, CHEYNE: Malaccan, KUB.: Malákal, v.M.M.: Namalakl)

is the third volcanic island of the district. It became important, because of its location along the only good and usable harbor of the district, which was named after it. MC CLUER already mentioned it in 1792; he found the exit from the inside out, the so-called Toágěl Kesebokú (see Vol. 1 p. 120-124). In the map Vol. 1, Figure 11 p. 121 he wrote on the island "good water", which proved to be a further attraction for ships. Both their peaks and the geology were already mentioned there on p. 189 and 234, also the fact that foreigners, as for instance CHEYNE, TETENS and KUBARY, as well as other traders, often chose for security reasons this place for their residence. KUBARY took a photograph of a long house and his blai-like living quarter at the base of the landing bridge (see S.-K. p. 526, nr. 126 and 135). Even in 1910 there were settlements of Japanese here and on the northeastern promontory a trading company (see Vol. 1, plate 7² and page 156); in the south is a boat builder. In the middle between both of them, on the east coast near the spring Goeáol²⁶⁶ is the countryseat of rub. nr. I a Ibědul of Goréör. In 1791, Mc CLUER already met him there; now there is a landing bridge on this spot (see map III of the R.M.A. and I part IV pp. 53). The place is called Btil a meséi "End of the Taro Patch". Here, people of Goréör stopped all the boats in order to demand tribute according to the right of Gamasiógěl (see p. 208). On their way to a Ngeaur souls took a bath in this spring. (KUB. V p. 8).

The creation of the island has only been touched upon (story 14). It is supposed to be the middle part of the island a Ngaregúr, with which both galid from Ngaréliěp wanted to cover their place. But a Ugel kobasáděl deceived them with a fire so that they dropped the mountain here where it is still lying.

Privilege of Ngarkldéu:

Only the rubak of Goréör are allowed to wear the dugong bracelet, not those from the other villages (KUB. VIII p. 176).

Industry: none.History:

The events correlate more or less with those from Goréör. The rest of the district applies to stories 195 and 161, which are mentioned at page 211 and 215. The natives think their archipelago was created by the giant a Guáp as is told in story 2. But here the island Goréör and its neighboring islands Malágal and Ngarekobasáng are not mentioned, though story 14 has a special meaning for them.

God of the land a Ugélkldéu, a son of Mlagél Latmikáik (story 3), gave the district its name. It is said that he created the channel Toágěl mid between Goréör and Babldáob, in order to have these islands to himself. His house was called Takaléd, an ulangáng-spirit house stood nearby. The priest Ngirasuváu, with the title Gërěú, was the last who lived in the blai. He took flight at the arrival of the missionaries. The god itself is buried in Gongmīl in the east (see story 3).

1. Village Goréör

(WILS.: and MC CLUER: Kurura, Coroora, CHEYNE: Corror, SEMP.: Coröre, KUB.: Korrör, Korryör, MISS.: Korrör).

The name reportedly comes from duréor "[feminine] somebody who does not want to accept anything" which comes from uréor = "to work". The son of Milad (story 19) was called Duréor and, according to oral tradition, he was unruly²⁶⁷ (see below). The western part of the village is called Ngaramangángěd, the eastern part is called Ngarusebluk. The village is one of the most beautiful and biggest of the archipelago.

Description of the place (plan 26^a): It is situated in the middle of the island Goréör, on a 10 m high and 400 m wide isthmus, which connects the wider eastern and western part. On the ridge runs the village road in the direction of both coasts for about 1½ km. Whereas the government road is made of earth with a few stones mixed in, just like in Germany, the village road consists of a stone construction about 4 m wide and 40 cm high. In the west everything is wasteland, but at the trailhead Tóběd one enters under great shadowy trees that accompany the village road all the way to the eastern end. After about 500 m you come to a corner from where the stone path leads down to the coast first to bai G. a Dngöróngěr where we always stayed (see Figure 42 and Vol. 1, plate 5). The bai is located on a ledge about 8 m high. The road leads down in a northwestern direction to the boathouse at bai H. Săgămús (Figure 43 and plate 11³)²⁶⁸. From here a bridge leads through the mangrove belt out to the open water. Outside is a broad stone construction, the end of Gáděs ra planggatákl where, once upon a time, bai J. Bai 1 kiěu²⁶⁹ + was situated. The masses of stones are decorated with sculptural work, reproductions of turtles, fish, heads, etc. Several stone stairways (didlbói) lead along a wall upstairs, as during low tide everything runs dry (see Vol. 1, plate 12).

I want to mention here that 100 m to the southwest from here the táog a Ikesil leads out (see story 152). On the land close by, in the middle of the taro patches stood a boat shed where my interpreter WILLIAM GIBBON sometimes repaired or built boats. 200 m to the northeast, however, there is another táog that leads to blai 12 Bútilei. It is situated on the trail that connects the landing places Săgămús and a Delúi, which are shared by rub. II and I.

On the inland-facing side of bai a Dngöróngěr (Fig. 42) a stone path leads to the east steep down because here is a small dead end gully where a beautiful bathing quad is situated, and right next to it in the clay is a water hole. Then there is a tiny stream, called Metúker a riáng, which swells after the rain. This is one of the few places for drinking water of the village.

But let us return to the corner of the village road just mentioned. On the north-eastern corner lies the stony seat of a chief, a Ilíud ra sagalagóng (see story 195 of a Ugélpelú) and opposite of it above the road there is the compound 20 a Irágěl (see there), which belongs to the family a Ikeláu, even though it is situated on the land of blai nr. VII. Family II provides the priest for the village god Ugérërák. Now, the galid-bai, which once stood here, and where the priestess Ugelióu lived, has fallen into ruin; only its stone foundation still reminds of former times. On the place a Irágěl two important legend-stones are situated, one vertically standing Duréor (see above), and a flat wide one called rongór or rengerengél a Milad, the "Protecting Mat of Milad" (see story 19).

Figure 42. Bai G. a Dngöréngër, from the south.

This great woman threw her naughty son Duréor away together with her mat. This mat protected her from the sun. She used it in the taro patch and had placed her son on it. Both fell down here. In 1910, a stone ball as big as a coconut lay on a stony column next to the road not far from here. This was the magic nut of Gosilék (end of story 17^a) which was handed down to a Ibédul nr. I.

The village road leads in a northeastern and then in a northern direction. In the south blai nr. IX, 26 and 27 are situated, then in the bend follows the important blai nr. II a Ikeláu;

In the north of the street is a wilderness studded with bushes, nothing seems to thrive. Where the road turns sharply to the east, gelsél a pelú, the mighty stone construction for the 3 village-bai Meketí lies "in the middle of the village" (plate 11¹ and Figure 44), the old Gosobulngau²⁷⁰ (A), which is decorated with figurative posts, stands along the road in the north. An English ship under sails is depicted on its western gable, with the inscription " Ship Hesperus bound to London J. W. Smith" next to it. In the south is Bilekélĕk, unique because of its secluded lower room and then C. Ngarmídlbai, with its "air-fork" on the eastern gable (see Vol. 1, p. 151, and plate 1), the residence of so many visitors of Palau²⁷¹. The lower stone foundation on which they stand forms at the road a sharp wedge called Geibokíl²⁷² (plate 11¹). On the western rim stood a four-legged galíd-house and right next to it the legend-stone of Gamasiógĕl²⁷³ (story 158) of the greedy devil, who as a highwayman forces by deceit and violence all boats to give gifts (gokosóděł). Persecuted he turned into stone. It is said that Klotráol nr. V (see KUB. I p. 46) served an apprenticeship with him and this is the reason that people from Goréör acquired these rough traditions; for them only might makes right. In case somebody makes any objection they answer: běgěrei, di geimál a Gamasiógěł! "Let us say no more about it, it is only the hand of G.!" On the western side (Figure 44) a branch of the stone path leads up to the stone square.

Figure 43. Boathouse and bai H. Săgāmús seen from the north, seen from the sea,
1910. A. B.

Figure 44. Ngarmídlbai, Bilekélěk and Gosobuingaū, the 3 rubak-bai Meketí in Goréör seen from the east. A. B.

Right next to Meketí is the nr. I of the high chief a Ibědul's main place. Instead of a blai a secular two-story wooden building stands here, fortunately the only one in the village. A picture from the year 1876 (plate 12²) shows it in former times. In the west of it, along the flank of bai C. Ngarmídlbai is Capt. CHEYNE's grave, who is buried here together with his murderer a Ibědul 9; more about it in the history of the discovery, Vol. 1 p. 143.

About 200 m east of the 3 rubak-bai a rectangular stone construction is situated. It is an a ilúud-pavement for the rubak, which is higher than the street and covers it; young people are not allowed to walk on it. They step down from the street and walk in the direction of the sea around the construction. From here, 4 stone paths

Village Goréör

1. Corner Geibokil, Rub. No. II, Rubak-bai Meketi
Ngiraikelaū Gosobulngaū Bilekélëk

2. Landing place and boathouse a Delúi with figurative posts

3. Bai, Landing place and boathouse Săgămús in 1907.

4. Blai 26 Milong with ulangáng-spirit hut and gólbed-stone pavement.

lead radially in all directions: the already before mentioned western one and the eastern one form the village road; the southern one leads along bai D. a Damásăg²⁷⁴ down to the taro patches where Kesól, the pool for women is situated at its end. Finally the northern one where blai 36 Golngabáng (plate 12³) lies at its end, the residence of rub. nr. III, the well-known Arikoko (a Regúgěr). In the beginning, the trail slowly drops, and then later on reaches the main landing place a Delúi, passing on the way a nice stone formation flanked by some buildings. In the west of the trail still at the same height, used to be bai Miskabasáng, which, as mentioned before now stands in the government compound in Madalái. Right next to the beautiful boathouse a Delúi (plate 10²) is a bathing pool for men and at the exit to the east bai E. Bailiváiu. Here at the boathouse, just like in the táog Săgămús there are a male and a female figure as front posts in memory of the fall of club Ngaratatiróu (story 161)²⁷⁵.

On the eastern edge of the more than 10 m wide and 120 m long exit lies a stone dam, which leads along the eastern rim of the mangroves to the north until it reaches point Delebĕğĕl ("Cleft"), where in former times a fisher men's bai stood²⁷⁶. From this point the precisely²⁷⁷ 400 m long and several m high and wide stone dam of Ngarekamáis²⁷⁸ leads to the north (more precisely ("N to W $\frac{1}{2}$ W = 343°) until it reaches the edge of the deep water, so that even at low tide one can always anchor boats here. This stone dam, which is also celebrated in chants and legends (see chant 196 of Goldegól from Nggeiangĕl and story 49) bears witness of the hard work and energy of the Palauans.

The bridgehead is so wide that a hut and a tree found enough space there, as can be seen from the landing place in a Iebúkĭl (Figure 49). On land there is also a construction, which frames a deep hole, a turtle pond. There is also a tree standing on the bridge. On a long, small wooden plank one crosses an opening for boats (berípĕr) called Delebĕğĕl just like the point. Not far away to the east is a hole in the reef, called Le māu ra búğ, which has been caused by the falling betel nut palm of Ngesisĕg (see story 107).

Near the eastern end of the village road, of the 4th eastern branch of the trail, there are on both sides the buildings of the Capuchin mission, as already mentioned in Vol. 1 p. 159. The beautiful road, covered by tall trees, leads from here after 150 m to the well-built and wide trailhead Ptelúl a gara măsóngöp or Dmăsóngöp (Figure 45) where right next to it to the south on an elevated ground was the famous blai nr. V Ruseblūk, the Ngárangörusĕblūk, also shortly called Ngaruseblūk.

On the stone foundations to the right and left side of the exit of the road, 2 stone figures, gosūk "Owl" and gabágáp "The Goat Milking Man" lie; they are also mentioned in story 214. In former times, the house of Gágarang had been standing in place of the trailhead. The rubak-bai of a Iebúkūl is situated only a few steps to the north. The trailhead Ptelúl a Garailámēs was situated more towards the village. In former times, Goréör was weak, but it conquered the eastern villages Ngarmíd and Ngarekesáuol, from where both legend-stones had been taken away

Figure 45. Eastern village road and trailhead Ptelúl a Dmēsóngöp in Goréör.

But Ngarbagéd a sáu, north of Ngarmíd, was completely destroyed and its stone paths were taken away in order to lengthen and enlarge these parts of the roads of Goréör.

Facing the two big landing places in the north are smaller, less important ones in the south, without boathouses: Gúr near blai 29 Gotolói and a Ielág near blai 28 Goáng. A third táog Mákau lies south of VII Blairaingéaol; there is also a water hole. In-between both of the last mentioned ones is the small valley Sagásag.

Industry: little, as mentioned above on p. 8 at Ngaregolóng.

Privileges: Opposed to the other villages of the district it wears the dugong bracelet. "Koryor catches and sells the entire animal and also buys it when it is offered by a friendly state" (KUB. VIII p. 176). During the big ruk-dance in a Iraĩ the village Goréör as well as Galáp and Ngátpang (and not Melekéiok as mentioned by KUB. II p. 110) have the right of omárěg ra gorovíděl of "dipping the g-fish". The rubak of a Iraĩ must also invite the rubak of Goréör for the big pigeon eating of the season (see p. 163 and 186). Searching foreign boats, which pass the island Malágal, and removing taro and fish as has been already mentioned above on p. 208 at Gamasiógěl. At the actual ruk-dance Goréör is allowed to blow the conch shells and in modern days also to shoot the canons. KUB. II p. 111 relates further: "The ruk in Kórryor is opened by Aymyungs, for which their chiefs are especially invited for the Mesíuk tolúk. They come in a war canoe, where a mat is spread on the side of the outrigger, on which the gods of the land and the protective spirits of the high chiefs of Aremolunguy settle down. Then a turtle is consumed in Megetíy and the ruk takes place as usual. Besides Aremolungúi the ruk in Korryor is only visited and watched by Angarard, the smaller states only come to pay money."

It is obvious how many liberties Goréör dared to take. Most of them seem to have been introduced recently, since it got into the possession of firearms.

History: Goréör was mentioned early in history, as for instance in story 9 about the money offering bird delarók, which sat on the house of a Ibědul, where people wanted to catch it with a ladder did. This is the reason why blai nr. 1 got the name a Idíd. But it is not mentioned in story 2 of a Guáp. The creation of the land was accomplished by other galíd, as already mentioned in the history of the district. The island Malágal is said to be a part of Ngaregúr in the north, which the tricked spirit let drop (see above p. 204). In former times, the village seems to have settled on the height of Malágal or on a place of the surrounding Gogeál, before it moved to the present island. It certainly achieved its power through its insular seclusion; helped by the god of the land (see above p. 204,) who created the channel Toágěl mid. First the village settlements in their own district were defeated. It was most of all Ngarekobasáng that suppressed the western part of Goréör, called Ngaramangángěd. With the help of Gobágel bagěl sekerél a Ugélpelú defeated it, as it is related in detail in story 195^a. It even received a governor.

People from the rich Ngáruangěl are said to have moved to blai nr. I and II (see story 20), definitely to a Gol, where blai Gongolákl was peopled, which was formerly considered to belong to the kleblil-clans of a Idíd. How both bital blai of Goréör got their names Gongolákl and Pelú (see below bl. I) is not known.

Before I provide a few explanatory additions to the history of the development of the village Goréör, I first want to continue KUBARY's notes.

In KUB. II p. 68²⁷⁹ it is said (continuation of the copy at Melekéiok p. 96):

"So for instance the house Aydid¹ in Kórryor² owns two big ðny's³ in the state of nr. I and no. III.

In former times, in the state Kórryor on the island of the same name there were also individual families. In the east of today's village lived the family Ngaruðublúk⁴; its head was called Kletraul⁵. Close to this one in Katéet⁶ lived the family of Kleknuár Ira katéet⁷. Arakasiwang⁸ from Ngardóngol⁹ joined these two houses, which were friends. In the west of the actual Kórryor, in Takameding¹⁰, Meríl¹¹ and other places lived some families, which gathered around rupasak¹², the head of the Ayngiáol¹³ family who reigned over the part of the island called Ngaramangánget. In Ngargrél¹⁴ and in Kotelóyok¹⁵ two Aybadul's¹⁶ lived between these families: Aybadul Gréel and Aybadul a Kotelóyok, who remained separated from the others. An enmity and a war broke out between Rupásak and Kletraul, which brought the Aybaduls in the foreground and finally gave cause to the development of today's Kórryor. In the beginning three groups developed of Aybadul a

¹a Idíd blai nr. 1

²Goréör

³*dúi* "title"

⁴Ngarusebluk kleblil nr. V

⁵Klotráol nr. V

⁶Gëtët nr. VI

⁷Kldngul Ngiragëtët nr. VI

⁸a Rekesiváng nr. VIII

⁹Ngardengól blai nr. VIII

¹⁰Tegamdíng blai nr. X

¹¹Meril blai nr. IX

¹²Rubásåg nr. VII

¹³Ngaraingéaol nr. VII

¹⁴Kerél see Ibēdul I p. 224. This must have been blai III Iólulidid, which, in former times, had another name.

Kerél was the name of a plot of land.

So far KUBARY's account.

Koteloyok Iraykalau's¹⁷, who came from the house of Aybadul Gréel, and of Rupásak, which the three more important heads Kletraul, Irakatéel and Arakasiwang together with other smaller families were leaning onto. But with time the reputation of rupásak disappeared altogether and today's houses group around the two big houses nr. I and nr. II of Kórryor.

With Aydid□ went:

nr. III	Klou Rgógor ¹⁸
nr. IV	Kikeriy Rgógor ¹⁹
nr. V	Kletraul
nr. VI	Kleknúur Ira katéet ²⁰
nr. IX	Kleknúur Ir meríl ²¹
nr. XI	Ira Augulabars ²²
nr. XIV	Adalbay ²³
nr. XV	Gadalbay ²³
nr. XVII	Ogerdeu ²⁴
nr. XV III	Mad ²⁵

The following go with Aykalau:

nr. VII	Arakasiwang
nr. VIII	Rupasak ²⁶
nr. X	Kleeknuur Ira Takamedíng ²⁷
nr. XII	Augel ²⁸
nr. XIII	Anmdelóng ²⁹
nr. XVI	Armaráng ³⁰

¹⁵Gotológiog blai nr. 29

¹⁶a Ibēdul nr. I

¹⁷Ngiraikelau nr. II

¹⁸*klóu* "great" Regúgër

¹⁹*kekeréi* "small" Regúgër, is now called Ngiratëgëki

²⁰Ngiragëtët Kldngul

²¹Ngiramiril Kldngul

²²title Remelik

²³Gád l bai

²⁴Goukerdeu nr. 18

²⁵Mad nr. 13

²⁶Rubásag nr. VII

²⁷Kldngul Ngirategamdíng

²⁸a Ugél nr. 15

²⁹Mudelóng nr. 16

³⁰Remeráng nr. 1

About 30 years later than KUBARY, and independently from him I learned through my interpreter WILLIAM GIBBON that in former times Goréör was a poor place. Poverty Galebul has been buried on top of Túkūr-Hill, as mentioned before (story 3). Story 48 explains how it happened and why the north is so rich and the south so poor. Actually, the front side of all the village's old blai point towards the richer north, this is considered an old tradition.

//213//

Goréör was separated into two divisions, the eastern Getēt, also called bital Ibēdul and the western Ngara mangángēd, where also rubak-bai Meketí belongs. In the east reigned Klotráol and under it Ngira getēt, who today is nr. VI and Rekesiváng, now nr. VIII. In the west Rubásăg was the first and next to him were Ngiramerīl, now nr. IX, and Kldngūl, now nr. X. Both of the last mentioned ones are also distinguished as Kldngūl ra Merīl and Kldngūl ra Tēgamding.

How Gobágelbagēlsekerélfreed Goréör in those days has been discussed above. Another informant related how later on rubak nr. I a Ibēdul arose.

Klíbēdul (The different Ibēdul).

Two brothers lived on the land Gotólol (see blai 29 Gotolóiog). The older one first cleared the place a Úgul a gapdúi, where today blai nr. I is standing. He built a house and moved in. The younger one remained in Gotólol. Both had divided the taro patch Ngarabilobáog (see constitution) into Klóu and Kekerél Ngarabilobáog, the "Bigger One" belonged to the older and the "Smaller One" belonged to the younger brother. In those days, Goréör was divided into the western part Ngaramangángēd, where Rubásăg ruled and the eastern part Ngaruseblūk, the area of Klotráol. Both sides fought bitterly. The older brother sat in the middle and constantly mediated peace and, in doing so, he was so accomplished that all looked at him. Finally both sides offered the mediator the honor of high chief with its title a Ibēdul. He accepted and in gratitude and honoring his high position he gave Rubásăg the title a Ibēdul ra mangángēd.

This name has been formed from the word bedūl "head" and already in 1783 it was well known due to WILSON, who wrote it Abba Thule (see Vol. 1 p. 112).

Bestowing the Title a Ibēdul is done in the following manner:

When rubak nr. 1 a Ibēdul dies, his successor, rubak nr. III a Regúgër buys 100 a ulēld and 100 gālbákl-dishes²⁸⁰, 3 pots filled with syrup and one almond-fish²⁸¹; further, he hires a man for fishing. All this is for Ngarameketí, the 19 rubak of Goréör, who stay five days in the Ngarmídlbai, for mourning. This is called klóu mangeúng. The women stay just as long in the mourning house, blai nr. 1 a Idíd. When these 5 days and nights are over, they come out; then the feast dépsēs will be celebrated. Only a Regúgër remains 100 days in the mourning house. During this time he has a special cook for himself¹⁸². Only when this time is finished the mixing of the titles *uldekiál*²⁸³ a dúi takes place. From each food item one piece is thrown into a pot for a Regúgěr. Each of the other rubak receive a similar mixture on a wooden plate. In the same way the titles are now mixing: nr. III becomes nr. I, nr. V becomes nr. III, nr. VIII becomes nr. V, etc. After this feast the planting of bananas takes place. After 9—12 months, when the bushes bear fruit, the meal *udóim tu*²⁸⁴ is held. Here, the new a Ibědul pays his brother-in-law a piece of money and after the feast he starts to build a new house, after tearing down the old blai nr. I. While the walls and the floor are taken away, the roof is only removed and put down, after both ridge-beams, the lower buáděł and the upper ráel, have been attached in place. After the house is finished, the roof is lifted back on top, and then the feast but l blai "the finishing of the house" is celebrated where pigs, fish, taro in different forms, etc. are eaten. This feast is a tkul a bad, because the rubak sit at the "edge" tuk of the "stones" bad of the gólbed-pavement. Now, the funeral festivities have ended, and the new a Ibědul moves to Ngasiás, in order to be released there (story 162).

A galebúgěp-piece of money was sent to him on board, so that he would step on shore. Once he was on shore, another bágěl, a big piece of money, was given to him, in order to make him "take off his hat". Here, the mat with the serrated edge telutau l bár is meant, which the titleholder had to hold around and above himself, when he left the house or the boat, so that his holy head would not be touched. After this return he gave a piece of money to Melís in Goréör and dismissed him. — — — —

This is today's Goréör with its rubak. First their number was only 7, who called themselves gěuiděł dékěl the "seven punts" of the state ship Goréör. Among them a Ibědul became the first, but as can be seen above, he already had as influential chiefs Klotráol and Rubásąg next to him. Nr. II Ngiraikelau, who gained overwhelming importance²⁸⁵, joined them, as is explained below at blai nr. II. Also the successor to the throne a Regúgěr nr. III, who according to hierarchy came even behind nr. II, was powerful and there was also nr. IV Nigratěgěkí (see bl. IV), who was described by HOCKIN, p. 49 as Kickarai-Arra-Kuker (small Regúgěr). Thus, it can be explained when KUB. I p. 20 and II p. 81 says that a Răklai from Melekéiok differs from a Ibědul in this way that he is a sovereign in himself and that his chiefs who are all inferior by title, form his entourage. With the means of his wealthy house Uděs he has to carry most of the state's costs, which also ensures his predominant influence within the state. But in Goréör the power is in the hands of the first seven chiefs, because this land has been created by a merging of several individual states, which to varying degrees kept their former power in form of privileges.

From this we can deduce sufficiently who was the greater chief in old Palau, before the white people came. Out of jealousy, Goréör seems to have been in dispute with Melekéiok since ancient times, and Melekéiok could not harm it because of its favorable insular location. But Goréör, too, could not really harm Melekéiok. Only with the help of the English did the balance of power shift in Goréör's favor. This started in 1783 with HENRY WILSON and is described in detail in Vol. 1, from page 106 onwards. The district a Imelĭk and Ngaramlungúi came under its sway. a Irāi was destroyed, as well as Ngardolólók (story 161). Later on Ngardmāu, too, the great heroic chant nr. 194, the lullaby of the a Ibēdul-family, recalls it. Then during SEMPER's time Ngabúkēd and during KUBARY's time Nggeiangel, just as Melekéiok before became a victim of the singeing fire of the high-spirited ones. All this has already been mentioned at the respective places. Even in prehistoric times, there was no lack of such misdeeds, as for instance story 143 shows about the destruction of Goikúl, which in those days was still located on the Gogeál, as well as the attack on the people of a Imelĭk in story 49. This brought their lasting friendship with district I Ngaregolóng, which was in constant feud with Ngarárd, so that a union seemed opportune.

Thus, the history of Goréör presents itself as one of a warring and cunning island people, who achieved power and prestige by using the favor of happy chances.

Not much is known about galid Ugér ě rák²⁸⁶, the "First of the Season". He was already mentioned as god of the land in Ngarárd and Ngaramlungúi. His galid-house is blai 20 a Irágēl, where everything that is known has been mentioned. The god itself was uriúl rubak nr. 20. His priestess provided blai nr. II, and the blai also belonged to him. According to story 161 here was once a two-story sop just as in a Irāi, Keklāu, etc.; a Guódēl was offered food and drink here.

In plan 26^a the ownership of land can be clearly seen; the names of the taro patches, which are important as lkul a dúi "Basis of the Titles" are cited according to the recent constitution. As an exception, the composition of the 6 men's and 6 women's clubs has been noted down, further tables of the ancestors and descriptions of all blai will be provided.

Constitution of Goréör.

bai l pelú (village house): Meketí. A. Gosobulngâu, Bilekélëk, C. Ngarmíd l bai.

galíd (god): Ugérërák.

armeâu (people): Gerungül.

klóbak (council): Ngarameketí.

young girls: ar Ogoriakl.

female council: ar Kerengáp.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	ardil (women):
I	a Ibědul	a Idíd	I	Bílung
II	Ngiraiķēlāu	a Ikēlāu	II	Miráir
III	a Regúgēr	lólulíd +	to II	Dirmangiaū
IV	Ngiratēgēki	Tēgēki	" I	Tēgēkí
V	Klotráol	Ruseblūk +	" I	Sómug
VI	Ngiragetet	Gétēt +	"I	a Tmíkou
VII	Rubásāg	a Ingeáol	" II	Gógop
VIII	Rekesiváng	Ngarděngól +	" II	a Ugelióu
IX	Ngiramerīl ²⁸⁷	Merīl	"I	a Guódě'l'lägád
X	a Kldngül	Tēgamdíg	" II	a Dngesík

nr.:	keblīl (clan):	mesēi (taro patch):	delásēg (totem):
I	Ngaraidíd	Ngarabilobaog ²⁸⁸	íaus (Diagramma sp)
IV	Ngaratēgēkí	a Nglilúiš	" " "
V	Ngararuseblūk ²⁸⁹	Ngurutángěl	like I
VI	Ngaraġētēt	"	kēsēbōkú (morey eel)
VII	Ngaraingeáol	a Ukěd	klúděl (Serranus)
VIII	Ngarděngól	a Ileptīl	"
IX	Ngaramerīl	a Tepedél	gorovíděl (Caranx)
X	Ngaratēgamdíg	Gongelípěl	kedēsāu (perch)

Concerning both sides I and II see more detailed information below at blai I a Idíd and blai II a Ikēlāu; the bital blai are distinguished as b.b. ra Gongalákl and b.b. ra Ikēlāu or Pelú.

uriúl rubak (secondary chiefs):

Nr.:	old title:	owner since 1910:	bitang	blai (house):	KUB. II p. 69:
11.	a Rēmēlīk	Regekemúr	to II	a Ulúi	Ira Augulabars
12.	Golepelúl	Keúkl	" I	Bútīlei	Augel (15)
13.	Mílong	Mad	" I	Tamarikél	Anmdelong (16)
14.	Repegál	Dérābai	" I	Ráelblai-Iebúkūl	Adalbay (19)
15.	Pauderáng	Ugél	" II	Metúkēr	Gadalbay
16.	Goruák	Mudelóng	" II	bl. II	Armaráng (17)
17.	Děél	Remeráng	" II	a Ibāi	Ogerdeu (18)
18.	Tangátēl	Goukerdéu	" I	Ngais-Ngarekesauáol	Maḡ (13)
19.	Mákēmad	Gádlbai	" I	bl. III	—
20.	Ugérērāk galíd	—	" II	a Irágēl	—

Today, the old titles have nearly been forgotten. Only the titles of the new owners are known. Their hierarchy is disputed. My first reports mention Mad ra Gotolóig as nr. 14, Dérābai nr. 15, Ugél nr. 13, Mudelóng nr. 20 — where now, without any doubt and more correctly, the village god a Ugérērāk is standing —, Remerang nr. 19, Goukerdéu nr. 17, Gádlbai ra Ngēsebúng nr. 16. — Keúkl (12), Gádlbai (19). Goukerdeu (18) for instance have no land and taro patch in Goréör, because the first two come from Ngarebódēl, the last one from Ngariélēp. They were fetched in order to "fill up". Ugél (15), Mudelóng (16) and Remeráng (17) have no title-houses; they belong to family II and can stay in the respective houses, for example Goáng (28), Golngabáng (36), Magalbáng (25), a Ibāi (19), Ngarepkeoi +, etc. The notes of KUB., which differ slightly, have been added above. I refer to his account, KUB. I p. 39, a sure statement seems no longer to be possible and is more or less unnecessary.

Further blai:

- | | |
|---------------------------|-------------------------|
| 21. Keklāu | 36. Golngabáng |
| 22. a Itilúgēl | 37. a Itúngēlbai |
| 23. Beréngēs | 38. Ngēlengí |
| 24. a Ivotogóng | 39. Tagabóēot |
| 25. Magalbáng | 40. Gēgeráng |
| 26. Milong | 41. Mokiróng |
| 27. Gomtilóu | 42. Sug |
| 28. Gaoáng | 43. a Ubetáoe |
| 29. Gotolóiog | 44. a Dngér |
| 30. Búog | 45. a Irétag |
| 31. a Ibāi | 46. Gamaimēlei |
| 32. a Itagerengél | 47. Ngél |
| 33. Gobakētél | 48. Kélebid |
| 34. a Ilangabáng + | 49. a Ikesil |
| 35. Mesungíl + | |

nr.:	gáldēbegēl sagál (men's club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):	gáldebegēl dil (women's club):
I	Ngarageibárs	D. a Damásăg		Right	♀ Ngarainglis ²⁹⁰
II	Ngaramatál	E. Bailivaiu	a Delúi	(a Ibēdul)	" Ngaragokemi
III	Ngaratēkángēl	F. Miskabasang ²⁹¹			" Ngaradelngod
IV	Ngaraderudem	G. a Dngōróngēŕ		Left	" Ngaradebí
V	Ngaragalagil	H. Săgămús	Săgămús	(Ngiraikelau)	" Ngaraék
VI	Ngaratatirou	I. Bailikiēu +			" Ngaramaiberél

In 1910, the 6 men's and 6 women's clubs were composed more or less like this (tekaul = "deputy"):

Members of the men's club I Ngarageibárs.

- nr. I. Ngatapalau bl. I and 28
- " II. Ruētei bl. II and 48
- " III. Ngiragóbakētél (see bl. III Ióulidíd)
- " IV. Ngirabúngkelau (Keráskēs) bl. 41
- " V. Klotráol (deputy is Gobak bl. V)
- " VI. Ngiragētet nr. VI and bl. 44
- " VII. Melimaráng (rub. nr. 1 from Ngrabagéd deputy)
- " VIII. Ngiragamaimelēi, master of bl. 46
- " IX. Ngiramerīl nr. IX
- " X. a Kldngūl nr. X

Members of the men's club II Ngaramatál.

- nr. I. Ngirióulidíd, master of blai III
- " II. Keúkl nr. 12 (see bl. 12)
- " III. Skásang Beóug, marriage with Nggeiangēl (At. 3 Gen. V)
- " IV. Ngiratēgēkí nr. IV (deputy)
- " V. Mákamad, belongs to bl. 40
- " VI. Ngiragētet nr. VI (deputy)
- " VII. Rubásăg nr. VII
- " VIII. Golikórakesauáol in Ngarekesauáol, relative of nr. VIII
- " IX. Ngiraiuósog bl. 41
- " X. a Kldngul nr. X (deputy)

Members of the men's club III Ngaratēkángēl.

- nr. I. Tem Góbak Klotráol (At. 2 Gen. V)
- " II. a Tkél (At. 2 Gen. V)

- " III. a Mád bl. 13
- " IV. a Rmelik in Ngaregamāi (Ngarmíd?)
- " V. Gomangkár bl. 39 (At. 1 Gen. V)
- " VI. Ngiragaiáng in a Iebúkūl
- " VII. Rekesiváng nr. VIII
- " V. III a Itól bl. 47
- " IX. Ngirusóng from bl. 12
- " X. Sagaraimul from bl. 46

Members of the men's club IV Ngaraderúdēm.

- nr. I. Ngiratëgëki²⁹² nr. IV
- " II. Golegerīl (At. 2 Gen V)
- " III. Ngirturóng bl. I, son of a Ibēdul Gókěbai (At. 3 Gen V)
- " IV. a Ibēdul (At. 3 Gen IV) (deputy)
- " V. Dérabai, a Ibēdul 's messenger, see bl. 14 in Iebúkūl
- " VI. Ngiragētet nr. VI (deputy)
- " VII. Meláot, relative of Rubásăg nr. VII
- " VIII. Rekesiváng nr. VIII (deputy)
- " IX. Ngirametil nr. VIII (deputy)
- " X. a Kldngul nr. X (deputy)

Members of the men's club V Ngaragalagīl.

- nr. I. Máriur (At. 3 Gen VI)
- " II. a Rengil (At. 3 Gen IV remark)
- " III. Gómák bl. 41 y
- " IV. a Rduláol (Rěkamiúng) bl. 41
- " V. Liok Milong bl. 25
- " VI. Goběrdóng Toruál bl. 26
- " VII. Ngirubádbad bl. II (At. 2 Gen. V)
- " VIII Gětěrtóng bl. VIII (At. 4 Gen. VI)
- " IX Gotóběd, was married to bl. IX, in 1910 in Melekéiok
- " X a Ragabei in Ngarekobasang, belongs to Rubásăg bl. VII

Members of the men's club VI Ngaratatirou.

- nr. I. Gomelau
- " II. Golegerīl from bl. II (At. 2 Gen. V)
- " III. Dalíl'l (At. 3 Gen. VI)
- " IV Keúkl Rulúkěd (At. 1 Gen. VI)
- " V. Baiēi from Ngaregamāi, of Góbak (At. 2 Gen VI) adopted.

- nr. VI. Ęáoġ in Ngarmíd
" VII. Mikēl bl. IX (At. 2 Gen. VI)
" VIII. Ngiratorolí, son of Blágēd, 6. women's club, nr. VI
" IX. a Ubai bl. 41 x
" X. Ngirudelsáng bl. 49

Members of the women's club I Ngarínglis.

- nr. I. Dilikáng a Iáu, daughter of a Ibēdul 6 Kingsós (At. 1 Gen. III)

see bl. III

- " II. Súmog nr. V Isemei (At. 3 Gen. V)
" III. Diramangiau nr. III
" IV.
" V.
" VI. Due to a lack of women these numbers
" VII. were not occupied; if necessary the
" VIII. chiefs substitute for them.
" IX.
" X.

Members of the women's club II Ngaragokemí.

- nr. I. Diríoulidid Gopkál, see bl. 40 (At. 4 Gen. VI)
" II. R'rós bl. 27
" III. Gongelípēl bl. VI
" IV. Diralédēs from Ngaregamāi
" V. Mogóng bl. 13
" VI. a Riaur bl. 41
" VII. a Ingeáol Gamangél from bl. VIII (At. 4 Gen. IV)
" VIII. a Ilóng bl. VIII (At. 4 Gen. VI)
" IX. Laisang bl. 24
" X. Bangengei from Pelíliou, lives in bl. VII

Members of the women's club III Ngaradelngód.

- Nr. I. Ngardókou (At. 3 Gen. V)
" II. a Isíkl bl. II (At. 3 Gen. VI)
" III. Ngatēgeiár bl. 28 (bl. II)
" IV. Kerekeril bl. 40
" V. Gelegesél from Ngarekesauáol
" VI. Ngaseiár bl. 17
" VII. Kubári (At. 2 Gen VI)
" VIII. a Urong from bl. I in Ngarbagéd
" IX. Keri bl. 24
" X. ♂ a Kldngul No. X (male deputy)

Members of the women's club IV Ngaradebí.

- nr. I. ♂ a Ibēdul nr. I, male deputy
" II. Miráir nr. II
" III. Tmíkou nr. VI (Petói), bl. VI
" IV. Diregekemúr (nr. 11), wife of Keráskēs in Ngaregamāi (bl. 41)
" V. ♂ a Psís from a Iraī, lives in bl. 24 (male deputy)
" VI. a Dngesík nr. X, equipped by ♀ Varés in Iebúkūl
" VII. Teragól (see bl. 41)
" VIII. Dire ngeše geuás, lives in blai Ngaramaduléáng in Ngarbagéd
" IX. a Ugelióu nr. VIII, see bl. VII
" X. Gógop nr. VII

Members of the women's club V Ngaraék.

- Nr. I. Taru Bílung bl. I (At. 1 Gen. V)
"II. Klérang bl. VIII (At. 3 Gen. VI)
" III. Déililau bl. 25
" IV. Diraegélú Telól belongs to bl. IV, from Ngarsúl, in 1910 in Ngarekesauáol
" V. Diraságēpid Metēkákēt from a Iebúkūl, sister of Dérabai (bl. 14)
" VI. Ngirur bl. VI
" VII. Kesau Dirasmangēsóng (At. 4 Gen V)
" VIII. Dirasibóng Golngégal from a Iraī (to bl. VII)
" IX. Kúkong bl. IX (At. 2 Gen V)
" X. Dirateliál mekēsóng Gortei from Ngarabagéd

Members of the women's club VI Ngaramaiberél.

- Nr. I. Taldil bl. I (At. 1 Gen. VI)
" II. Goleúngēl Gológol bl. II (At. 4 Gen. VI)
" III. Losí bl. 33
" IV. a Iegáng bl. 41 (At. 2 Gen. V)
" V. Gálilai bl. 13
" VI. Blágēd, mother of Ngiratorolí, 6. men's club nr. VIII. In Ngurusár; to bl. 32
" VII. Dibúk, bl. 41
" VIII. Gomregóngöl, daughter of Dngēsík in Iebúkūl, related to Rubásāg rub. nr. VII
" IX. Díuk bl. 44
" X. ♂ a Kldngul nr. X (male deputy)

In former times, Samoáng (At. 4 Gen.V) occupied the last position. However, in a dispute she transferred to the 4. club Ngaraék.

Now follows a listing and description of the individual blai and families (see plan 26^a). The latter, especially family I and II, are depicted in the following five genealogical charts (At. 1—5).

Only with great effort and significant expenditure of time I managed to research the genealogical charts of both the first families, and to establish them with more or less certainty for 6—7 generations. I have to remark how obliged I feel for the unflagging help of my interpreter WILLIAM GIBBON.

Figure 46. The gólbed-stone pavement of blai nr. I a Idid in Goréör.

blai* nr. I *a Idíd²⁹³.

Title: ♂ a Ibědul²⁹⁴, ♀ Bílung²⁹⁵.

A foreign two-story house built of boards, its interior very neglected. Its former appearance see plate 12². In front of the house towards the road, is the big funeral platform of the family (Figure 46), which also has many places in front of blai Těgěkí, but most of all in front of blai 39 Tagabóeöt. Ancestral home bl. 29. On the pavement a Idíd stands a big kesīl-Eugenia-tree, under which an old a Ibědul lies (see story 20 Ngáruangěł)

Village Goréor

1. Rubak nr. 1 a Ibēdul

2. Blai nr. I a Idid

(Phot. by G. Riemer, in 1876)

cookinghouse

ēēdul

Ulangang- spirit house

3. Blai 36 Golngaban

a Reguger Laug 1910
Jetzt a Ibedul.

Rois (Gor. At. 4. Gen. IV)

and the galid Gobágēlbagēlsekérēl (story 195). To the west of the house that, like all the houses of Goréōr, turns its face towards the rich north, lies a shabby cooking house and the three rubak-bai Meketí. The last a Ibēdul 11 Gókēbai gave up his name because of its similarity with the one of his wife Gómogōbai; he called himself Ngiralengelekéi, according to a bai in Nggēiangēl. For many years, he lay sick in the lower open room (Figure 47). On October 14th 1911 he died and was followed by Regúgēr (Arikoko) Láug. Both their origin is shown in At. 3 Gen. IV. Gobak (At. 3 Gen. V) became Regúgēr, In 1910, Taru (At. 1

Figure 47. The very old a Ibēdul 11 Gókēbai on his sick bed, in 1910.

Gen.V) held the female title Bílung. Her brother Ngatapālaū and the mixed blood Máriur (At. 3 Gen. V) are candidates for the title a Ibēdul. The chiefs a Ibēdul and the successor a Regúgēr became known as Abba Thule and Arra Kuker because of WILSON which is reported in detail in the history of the discovery. They became also known for the aggression with which they usurped the rest of Palau with the power of foreign arms.

It is remarkable — and significant for the poverty of tradition in the Micronesian-Melanesian region, in comparison to the Polynesian region — that in oral tradition there was no indication to be found which a Ibēdul, "Abba Thule" greeted the shipwrecked WILSON in 1783. Even the just mentioned Gókēbai was not able to point out one of his ancestors, mentioned further below, as WILSON's friend. He was thinking that in those days as Brokl íbēdul (brokl from the English word broken, because of his breast) had lived, who was supposed to have been the father of Prince Leeboo. But in HOCKINp. 45 it is said that Li-Bu was supposed to have been an adopted son of Abba Thulle. Thus, Broklíbēdul must have been a relative of the a Ibēdul of that time, maybe his brother Sabú, whose son Ngirangáruangēl had died without being married (see At. 1 Gen. II and III). The father Sabú and Libú the son show at least similarities in their names. I could not determine their meaning.

HOCKINp. 74 describes the return of MC CLUER's expedition from New Guinea: "On Monday, January 20th (1793) they reached the Pelew-Islands. They had hardly anchored inside the reef, when they were surrounded by natives, who brought them the news that the people-loving and benevolent Abba Thulle had died. This sad death had happened about three months after the departure of the ship (on June 27th 1792). The surviving brother of the former king Klau-Arra-Kuker followed him. His actual family name was Anguswangaa."

Accordingly, a Ibēdul of the year 1783 can only have been Ngiraidíd (At. I Gen II), in 1792 his younger brother Sabú, MCCLUER's Anguswangaa, followed him. In order to please his English friends, he took the name Kingsós (= King George). Under this name he is well known among the Palauans. He must have had a long life because one of his daughters (with a móngol) still lived in 1910 in Ngardmau, and Láug, the brother of Gókēbai (At. 3 Gen IV) could say very firmly that he had seen him when he was a boy. But he cannot possibly have lived any longer than 1850. According to the information of Rubásag, rub. nr. VII, who in 1910 was about 70 year old, he had, as a boy, seen his successor a Ibēdul Ngiratogósóng, which is absolutely credible.

With respect to the last 8 mentioned ones, who can be considered to be historic, the following list of 12 a Ibēdul has to be squeezed into the narrow amount of time of approximately 130 years. It is possible that the first one listed lived in 1710 when the group of islands was discovered by FRANCISCODE PADILLA. Unfortunately none of the princes of this time was mentioned in his account. The destruction of Ngáruangēl, story 20, can be determined to have taken place around 1700. Thus at best, in both cases the oral tradition dates back 200 years, whereas in Samoa I was able to describe 600—700 years²⁹⁶ in a much more elaborate and established fashion; – and Palau is, thanks to its pictorial stories, a laudable exception in the Micronesian-Melanesian area, even when I have to mention here that HAMBRUCH managed to cover 270 years in Nauru²⁹⁷, probably because there is a clear Polynesian influence.

List of a Ibēdul of Goréör.

In prehistoric time, several names are mentioned, which can not be placed correctly or identified, such as: one Melampelú, who conquered or destroyed all the places of Peláu, another one had a son called Sol and was married to the grandchild of the female progenitor of Ngáruangēl Diragoróség, just as the Ngáruangēl-woman Dilsépsis from Mekér in a Imelík who married a Ibēdul Meríngēl a dingál (At. 4. Gen. III). All a Ibēdul since the 5th Ngiraidíd are descended from both these women. The last offshoot of Ngiragobakētél bl. 33 (see story 20).

Old Line.

1. Mlad ra úlekađēi "Died in U." Grave in front of blai nr. I, also called a Ibēdulre Kerēl, after the plot of land Kerēl (see above p. 212).
2. Kemángēl íbēdul "The Long Ibēdul". Some rubak said that he had lived in 1783 at the time when the Antilope was shipwrecked; though this is not really possible.

Zu Seite 168

¹ nach mir Professor (Poropesóng) genannt.
² Lage des Ortes unbekannt.

Goréor Ahnentafel 4 (Gor. At. 4) des a Ibëdul 3 u. 8 und der Bîlung 8.

n. VII

[illegible]

¹ Von Ngáruangél stammend; die ganze heutige α Ididfamilie stammt von ihr und Diragorosgég ab. (s. Gesch. 20).

² Name des 2. Zweiges des blai Nr. 1 Klóulblai v. a Imelik (s. Ngk. At. 2).

³ Ging mit Leutnant Mc Cluer nach Bombay (s. Tibd. 1 S. 122).

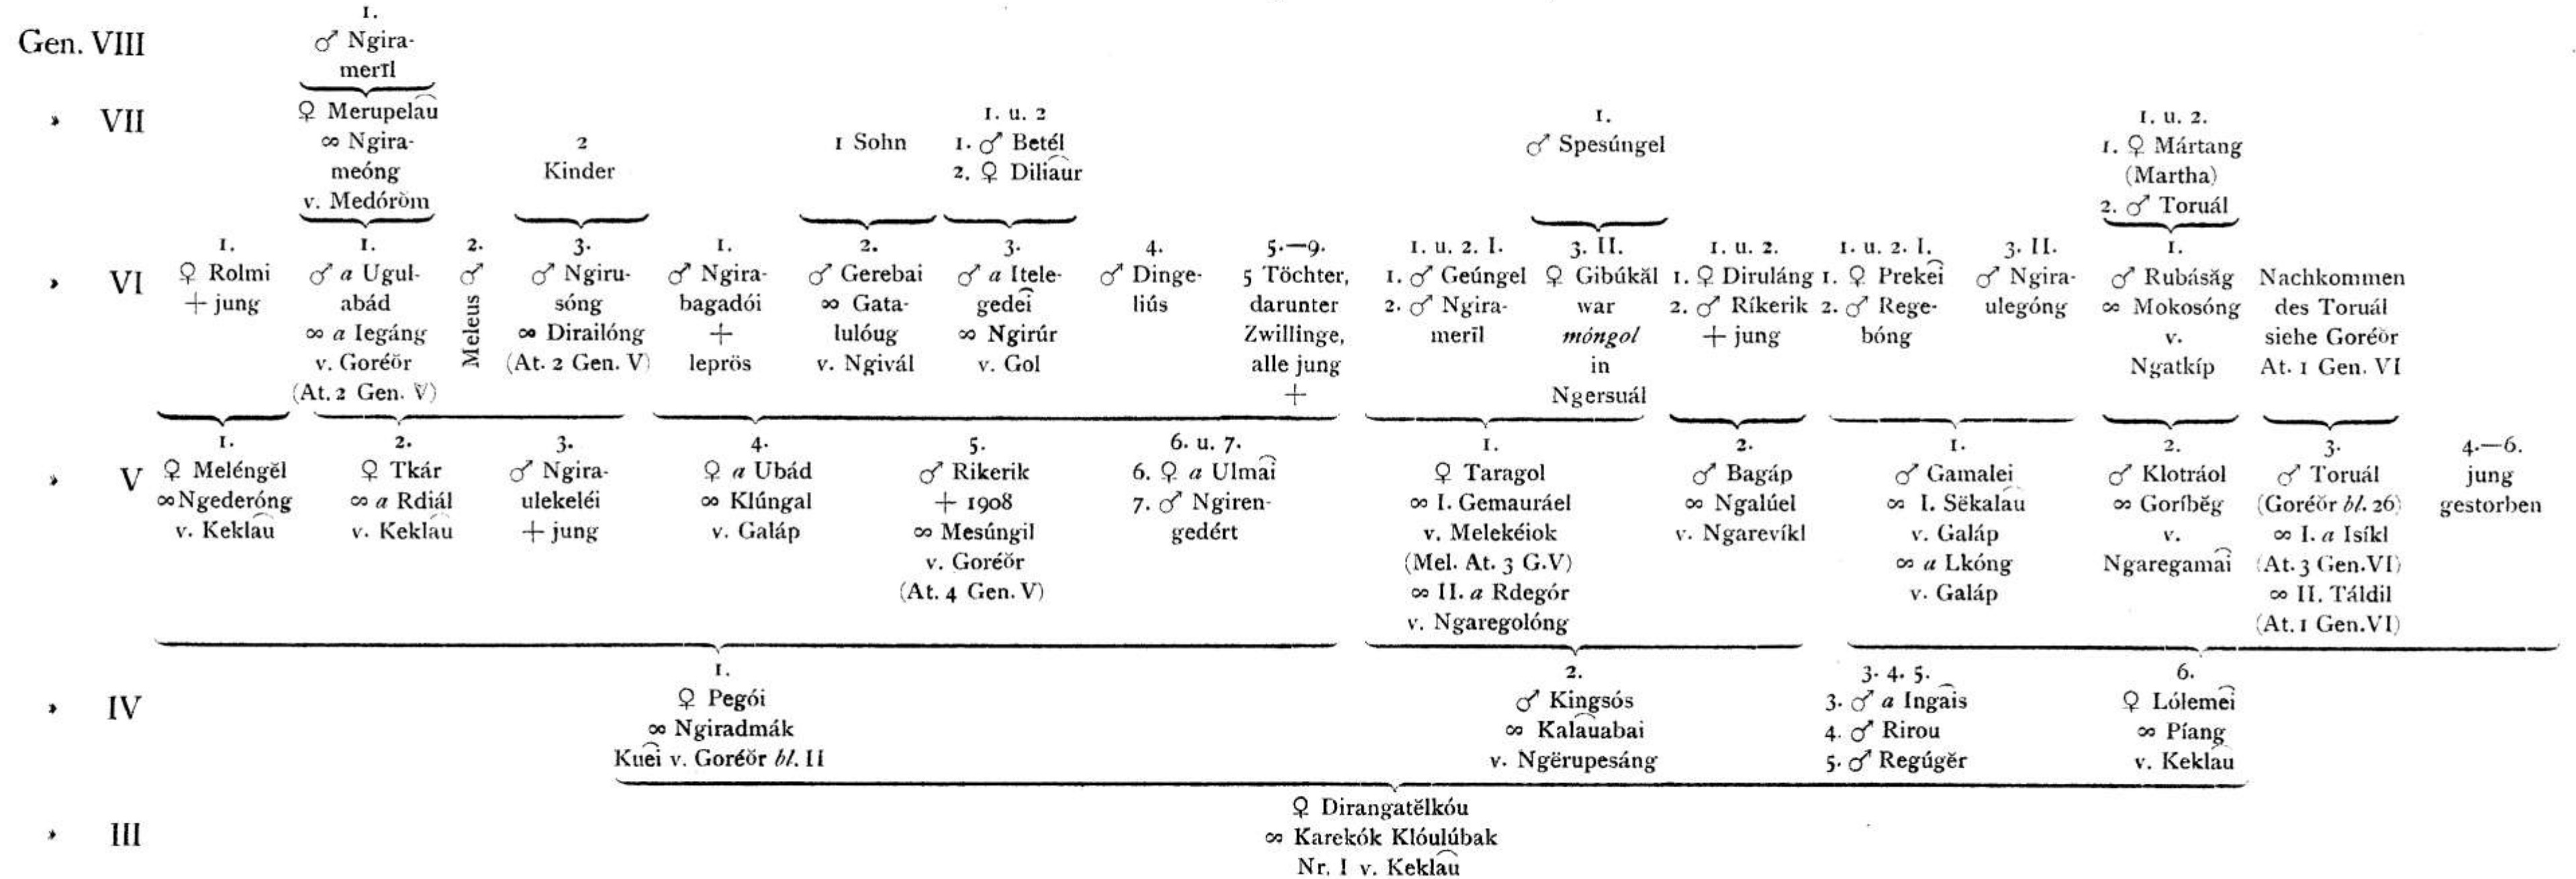

⁴ Vgl. At. 3 Gen. V a Isemēi.

⁵ MIKULUCHO-MACLAY sagt: Cheynes »Eingeborenenfrau wurde die Gattin eines Rupaks aus Koror, und die Tochter (Diraklei) wurde als sie erwachsen war, von dem Stiefvater in ein Pai in Airai verkauft, wo sie jetzt das Amt einer Mongol versieht«.

Goréör Ahnentafel 5 (Gor. At. 5)

Zu Seite 225

der mit a Idíd verschwägerten Kekläu-Familie (Gesch. 20)
(s. auch die Bildung Mel. At. 2 Gen. V)

3. Mlad réksom or raksóng, named after a water hole in Ngarekobasáng, where he was speared (At. 4 Gen. I). His son Meríngěl a dingál, grand child Ibědul 8.
4. Bokelólöm Ngíragolivál; after blai Golivál in Ngarekobasáng, where he lived. He had a wife from Pkúlapělú on Pelíliou (see there).

New Ngáruangěl-Line (see the 5. Genealogical chart in the appendix).

5. Ngiraidíd Gorót Mlad ra búrěk²⁹⁸ "Died of Swelling" (At. 1. Gen. II), WILSON's Abba Thule, in 1783 he died in 1792.

He named his kabékl-warcanoë after the foreign ship Antilope.

6. Sabú Kingsós (King George), the younger brother of the former (At. 1, Gen. II). Broklíbědul; father of Libu, who went with WILSON to England and died there. MC CLUER's Anguswangaa. Most likely, he lived until the mid 1800s (see chant 209 and bl. II).

In 1910, Dilikáng a Iâu, his daughter with a Hetäre (hetaera-concubine), still lived in Ngardmāu. Ngiragobakětél (see I. men's club nr. III) is said to be her son (see story of Ngáruangěl).

7. Ngírutogosóng Meríngěl a delél "Pain In His Belly". Most likely a Ibědul approximately 1850. Came from a collateral line. During his period of office the big pier of a Meúngs on Ngarekobasáng was brought to Ngarekamais.
8. Měang "The Holy One", Meríkl ibědul the "Courageous Ibědul" (At. 4, Gen. III, grand child of 3) also Meríngěl a kěmedíl, at around 1850. He is considered to be the destroyer of Ngardmāu. He is the son of the woman Dilsépsis of Ngáruangěl and of Meríngěl a diangál, a collateral line, which only produced Bílung 8 (see At. 4).

In 1795, as a young man, his brother Ngirakuesóng is said to have goneto Bombay with MCCLUER (see Vol.1 p. 126).

9. Ngíragosárěg or Ngiragosarei; Mlad ra sólrau (At. 2 Gen. IV) "Death by Soldier"; because in 1867 he was shot for murdering captain CHEYNE (see Vol. 1 p. 143). SEMPER met him in 1862. He lies buried next to CHEYNE at at the side of Ngarmídlbai.
10. a Měseróu Ngirukobei (At. 2 Gen. Gen. IV).

According to KUB. I p. 40 he was removed from office in 1871 and fled to *bl.*13 Ngurukōbēi in Ngramíd. Avoiding his next two successors, a distant relative, Arnjil Ira Nalegij, was chosen to be high chief (see Vol. 1 p. 146). All this points to the following Ngiralengekěi. (Photo of KUB., provided in S.-K. p. 538 nr. 143, 149, and 172.)

11. Gókěbai, Ngírailengelekěi²⁹⁹, Delekúl ra Sop (At. 3 Gen. IV), who was mentioned above on p. 223. He was born around 1830, died Oct. 14th 1911 and had had his title since August 1871, as can be seen from 10.

He was known as a fat man. The photographs of G. RIEMER on board of the "Herta" show him as such (see plate 11¹; see also S.-K. p. 538 nr. 145); in 1882, Captain EAST also mentions a dreadfully fat king (see Vol. 1 p. 152). In 1898, when Captain at sea KURTZ, of outstanding merit for sounding the depth of the sea on SMS "Planet" (see Vol. 1 p. 183), was in Palau on board of SMS "Arcona" he wrote about his visit to the Gókēbai on Malágāl: "His palace is made of wood, placed on 6 to 8 sticks. Its interior consists of one big room, about 3 m wide and 5 m long, and 2—3 m high. Abba Thule is sitting enthroned in this salon on some woolen blankets, his legs crossed under the sitting tool. You have to imagine a nearly bare brown lump of flesh, on which the human forms of a body are only just recognizable, crowned by a head with yellowish-white hair" etc. Twelve years later I saw him lying around in his new wooden house, constantly sick, waiting for his death. Here he dictated for me chant 194 about Gurdmau (Figure 47). Under the house a long chest was ready, a sort of a coffin, as they are produced in Nggēsar. He died as a heathen.

12. Láug Semelemóg Ngiramadalai (At. 3 Gen IV), the younger brother of the former a Ibēdul, since 2. August 1911, before he was known to all whites and visitors as Arikoko = a Regúgēr nr. III (MCCLUER: Arra Kuker, CHEYNE: Arra Kurka, KUB.: Rgogor) because he was piloting the ships and because he was noticeable with his long white beard (see plate 12³ and Vol. 1 plate 4⁴).

With his restless character and not averse to alcohol, he was in Spanish exile in Yap when the islands were taken over by Germany. During the war he is said to have gone to Japan and to have stepped on board of a plane.

The first 3 title-holding women Bilung are not known, but those corresponding Ibēdul 4-12:

4. Diragoisaváng (At. 1 Gen. 1) from the old bl. I Goisváng in Ngabúkēd.
5. Diliíkr (At. 1 Gen. II), daughter of the former, sister of Ibēdul 5 and 6, but no title-holding chiefs among her descendants, only Bilung 9 and 12. She is known as Diraúdēs, as she was married to a Rāklai 7 from Melekéiok.
6. Galungál Diralengsél (At. 2 Gen. III), mother of a Ibēdul 9 and Bilung 10. She died around 1850³⁰⁰.
7. Gēdēlengáng Dirabengkól (At. 3 Gen III) an aunt of a Ibēdul 11 and 12.
8. Tangrángēr Diragoragell (At. 4 Gen IV). Niece of a Ibēdul 8; she alone belongs to the side line At. 4.
9. Kerengél Diratúblai (At. 1 Gen. IV). Grand daughter of 5, seems to have been married to a Mad from Túblai in Ngabúkēd.

10. Lukës Ngorói, Mlad ra Ngatkíp "Died in Ngatkíp" (At. 3 Gen. IV). Sister of Ibēdul 11 and 12.

KUB. calls her Ngaroi and DiraiKelāu, which is explained by At. 3, as wife of NgiraiKelāu. In 1873 she was said to have been about 40 years old (S.-K. p. 538).

11. Gúgap (At. 3 Gen V). Niece of the former.

12. Táru Diragongoroál (At. 1 Gen V), see 5.

Politically the village Goréör is divided into two parts, Gongolaki³⁰¹ and Pelú, in the a Idíd family I and a Ikelāu family II. That side II is the stronger one can be seen at blai II.

The keblil-clan of the fam. I a Idíd:

1. a Idíd bl. I
2. a T pang in Iebúkūl (see there)
3. Gotolóiog bl. 29
4. Badurěáng nr. II in Ngarmíd
5. a Tmedbad nr. 1 in Ngarekesauáol
6. a Ibluk nr. II in Ngarebóděl
7. Ngetegesong nr. V in Ngarbagéd.

The clans are important for the bestowing of titles. a T pang (2.) is the messenger Dérābai of a Ibēdul and a Ibluk (6.) Melís, who had to go into seclusion with the new title-holding a Ibēdul. He prepared the coconut fibers as ologúi-anus-wipes. Concerning the former keblil Gongolákí and Goisaváng see a Gol and Ngabúkěd (story 20). They were the ones who started a new era for a Idíd due to their connection with the 2 Ngáruangě families. Concerning the relationship of the a Idíd family with Pkúla pělú on Pelíliou see a Ibēdul 4.

All members of the family a Idíd honor galíd Reméng³⁰² as family god, which they assume to be living in the beautiful a iāus -fish (Diagramma sp.). The giant milkfish (Mugil) kālát is considered to be the demon's "beggar's staff", and the green-blue Scarus, kěmědukl, is considered to be his canoe. Therefore all three fish are a delásěg -Totem and forbidden for the kitchen of the house.

The name Idíd is explained by the Ngorót-story 9. From Ngarekeklāu the money-bird delārók came flying to Pelíliou. When he was drifting over the galíd-house in Ngardolólók, he shook his wings, which is called mangiaū; afterwards the place was called Ngiramangiaū. The old title Ngiramangiaū of blai II a Ikelāu in Goréör comes from there.

Because stones were thrown after the bird, he flew to Goréör and sat on the house of family I. A bamboo was fetched in order to be used as a "ladder" did and to catch the bird, which was very much desired because of the money in its body. From here the name Idíd is said to come.

blai nr. II a Ikelāu

Title: NgiraiKelāu, ♀Miráir

situated on the main road, in the west of the 3 rubak-bai. Not a beautiful Palauan blai, as could be expected, but similar to a Idíd, only much simpler. A house constructed under European influences from wooden boards. Original building bl. 28.

In 1910, Belesog (At. 2 Gen V) was NgiraiKelāu the "Master of Ikelāu" (here house and family title are one and the same). He was my informant and adviser on many questions, an excellent human being and as industrious as both his brothers a Tkél and Golegerīl. DiraiKelau was his wife and "Woman of the House" and Mangasobóg of Ngarmíd. Miráir was Rois (At. 4 Gen. IV).

bl. II has 2 gólbed-pavements: a Ikelāu and Ngaramangiau (see story 154 about blai Ngaragabál). In former times the family title was Ngiramangiau; its meaning has already been mentioned at bl. I; now it is the female title of bl. III. At the time of WILSON, a chief, Trúiuḡ a diál, is supposed to still have had it. He was named "Ten His Titles" because he held 10 blai-titles.³⁰³ Already CHEYNE mentions a certain Eareyekalow on p. 241. His book was published in 1852. It is reported that Remókēt and Ngirameléngēl were Ibēdul's sons (see story 209); the first one was Ngiramangiau mlad ra ngláep ("Who Died in the Lane") and he brought the famous godogul building-magic to bl. II, see part. V). But in At. 1 Gen. III they are not noted.

In any case in 1793, MCCLUER did not hear the title NgiraiKelāu, because he names the first four chiefs like this (HOCKIN p. 49): 1. Abba-Thulle; 2. Kickarai Abba-Thulle (Kekerél Ibēdul) "First Minister", who is not eligible for the throne; 3. Klau-Arra-Kuker (Klóu a Regúḡēr) the Chief General and successor to the throne, 4. Kickarra-Arra-Kuker (Kekerél a Regúḡēr) the Second General. Thus nr. 2 can only be rubak nr. II, because in fact even today the succession to the throne is not with bl. II but with bl. III, even though it is under bl. II and not bl. I, as has been explained at bl. III.

How the house II obtained the new title Ikelāu can be deduced from a story, which I heard in Ngarakeúkl on Pelíliou. People from Ngasiás had been driven away by Maluád lē gúr (story 164) and had fled to Ngarakeúkl, and from here with the people from this village to Ngarbagéd on Goréör. Ngasiás lived there in Bablpelú, Keúkl in Ióulpelú. Idíd (bl. I) and Mangiāu (bl. II) had a dispute. Ngiramangiau fled and hid himself in the mangroves on a kelāu-tree (Cordia). While fishing for crabs people from Keúkl found him there. First he was afraid that they would spear him. But they were benevolent and therefore he asked them to bring him away. At night they guided him to Ngaragúmēlbai (distr. VII). There he gave them

// Krämer, Palau, Vol. 2. Plate 13//

Rubak of Goréör.

1. Rub. nr. V Tem Góbak (Gor. At 3 Gen V).

2. Rub nr. VIII Moaî Rekesiváng (Gor. At. 4, Gen. V).

3. Rub. Nr. II. Ngiraikelau and his brother a Ikel and Golegeril (Gor. At. 2. Gen. V)

a ngát, a blessing. He said: When people from Keúkl come to Goréör to attend a feast, and they place a basket on the taro bench, then it [the bench] belongs to them. Also, when a Keúkl-man sees the head of a těmakāi-fish in the pot, then he can take it. Further on, he took the title Ngiraikeľau for Ngiramangiaľu, which went over to bl. III, as can be seen there.

Concerning the dispute between bl. I and II KUB. II p. 79 reports the following:

"Thus for instance in Korryor during feasts and other events Iraykalau received his part of food just like chief nr. III, whereas following Aybadul he should have a bigger one. Concerning the origin of this exception the tradition says that in former times both houses had a dispute over the number of teeth of a Turutum³⁰⁴ (Diodon). Iraykalau, should he loose the bet, was supposed to give a big piece of money, something he was not willing to do and both houses started a bitter fight where Iraykalau's side proved to be the stronger one. Finally Aybadul cunningly bought a Yap-man from his enemy's side, in order to club an Aydid-man treacherously to death. This one murdered Kleknuur Inneril³⁰⁵ and this enraged everybody against Iraykalau so that he had to flee to Eyrray and during his absence his part of food was distributed to nr. III and IV and in this way it remained even after his return." —

So far KUBARY.

In the lives of primitive people it happens quite often that a con man or a thief gains reputation when his cunning is successful. However, in case he is caught he very often has to pay for it with his life.

Additional information concerning the story of the family in KUB. I, p. 12 (see also Vol. 1 p. 146).

As already mentioned at bl. I the village Goréör is politically separated into 2 parts: Gongalákl and Pelú; the side of the a Idíd-(fam. I) and the side of the a Ikelau-(fam. II). The "place" Pelú is the more important one, because it is said that all Ngarkledéu belongs to a Ikelau to and not to a Idíd.

kleblil — the clans of a Ikelau are the following³⁰⁶:

- | | |
|--|--|
| 1. a Ikelau | 6. Gomrekóngel bl. I in Ngarekobasáng |
| 2. Ióulidíd (bl. III) | 7. Blósog nr. I in Ngarmíd |
| 3. Ngarameril (bl. IX) | 8. Meriáng bl. IV Ngrabagéd |
| 4. Ngérturóng bl. II in a Imeuńgs (p. 141) | 9. Gēbal + in Ngaragabál (p. 201) |
| 5. Kídēl bl. II in Ngeregól-Pelíliou | 10. Ketit + Ngarielep | uriul blil a Ikelau (secondary houses of Ikelau):

- | | |
|---|------------------------------|
| 11. Dúkl + formerly near to Ngardengól nr. VIII | 13. Gaoáng (bl. 28) |
| 12. Galēbáiēd + stood in the west of Bútlei 12 | 14. Gēsurói |

Concerning 6, 8 and 9, see story 154 Ngaragabál, about the addition from Ngáruangël, story 20. The connections to Ngirturóng at bl. II in a Imeúngs, where Melebálmadál is also mentioned, who built Gaděsuréor on the reef Ngardilúgěs (Vol. 1 p. 219).

That the house Ikeláu furthermore provided the priest for the village god Ugérërák in bl. 20 a Irágël, has been mentioned above on p. 215, also that it gained a strong influence in a Imeúngs (see there bl. II). Thus it is understandable that NgiraiKeláu, like a powerful minister, politically obscured the head.

blai* nr. III. Ióulidíd "Lower Idíd "+.

In former times, the house was behind bl. I a Idíd on the piece of land Kerël (p. 224), still on the height; in the south the land drops down the mangrove beach. Today this place is uninhabited.

Title ♂ a Regúgěr, known since WILSON's time as the successor to the throne "Arra-Kuker" and "Arikóko" (see bl. II p. 228).

Title ♀ Diramangiaū.

In former times, the name of the house seems to have been Mangiau and it belonged to fam. II a Ikeláu (see there). Now one Diramangiau, coming from fam. I a Idíd, could not be buried decently by her husband Ngiramangiau, because he had no money. He was too poor to pay golesúmog "Alms for the Burial". Then the fam. a Idíd took over the house with its ♀ title and called it Ióulidíd (see also bl. II).

Another interpretation says that one Ngiramangiau died, whereupon his a Idíd-wife took the title with her to her family. Only later did an a Idíd-man fetch her title Diramangiau and gave it to the "Lower a Idíd" house.

Therefore bl. III remained definitely under bl. II, as explained above, even though it is the house of the successor to the throne. — In this house died the last offshoot of the old a Idíd-family with the name Ngiragóbakětél, a son of the Bílung of Keklau (see story 20 about Ngáruangël and bl. 33).

In 1910, the brother of a Ibědul Semélemog (At. 3 Gen. IV) was master of the house — though without a house — but in name only still Ngirióulidíd. In former times he was called Ngiramadalai, after a blai in Ngarekobasáng, and later on he was given the nickname Láug. Since 1911 he is a Ibědul. He was known to all the seafarers of the last decades as the pilot of their ships inside the coral reefs. He was easily recognized due to his double-pointed long white beard (see Vol. 1 plate 4⁴ and Vol. 2 plate 12³)³⁰⁷. He married Róis Miráir from bl. II and lived with her and her children in bl. 36, called Gólngabáng. In 1911 rubak nr. V Klotráol also known as Tem Góbak followed him as Regúgěr and Ngirióulidíd.

Diramangiaū was the Gopkál nr. II of Ngarekobasáng (At. 1 Gen. V).

blai nr. IV. Tëgëki closely connected with a Idíd (bl. I) and is situated near to it in the east.

Title ♂: Ngiratëgëkí, ♀Tëgëki (KUB. I p. 39 Ardirakorakl).

The title of the house is also indicated as a Regúgër ra Tëgëkí (I Ngiratëgëkí), because he is considered the successor of a Ibëdul after a Regúgër nr. III. KUB. II p. 69 distinguishes him as Kekerél from Klóu Regúgër (nr. III), as already MC CLUER did (see above bl. II p. 228).

The last master of the house was Rëbëgóng (At. 1 Gen. V), who died at the end of 1909 as Regúgër ra Tëgëkí³⁰⁸. Thus rub. nr. III was followed by rub. nr. V. His wife was Gadángël from Ngardmāu, who had been married in a first marriage to Remängäsāu (see bl. 25), the Ngirturóng of a Iméúngs, a brother of Gómogobai, the wife of Gókëbai a Ibëdul II (At. 1).

To blai Tëgëkí belong 2 keblīl, their names are a Nglás and Ngārumáog.

a Nglás has the following plots of land (right side):

- | | |
|---|-------------|
| 1. a Ibedagál (see At. 2 Gen. III Ngiraibedagal) | 4. Goiekóek |
| 2. a Idodongasi | 5. Térëu |
| 3. Pegod | |

Ngārumáog has the following (left side):

- | | |
|---------------------------------------|-------------------|
| 1. Ngarumáog | 4. a Ubai |
| 2. a Ului (see blai 11) | 5. a Imedú |
| 3. a Imeráp | 6. Bítalpelú |

The mesëi-taro patches have the following names: 1. Ngilúës, 2. Maulekíkt, 3. Gareuákl, 4. Ngeriguëll, 5. Segeleóng, 6. Bítalulúi, 7. Tebláol, 8. Telegír, 9. Ideldelógël, 10. Ngeremegeróis, 11. Gobóel, 12. a L'lúel, 13. Bútilei, 14. Delúi. Nr. 1. belongs to Ngiratëgëkí, 2. and 7. to Regekemúr (blai 11 a Ulúi); 10. and 11. are abandoned.

blai nr. V. Ruseblūk +

Title: ♂ Klotráol, ♀Sómug.

The house does not stand any more; it was situated on the eastern end of the village on a small hill (see map), which now belongs to the Catholic Mission. Thus, Tem Góbak, (At. 3 Gen. V) from the a Idíd line, could not built any more when he became Klotráol, despite his wealth and even though he wanted to. He is generally called Góbak, because he is Góbak rabāu (nr. I) from Ngarabāu in Ngaregolóng, as well as Góbak raiüóng nr. II of Ngarekobasáng, incidentally at the same time an office, because the master of the house was installed as deputy of a Ibëdul in the seditious village (see above p. 211). Thus, Góbak had also three titles.³⁰⁹

He was married four times and adopted the three-year-old boy Golmetelél from ♀Taldil (At. 1 Gen. VI). In 1911, when Regúgër Láug became a Ibëdul, Tem Góbak followed in the position of rubak nr. III a Regúgěr. In 1914, he had a blai with five doors built in Ngaramerúngil.

Concerning the story of Ruseblūk, which once reigned over the east of Goréör which was called Ngaruseblūk, just like Rubásăg over the west, see history of Goréör.

blai* nr. VI Gětět +.

Title: Ngiragětět, ♀ a Tmíkou.

The house has disappeared: on the plot of land stands now blai a Dngér (44) and blai a Ubetáoer (43). In blai a Dngér the descendants of Tmíkou Petói, who herself lives in a Imül in a Imelĭk, namely her daughter Gongelípěl and her small daughter Ngírúr. A relative of Petói by the name of Lungis is now master of the house a Dngér; he also holds the title Ngiragětět.

A rubak a Rdeál from Ngaragětět married Morúpélau (Merúpélau), but soon she left him (KUB. V p. 62). Ibēdul 9 Ngiragosarei married one Tmíkou (see At. 2 Gen. IV and bl. 26).

blai* nr. VII. a Ingeáol (Figure 48).

Title: ♂ Rubásăg, ♀ Gógöp.

The blai is stands in the western part on the southern edge of the street. Right behind it, the landscape drops down to the mangrove swamp. In the west there is a cooking house and in the east a small ulangáng-spirit house (see pict 48).

In 1901³¹⁰, Rubásăg, the master of the house, was a dignified old gentleman, though as a newly rich he had to suffer a lot from the other rubak. His name was Rongsul and he came from Ngarsúl where he also had a house. It was rumored that he descended from the foreigners in Ngatanggau (see story 160 about Kesebokú ra Dengasík). Actually he should have been nr. X, but a Ibēdul made him nr. VII, because of his efficiency; he died in 1911 and Rekesiváng Moāi from blai VIII became Rubásak of blai VII.

The ♀title Gógöp was held by an old woman in Ngarmíd. The family seems to have died out. The wife of Rubásag, the woman of the house, Diraingeáol³¹¹, was a woman from Melekéiok. Her name was Galagasél and she held the title a Ugelióu from blai VIII (see plate 1). Their marriage was without any children.

About the importance of Rubásăg as the sovereign over the western part of Goréör, called Ngaramangágěd, see history of Goréör (above p. 213).

Relatives of the blai visit a cave in Ngaramíěg, a deserted place in a Mototói, in order to lay down their offerings there (see Vol. 1 p. 201, footnote 1).

Figure 48. Blai nr. VII a Ingeáol with as mall ulangáng-spirit house and cooking house in Goréör. A. B.

blai nr. VIII. Ngardëngól +.(right next to it blai Dukl + from keblīl of bl. II.)Title ♂: Rekesiváng, ♀ a Ugelióu.

This blai was situated in the western part near the trailhead Tóběd, north of the village road. In 1910, Moāi (At. 4 Gen. V) owned the male title. The housewife was Klërang (At. 3 Gen. VI). They lived in blai a Itagerengél. The beautiful Moāi (plate 13²) was one of my informants, besides the title Rekesiváng he also held the title nr. II Rángem from a Iebúkūl. After Rongsūl's death in 1911 he received the title Rubásăg (bl. VII). Before, when he was 60 years old, he was considered "too young" for it.

The goddess of the house is Okiú a megú from Ngaregëu (see Vol. 1 p. 200, footnote 4 and story 157 and 158), who appeared to people in their dreams in the form of a beautiful woman. When the island had been taken, her people from bl. VIII left her there. galíd Ngirukdápěl found her and took her as his wife. Around 1880, the last priestess adopted the five-year-old boy Rūngūl and brought him up. Then one of her daughters, Gëbil morórou (compare story 58), began to prophecy saying that the boy had been hers already before. So the family was now 8 heads strong and offered this amount of ulogóug (roasted coconuts) to the goddess.

In place of the old blai there is now a new one, which was built by a German. In this blai the woman Ngeribóngěl lived together with her son Walter (At. 3 Gen. VII). All three came to Germany when the war began.

blai nr. IX. MerīlTitle ♂: Ngiramerīl, ♀ a Guóděl'lăgád.

The blai is situated on the main road in the south-west of rubak-bai Meketī. In 1910, the master of the house, Ngiramerīl, was Skílang who was married to ♀ Ngatuāi. She had one daughter Ugeiliāu♀.

The woman Lúkēs (At. 3 Gen. IV) belongs to Ngiramerīl, she is the mother of Góbak from bl. V and the sister of a Ibědul 11 and 12.

blai nr. X. Těgamdínġ.Title: ♂ a Kldngūl, ♀ a Dngesík.

The western neighbor of bl. VII is a Ingeáol. It has a small ulangáng-spirit house in the east and a cooking house in the west.

In 1910, Ngirangaskeróu was master of the house; he was married to a Ngatuát, a sister of Dogodesáng (At. 4 Gen. V) from Pelíliou. The marriage was without any children. a Isoēi from Goréör was adopted, with one son Remegél (4—6 y.). Ngiragaskeróu came as a friend of Rubásăg Rongsūl from Pelíliou to Goréör (see bl. VII).

There are 6 brothers and sisters who belong to Ngaregól on Pelíliou:

- a) ♂ Ngirangaskeróu (see above), II. marriage with Korong from a Meungs; 2 children.
- b) ♂ Ngiradōgól, unmarried in Pelíliou.

- c) ♂ a Ugérpelau, marriage to Gobuokal from Ngasiás, 2 children.
- d) ♀ Kabang, marriage to ♂ Gaibai in Ngardolólok, many descendants.
- e) ♀ Talmóng, marriage to Ngirabád in Ngarekeúkl, 1 son.
- f) ♀ Diratáog, childless.

blai* 11. a Ulúi +

in the southern taro patch.

Old title: ♂ a Remelīk.

The owner is now Regekemúr³¹² from bl. IV Tëgëkí. Regekemúr is selected from the keblīl and can live on any of the six lots of land on the left side Ngārumáog. As until recently only a Ulúi still had a house, he lived here. His taro patches see also bl. IV. blai a Ulúi was situated in the middle of the taro patches in the south of the village; now it has also fallen into ruin.

blai* 12. Bútilei.

Title: ♂ Golepelúl.

In 1909, the house still stood in the mangrove swamps, north of the beach trail between Săgămús and a Delúi. In 1910 the new blai was built south of the trail on the slope. In the west of it blai Gelabáiēd from the keblīl of bl. II was situated. A small spring is near the house.

Keúkl Gongērúng, the son of Róis (At. 4 Gen. V) was master of the house. His wife was Klóuldil from Ngarárd; her sister Kekeréldil (both were twins) married Togúr from Ngabúkēd; son Petel.

blai* 13. Tamarikél.

Title: Mílong. Owner: Mad ra gotolóiög (see bl. 29).

Mad is here a title for small chiefs as messengers and distributors of food. In 1910, ♂ Goukerdéu nr. 18 had it.

Descent from Dirangēlókblai, who seems to have been a stranger.

♀ Dirangēlókblai, marriage with the Spaniard Ngirangēlokblai in Tageitóng (ship)

a) ♀ a Ikeúng, marriage with Ngirabarák in Ngarmíd

2 sons Ngiragorágēl and Kerul died,

as well as a daughter Gëbirisóng

b) ♀ Kuóir, daughter Gálilai (see bl. 45) and son Gomangkár

c) ♀ a Nglás +, marriage with a Ltebángēl Ngiragumeráng (see bl. II Melekéiok) a') ♂ Ngirangaráng +

b') ♀ Mogóng

♂ Goukerdeu³¹³, 1. marriage with ♀ Kalaiáng +

♂ a Iluóng +

2. marriage with ♀ Sároi +

♀ Taru

♀ Meketéket

3. marriage with ♀ Magalbél from Ngarbagagéd adopted ♀ Dirugóp, marriage with ♂ Rueteĩ in Ngarbagéd

Siábal, who has foreign blood, as plate 13² shows, also belongs here.

blai 14* +. Title: Repegál.

House in Goréör is no longer there. Ráelblai in Iebúkũl is a substitute. The owner is Dérābai (see introduction to a Iebúkũl).

blai 15. Metúkěr.* Title: Pauderáng.

In 1910 the owner was Ugél Sengai. The house is next to the women's bathing place Kesól.

blai 16* +. House no longer there; belongs to blai II. Title: Goruák. Owner Mudelóng (see bl. VI and 44)

blai 17. a Ibaĩ.* Title: Děél.

In 1909 the owner was Remeráng Ngiráibai, whose sister Taméi died without any children. As a Imetúkěr his brother Malautói was the 4. uriúl rubak (nr. 15) from Melekéiok. Děél had 2 wives. 1. ♀ Diraměáng from Ngarmíd, whose son Tageitóng married the Pelíliou-woman Ngāseiár. 2. Kungil from Ngarbagéd, childless.

blai 18* +. House no longer there. Title: Tangátěl.

Owner Goukerdeu (see bl. 13); bestowed by blai Ngais in Ngarekesauáol.

blai 19* +. House no longer there. Title: Máķāmad (compare bl. 40).

Owner Gádłbai ra ngěsebúng from bl. III.

blai 20. a Irágěl* +. Title: Ugérěrák.

The place is situated on the main road in the south, opposite of the junction with the path which comes up from the landing place Săgāmús, between blai VII and IX. Here stood the bai-like house (similarly in Ngarbagéd, a Iráĩ, etc.) of the demon Ugérěrák, whose name is at the same time the title nr. 20. It is quite strange that Goréör has placed its powerful village-god in the 20th position, as if to subjugate him as uriúl rubak. Of course the priestess lived in the house. The last one was called a Ugelióu³¹⁴ and came from bl. II, which is why at the distribution of money Ngiraikelau pocketed the share of a Ugérérák. Some legend-stones are at the house, such as Duréör (see above p. 206).

blai21.Keklau.

Master of the house ♂Máriur (At. 3 Gen. VI), he is considered to be one of the successors of the high chiefs.

blai 22. aItúngël, situated in the west of the trailhead Tobed, on the grassland along the road to Madalai, where the path forks off to Ngarbagéd. Title: a Isoei.

In 1910 the master of the house was ♂a Isoei (At. 1 Gen. V), marriage with 9 Samoi from Ngarakeukl, who had 11 children.

- | | |
|---|-------------------------|
| a) ♀Goteril (pregnant), marriage with the Chamorro Sus in Ngarekobasáng | |
| b) ♂ Ngirabúng (18 y.), marriage with Nglódăg (Ngitěgóp) in Ngarbagéd | |
| c) ♂ + | h) ♂ Remegél 6 y. |
| d) ♂ Ngirturóng 15 y. | i) ♂ Oál 3—4 y. |
| e) ♂ a Rengil 13 y. | k) ♀Ngardókou 2 y. |
| f) ♀Mataui 10 y. | l) ♂ 1 y. |
| g) ♂ Melimarang 7 y. | m) in expectance, 1910. |

blai23.Beréngës, situated south of the western trailhead Tóbéd.

Title: ♂a Ugél.

Master of the house a Nggěđd +. I. marriage with ♀Gorágěl + II. marriage with ♀Melekóiúngil (At. 4. Gen. V).

blai24. a Ivotogóng, opposite of bl. VII, situated in the north of the main road.

In 1860, a negro with the name James Gibbon from St. Kitts in the West Indies settled in Goréör (see Vol. 1 p. 136; according to Capt. KURTZ already in 1857). + Feb. 8. 1904.

∞♀a Ivukei from Ngěruluóběl (+ 1908)

- a) ♀Laisang, marriage with Ngirameriáng nr. IV from Ngarbagéd
b) ♀ William, in 1910 Ngiraivotogóng, my interpreter (born in 1866)
I. marriage with ♀Rur from a Ulimáng

- a) ♂Harry, + 7 years old
b) ♂Ngitěgóp, born ca. 1895, marriage with ♂a Umáng (At. 4 Gen. VI)
c) ♂Karl, born ca. 1900
d) ♂James lives with Laisang (see above)

II. Marriage with ♀Ngardókou (At. 3 Gen. V)

childless, adopted ♂Sebald, born ca. 1908, son of ♀Ngēlengi³¹⁵

the first adopted child died (at Gómogobai bl. 25)

c) ♀Kēri (Karoline), marriage with Góbakraiebúkūl

d) ♂Walter (in Yap), born ca. 1870.

Living in the house a Psis from *a*Irāi, see 4. female club nr. V (compare rub. nr. VIII from Ngabiúl p. 28).

blai* 25. Magalbáng.

The family belongs to bl. II.

Beautifully situated blai with a cooking house to the left (west) of the path leading down to Săgămús. As the ground drops away steeply there is a high stone wall in front of the house in order to offer a flat exit.

The female owner of the house was ♀Délilau. She had a relative Děél (see bl. 17), who had married ♀Ngasagadíl from Ngarmíd, who gave birth to a daughter Matadóng (12—14 y.). Děél was considered Ngiramagalbáng. He was a half-cast.

Origin and descendants of the honorable woman Délilau, which I frequently saw as my neighbor in a Dngöróngěr, can be seen in At. 2 Gen. V—VII. Here is another information.

♂a Regúgěr, later a Ibědul 9 +, marriage with Délongai +, niece of Ngirameléngěl (see At. 2 Gen. IV; see also bl. 26).

a) ♂Líok Mílong, marriage ♀a Uldékěl (At. 4 Gen. IV)

b) ♀Gómogobai, marriage with a Ibědul II (At. 3 Gen. IV)

c) ♂Bisuk +

d) ♂Remanga sau³¹⁶ +, marriage with Gadángěl (see bl. IV; first marriage of

e) ♀Délilau³¹⁷Ngitěgóp [both of them At. 1 Gen. V)

Descendants At. 2 Gen. VI.

blai* 26. Mílong (plate 10⁴)

on the road to Meketí next to bl. IX. The owner is a Ibědul's son Ngiruturóng.

Master of the house was Toruál, with the nickname Goběrdóng (At. 5 Gen. V; see there the marriages with a Isikl and Táldil).

Toruál came from Keklāu. After this place had been destroyed his mother Lólemei moved with her sister Pegói to Goréör where the latter married Kuēi from bl. II (At. 5 Gen. IV).

♀Délongai a Tmíkou belongs also to bl. 26 (see bl. VI and 25), she married Ngiragösärëg, a Ibëdul 9 (At. 2 Gen. IV).

blai* 27. Gomtilóu.

Master of the house was ♂a Ulúi +; marriage with R'ros (At. 4 Gen. V).

blai* 28. Găoáng belongs to the kebl̃l of bl. II and is situated behind it. Original building of Ngiraikelāu.

Master of the house Ngatapalāu (At. 1 Gen. V), the supposed successor to the throne. Marriage with ♀Ngatagëiár, daughter of ♀Ngatagelemáng from the a Ikelāu-family (bl. II) and of Lulk of Ngarekobasáng, grand mother ♀Gomerírs.

♀Gomerírs

♀Ngatagalemáng, marriage with ♂Ngiarlúlk in Ngarekobasáng

a) ♀Ngatagëiár, marriage with ♂Ngatapalāu

b) ♀Klong

c) ♂Maisesíl.

blai* 29. Gotolóiög, probably the Gotólol mentioned on p. 213, the original house of a Idíd. It belongs to the kebl̃l of bl. I. This solitary house is situated near the mangroves behind a Idíd. Concerning its former inhabitants see bl. VIII. Title Mad at bl. 13 Tamarikél.

blai* 30 +. Búög, formerly situated behind a Idíd nr. I.

blai* 31 +.a Ibaï, formerly situated behind a Idíd nr. I.

blai* 32. aItagerengél, situated between bl. I and II, a little bit towards the south.

Master of the house Moai Rekesiváng nr. VIII, who lived here because Ngardengól nr. VIII was in ruins.

blai* 33. Góbakëtél, situated behind bl. IV and in the east of bl. III Ióulidíd.

Well known because of Ngiragóbakëtél, the last offshoot of the older a Idíd-family (see bl. nr. III), whom the house gave his name. Toktok, the master of the house, received his name from Doctor SEMPER, who stayed here in 1862.

♂ Toktok, I. marriage ♀Ogăp +

II. marriage ♀Losí (At. 2 Gen. V).

blai* 34. a Ilangabáng +, was situated north of the main road, opposite bl. I.

blai* 35. Mesungíl +, was situated north of the main road, opposite bl. IV.

blai36. Golngabáng lies on the corner of the main road and the road down to a Delúi. One cooking house and an ulangáng-house are standing nearby (figure 11³).

In 1910, the master of the house was Regúgěr Láug Semélemog (At. 3 Gen. IV) from bl. III, who lived here because Iólulídíd was in ruins. The house belonged to his wife Rois (At. 4 Gen. IV). The name Golngabáng is also mentioned in chant 204 verse 39.

blai 37. a Itúngělbai, to the east of bl. 36.

Master of the house Gomankár (At. 1 Gen. V); grandmother a Iseměi^{bl.} 39.

Marriage with Tumakréng (without any children).

blai 38. Ngělēngí, in the east of the side road to the bathing place Kesól, belongs to blai 40 Gěgeráng.

blai 39. Tăgăbóeōt belongs to Těgěkí (bl. IV), opposite of it, on the other side of the road, in the south of the women's bathing place Késol. It is slightly in the back of the main road. In front of the house is the big burial place of the a Idíd-family, just like in front of bl. I.

Inhabitant ♀ a Iseměi (see bl. 37).

blai 40. Gěgeráng, on the main road in the east of bai a Dmăsăg.

Here lived a Tkúk, the Regúgěr ra Těgěkī (bl. IV), who belonged to a Idíd I. But his father came from a Ingeáol (bl. VII), he gave him the land and Gopkál, who still owns it received it from him (At. 4 Gen. VI). She married the recent master of the house a Tkél, brother of the recent Ngiraikelău (At. 2 Gen. V).

Inhabitants of the house: Kálei see bl. 41, further the a Idíd-woman Mesúngil³¹⁸ with her daughters Măgudrěngŭl and Dirakerekerīl (At. 4 Gen. V and VI); ♂ Măkămad, who is said to have come from a Nínigo-woman (Bismark-Archipelago) (see 2. men's club nr. V) and finally Golikóng of a Iebúkŭl.

blai 41. Mokiróng, related to bl. III, lies behind bl. 42.

One ♂ Regúgěr ra mokiróng is claimed, as well as a ♀ title Diramangiaŭ (see bl. II) Keráskēs³¹⁹ (At. 2 Gen. IV) belongs here as well.

A nephew of Keráskēs is Rěkamiung a Rduláol nr. I of Iebúkŭl, who was married with ♀ a Ingeáol, a daughter of Ibědul II (At. 3 Gen. IV).

♂ Gomóngolbai from Ngardmău lived in the house; marriage with ♀ Ióulsău, another daughter of Ibědul II (At. 3 Gen. V).

Three female ancestors Diramangiaŭ are mentioned here:

One ♀ Diramangiaŭ Bengkol, marriage with ♂ a Rěngěgěl in Ngarekeai see bl. VIII a Imeúngs.

//Krämer, Palau Vol. 2. Plate 14.//

1. Girl from Ngērupesáng.

2. a Ikelgáng (Gor. At. 2 Gen VI) †

3. Ngeribóngēl (Gor. At. 3. Gen. VII) and Diragóng Táldil (At. I. Gen. VI)

4. a Iskl (Gor. At. 3. Gen. VI).
Ritong from the island Merír and daughter Gomaimelē Adopted to Rub. No. II

Another ♀Diaramangiaū

a) ♂Ngiraskobong Rogúls

b) ♂Gongětíu, marriage with ♀a Umád +

a') ♂ Gomak (4. club nr. III)

b') ♀Diraiuóng Dirangēsileóng, marriage with ♂a ItpíkNgira-

[ngēsileóng in Pelíliou

c') ♂ Kálei, marriage with ♀Dibúk³²⁰ from bl. 13

a") ♀Teragól (4. 9 club nr. VII)

b") Kútei Dirauldékl (adopted from ♀Íoulsau — see above)

A third ♀Diaramangiaū + son ♂Kěrai,

↓ marriage with ♀Remúng

♀ a Riaur (see 2. ♀club nr. VI)

blai 42. Sug (belongs to bl. VI), lies on the main path east of bl. 40.

Belēsog, the predecessor of Ngiraikelāu, bought the land from the heirs of Gětēt for one galebúgep. Keraskēs is living here (see bl. 41 and 43).

Master of the house ♂a Ugélkomúr.

Ngiragětēt Beróbor, who owned the land, had 3 sons:

a) ♂Sokavál (Ngatkíp)

b) ♂Gongór

c) ♂a Ugélkomúr, marriage with Ngabád from Pelíliou (no children).

bl. 43. a Ubetáöer (belongs to bl. VI), east of bl. 42 and belongs to Keraskēs who lives there. This piece of land also belongs to the family Gětēt, who sold it to a Idíd.

♂Gádlbai +, marriage with Diraubetáöer from Ngēruluóběl blai 44. a Dngér behind bl. 43, nearby the fence of the mission's plot of land.

♂Belěágěl.

The land belongs to Gětēt, just like bl. 43 and 42.

Master of the house is Ngiragětēt Mudelóng 16 Lungīs (bl. VI), who lives here with his brother Kepelúng; his sister Gomoguóng is married in a Imeúngs*bl.* VIII (p. 147) (daughter Diraivóng); ♂ Lungīs had a daughter Díuk with 9 a Ibūg (see 6. ♀club nr. IX), — marriage with Malađát from Ngatēlngál (bl. 49).

blai45. aIrétăg.

Master of the house was Miskói, nicknamed after the white man Mister Coin in Malágal. ♂Miskoi from Ngarsúl, marriage with ♀Gálilai (see bl. 13) no children.

blai 46. Gamaimelēi.

Master of the house is Demémak from Ngeaur (relative Sagárimul 3. club).

Marriage with ♀Mogóng, sister of Mad Gobakelóu from Ngabúkēd. (Marriage with ♀Togúog At. 3 Gen. IV) ♀Kemtimt 10 years old.

blai 47. Ngél. (raw teleót blai).

Master of the house aItóla Itagregél, son of the predecessor of Rubásăg Rongsul (see bl. VII).

Marriage with ♀a Iegáng, daughter of Keráskēs; 5 children (At. 2 Gen. V).

blai 48. Kélebid.

Master of the house Ruetei, an illegitimate son of Róis Miráir (At. 4 Gen. V).

Marriage with Keremíud from Ngarbagéd; 5 children.

1. ♂Ngiramadalai, 2. ♀Diriai, 3. ♂Semélemog, 4. ♀Gamaugeregér, 5. ♀Diraivóng.

blai 49. aIkesil, east of Săgămús near the taro patch X Gongělípēl.

Master of the house Malaoát from Ngatēlngál. 2. marriage with ♀Díuk (see bl. 44)

1. marriage in Ngatēlngál; son Ngirudelsáng.

↓
 4 children in 1910

1. ♀Rétang, marriage with Silvester Oluál
2. ♂Ngirakamul 4—5 y.
3. ♂Ilapsis 2—3 y.
4. ♀Teláel 1—2 y.

2. a Iebúkūl (KUB.: Yebukul), same name as a Iebúkūl in Ngaregolóng (distr. I p. 29); both have an alliance with Ngaregamā i a neighbor of Goréör.

Description of the place (plan 26^a): When you turn on the eastern trailhead of Goréör called Ngaramasóngöp north towards the sea, after a few steps under the tall trees you reach the village a Iebúkūl. First you pass the rubak-bai A Raksíd, which is towered by a huge ukál'l-tree(plate 15²). A second bai B. is standing down there at the landing place called Gamáng, which you reach climbing down on the stone path. The view from here is Figure 49.³²¹

History: The place is closely associated with Goréör. Here are no special events recorded. A daughter of rub. I a Rduláol with a woman from the Ngáruangël-tribe married a Ibědul and became the ancestress of the new a Idíd-line (story 20). Concerning rub. II Rangém see story 134 and chant 200.

Privilege: People from Ngel 'lāu in Ngivál are allowed to take boats from here, in compensation for the change of money that a Ibědul did not fully return (see story 202).

Since olden times blai a T pang, which has fallen into ruin now, has the right to provide the messenger Dérābai for a Ibědul. Nowadays Dérābai is the 5. uriúl rúbak of

Figure 49. View from the landing place in Ngaregamaĩ towards the bridgehead Ngarekamaĩs. Goréör (see there); his sister Metěkákět being Dirasagepíd from Ngatkíp (see there) the 5th member of the female club Ngaraék from Goréör. Her father is Goldegól from Ngatkíp; her mother Maketáng comes from Iebúkūl. In 1910 she was married with a Iegádragamai from Ngaregamaĩ.

In former times a T pang belonged to rúbak nr. V from Goréör, Klotráol, who also owned the entire village-land, but when a Ibědul had risen, the latter took the house and the privileges and received tribute (tangét) from Iebúkūl instead of Klotráol. The title Sögölóng of blai a T pang is today with Ráelblai (nr. V); Dérābai is the higher of both titles, which Sögölóng takes over for business matters, as can be seen in chanty 195^b verse 4. a T pang is keblīl of a Idíd (see there). Concerning galíd a Guóděl see Ngarekesauáol.

Constitution of a Iebúkũl.bai l pelú (village house): A. Raksíd.galíd (god): a Guódě̃l (KUB.)klóbak (council): Ngaraksídfemale council: ar Guódě̃l'lăgád.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side);	ardil (women):
I	a Rdúláol	Báres	I	a Guódě̃l'lăgád
II	a Rangém	a Dmóng	II	title is missing
II	Tugěrúr	a Terekiáu	to I	" "
IV	Regětáog	Sěgősis	" II	" "
V	Sögőlóng	a Ráelblai	" I	" "
VI	Regokeáng	Gobegětakl +	" II	" "
VII	Búik Tugerúr	R'róngě̃l	" I	" "
VIII	Golikóng ³²²	—	—	" "
IX	Ngirangelkés	Melekéi	" I	" "
X	Mad ra gebau	a Gebau	" II	" "

2 blai-places that have fallen into ruin have to be mentioned: Ikekēmóngě̃l (11) and the before mentioned a T pang, next to the boathouse Gamáng, a blai Ngaramaráng near Ngarekesauáol also has to be considered. A men's club Ngaragosekěoákl lived in *bai*Gamáng(B) on the táog Gamáng. A second táog a Ilebaráng, where in former times also a bai was situated, is now deserted.

3. Ngaregāmai³²³ (KUB.: Arekamai)

lies on the northern coast of Gorė̃r, quite near to Iebúkũl and is bound to it by ties of friendship.

Description of the place (plan 26^a): When you walked from the eastern trailhead of Gorė̃r about 200 m to the east over the grassland, the trail turns to the north. After another 200 m over the grassland you reach the trailhead Ptelúl a garangórong, from where a 300 m long stone path leads down to the water; tall trees offer shade here.

Nearby at the landing place, elevated on the bank, rubak-bai A. Bai raipě̃lău lies to the left-hand side (in the west) and bai B. Kodelí down at the waterfront. A small mangrove belt, in the east with the channel Gokér where a Imangél fell (see above at Tukūr p. 202).

History: Friendship ties with a Iebúkũl in Ngaregolóng (see p. 29). The inhabitants originally come from the island Ngė̃regóng (see Vol. 1, p. 200 and plan 2j7°6'). Story 161 recounts how the priest Gobip, who had fled from Ngardolólók, had been taken by a boat from there to Ngaregāmai, thus galíd a Guóděi came to a Iebúkũl, Ngaregamāi, and Ngarekesauáol. a Ugélkeklāu is said to have seen to it that the move was done (see story 8). Also the people from a Ulong are said to have come here (KUB. I p. 36), as well as the ones from Pelugauár or Pelúgoár (Vol. 1, p. 200 and 201) which is probably indicated by rub. III Ugérgěoár. A certain Ngiramoāi exists also in Ngarsúl (chant 199).

Constitution of Ngaregamāi.

bai l pelú (village house): A. Bairaipēlāu galíd (god): a Ugél'lěgalíd (a Guóděi KUB.)

klóbak (council): Ngaraipēlāu

female council: Ngásekmlál

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs)	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Iegád ra gāmāi	Gěklbāi	a Ugélěbil ra kúmēr
II	Gobagád	Gokěláng	Gobagád l dil
III	a Ugérgěoár	Ngelsei+	Dirarúr
IV	Gěrfu	a Rois	a Ugélěbil ra rois
V	Ngiramoāi	a Moāi +	Diramoāi
VI	Golikóng	a Urík +	a Guóděi'lěgád
VII	Ultírakl	a Ngeáðel +	Dirapekú
VIII	Goilál	Ngěruár	Dirurár
IX	Mad ra tmedeláng	Ngaraměáng +	Diraměáng
X	Ngiragopědí	Gopědí +	Diragopědí

Further blai: 11. Delili, 12. a Siaū, and 13. Ngurugěog.

	gálděbegěl (club):	bai (clubhouse):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
♂	Ngaraugarm +	Ngaramangělíl +	Ngaramangělíl	Left
♂	Ngaragosóngd +	Kodelí	Kodelí	Right
♀	Ngaradongesei	—	—

4. Ngarekesauáol (KUB.: Arakasoáol).

Description of the place (plan 26^a): Situated on the southern coast of Goréör, in the east of the main village with the same name. You walk 500 m from the trailhead, slowly mounting to the foot of the hill Túkũr (after 200 m the trail bends to the north to Ngaregamāi); its story is mentioned above on p. 202. Before you reach this one [hill], you leave the trail to Ngarmíd that continues straight, always hiking in the sun, you turn right (south).

Already after 200 m you reach under some trees on the right (west) side of the road blai nr. II Ngaramel'lóng; from here you walk downhill on the winding 500-meter-long stone path. Halfway through you reach rubak-bai A. Galángěl (nice view of the Gogeál, see plate 15⁴) on the east side of the road; below at the waterfront is a boathouse.

In 1910 a Japanese lived in blai nr. VIII, married to a good looking Palauan woman.

History: Story 161 mostly takes place here, as has already been mentioned at a Iebúkúl and Ngaregamā i, whereas for the nearby Tukur-Hill the legendary aspect has been pointed out.

bl. I is keblīl of a Idíd in Goréör.

Constitution of Ngarekesauáol.

bai l pelú (village house): A. Galángěł.
(a Guóděł KUB.)

galíd (god): Gomís (= Ngurusár)

klóbak (council): Ngaragalángěł.

female council: *ar Tógědměás*³²⁴

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	ardil (women):
I	Gád l bai	a Tmedbád	I	Rimú
II	Golikóng	Ngaramel'lóng	II	Garamál
III	a Rgad dēsóměł	a Ivěáoěł	to I	—
IV	a Miál	a Ivěsei	" II	—
V	Gorkúl	Tagukál +	" I	—
VI	a Rekamiúng	Ngardiděkéd +	" II	—
VII	Ngiradungáng	Dúgang +	" I	—
VIII	a Ngartútěł	a Iríkl	" II	—
IX	Mad rangāis	a Ngāis +	" I	—
X	Ngireklsóng	Ngareklsóng +	" II	—

The táog Ngadegěíběł has the same name like the rubak-bai in Ngarbagéd.

5. Ngarbagéd "New City" (KUB. Arapakéd)

consisting of 2 sides: the upper land "bab l pelú" and the lower land "ióul pelú", situated on the southern coast of the island Goréör, south south east of the settlement Goréör. The rubak-bai of both places are at a distance of about 1¹/₂ km from each other. The western-most blai of Goréör is only 600 m from the most northern blai of Ngarbagéd.

Description of the place (plan 26^b): The stone path starts in the south of the swell that has been pierced by the government. It traverses the settlement, slowly dropping, first to the southeast, then turning abruptly to the west at rubak-bai A. Ngaděgěiběł, then bending again to the south, so that the form of a nose with a front and an upper lip develops. From the stone foundation of bai l pelú a 30-meter-long, narrow stone path leads first to the north, then down to the east into a 7-meter-deep funnel, where the walled bathing hole Ngatúrur³²⁵ is situated; in the north of it a walled well o with good water is located.

In the east a trail leads again up to the height, to bl. II Madulěáng and IX Gotěvőt. Quite near to it, only 50 m from the edge of the basin, lies an old ritual place is situated in the bushes. Here galid-bai a Iesógol (D) stood; in 1910 only ruins were left. It was a blai in the form of a bai, about $3\frac{1}{2}$ m deep and 5 m long, with 5 major beams, a so-called telegeiër-bai, like in Goréör, a Iraî, Melekéiok, Ngátpang etc.

Plan 26b.

In front of the blai 2 stone pavements (gólbed) were situated, with their long sides next to each other. Because god a Ugél'lëgalíd allowed paintings only on his blai and on the rubak-bai, the other bai are without any decoration. The boats had to be painted somewhere else, etc. The forest Ngaragabál is situated in the north of this place, east of the main road of Goréör (see story with the same name 154).

At the southern trailhead, which drops steeply towards the water, the club-bai B. Iagălú³²⁶ was situated. In June 1909 it had been demolished and reconstructed 50 m higher up. Next to the water below, bai C. Ngamókł is east of the boathouse and landingplace Ngatkédăm. Both are of a very simple kind (kldók) without any paintings because of the village god (see above).

Figure 50. The bathing pond Ngatúrur in Ngarbagéd, seen from the west.

In the west of the northern part of the stone path, only a few steps from the saddle of the nose, lies a 5-meter-high hill on the grassland, it is called Bukl ra Desekél. It is said that it was built for Rióbog, rubak nr. I from Desekél, who lived on top of it.

In former times Desekél, also called Nglailkéd (see story 195^b), was mostly situated west of today's Ngarbagéd and must have been rather important, because it had táog Ngaramesekíu³²⁷ in the south, and on the northern coast taog Ngurubúl. Otherwise nothing more is known about this place, but what has been mentioned in story 195^a, where it is said that instead of the old Desekél the new place bagés l pelú, the present-days Ngarbagéd has been founded.

Privilege: Blowing the conch shells during the ruk-dance (compare Ngërupesáng) (KUB. p. 111). Strict seclusion of the dancers, locked away for one month and enclosure of the bai (KUB. II, p. 105 and 106).

History: As mentioned above, people of Gobágēlbagēlsekérél newly founded the settlement after the destruction of the old village Desekél, therefore it is called bagés l pelú "New City". The hero seems to have been the first priest of a Ugél'lēgalíd who is also venerated in Ngērupesáng. The ties with it are so strong that both could communicate even when Goréör and Melekéiok were at war (see story 195^a). It is also important for the village how blai Ngaragābál and after its extinction bl. IV Meriáng had strong ties with bl. II a Ikelāu in Goréör and bl. I Gomrekóngēl in Ngarekobasáng (story 154). But bl. V Ngētēgēsóng became keblīl of a Idíd in Goréör.

More and more, Ngarbagéd became an important place due to its rub. I Melimaráng, who was a descendant of a Ugēlpelú and in former time had the name Iegád ra ibiógōl (I also heard ribúkūl), which is now still at nr. X. Story 153 tells how this happened because of the agreement of the speakers.

Diripkál nr. VI also comes from Ngarbagéd ; he is named after the cap of the mushroom Dmageī ra ripkál (see Vol. 1 p. 190 and plan 1, secondary plan a), the súmog (= tét shrine) of this woman.

Constitution of Ngarbagéd.

bai l pelú (village house): A. Ngadēgēibēl.

galíd (god): a Ugél'lēgalíd.

klóbak council : Ngarangadēgēibēl.

armeāu (people): a Tumúk.

female council: ar Nelítēl.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	ardil (women):
I	Melimaráng	Ngeribúkūl	I	Bagéklđl
II	Ngiraibúög	Ngaramaduléáng	II	a Mlageī
III	Ngirakēřekúr	Kēřekur ³²⁸	to II	Dirakēřekúr
IV	Ngiramériáng	Meriáng	" I	Diluáng
V	Dingeliús	Ngētēgēsóng	" II	Diradelbógōl
VI	Ngiripkál ³²⁹	Ngeripkál +	" I	Diripkál
VII	Ngirutungelí	Ngurutungelí +	" II	Dirutungelí
VIII	Ngiragolsúgōl	Golsúgōl +	" I	Diragolsúgōl
IX	Dingeliús ra gotēvōt	Gotēvōt	" II	Gabás ra maduléáng
X	Búik iegád ra ibiógōl	Ibiógōl	" I	Gabás ra ibiógōl

There are also 10 uriúl rúbak (secondary chiefs).

The other blai are the following:

11. Gomagáng	(teleot) to I (bitang)	16. Gáiep	to I
12. Gemaungarmíd	(")"II	17. Takeilói	(teleót) " I
13. Sórok	" II	18. Ngalsáld	" I
14. Gólblai	" I	19. Suógol	" I
15. a) Ngarmagímag	" I	20. Mëkúl	" II
b) Paparamagímăg ³³⁰	+ " II	21. Ngaragăbál	+

6. Ngariélěp.

also pronounced Ngariél'ěp (KUB.: Ngariélep, galid Amongasimmer), situated east of Ngarekesauáol and of the gogeál island Guát on the southern edge of the island Goréör. In 1910, there were still 3 partially deserted houses, situated on the waterfront in one row from W to E. 1. a Ibaĩ, 2. Mangaderáol, 3. ?

blai Ketīt belongs to the keblīl of bl. II a Ikelāu in Goréör. Here in Ngaraketīt Gomulkěam is said to have lived. He is mentioned in the story 17^a about Típětip ak mĕg, who exchanged her magic Gomsaubúkl against the one of the coconut Ulogóug, which caused him to perish. This magic Ulogóug had come from the Tekiělmaláp, the spirits of Ngeráod, to Ngaraketīt in Ngariélěp and the depth of its channel there is ascribed to the use of the magic nut, which has already been mentioned on p. 206 at Goréör bl. 20.

The palm-wine-cutters Gatítěl and Galímongál also lived here; the latter discovered the glowing pearl shell in the Toágělmid (see story 14 about a Tmělógod), with which he wanted to illuminate the roofed village.

Finally KUB. VIII p 180 mentioned the story about the dugong, which takes place here. A woman went to the taro patch, while her pregnant daughter, who had been locked in the house, ate all the kěam-fruits. When the old woman returned and scolded her, because she was thinking that the fruits were harmful to her, the daughter ran away and turned into a sea cow. Even today it is still called dil a Ngariélěp, because in the mouth of the animal there is a swelling in the form of a kěam-fruit.

The constitution of the village was no longer known.

7. Ngarebóděl (KUB.: Rbódol)

situated in the east of Ngaregamāĩ, on the northern coast of the island Goréör, on the mountain Ngurungevíkl's northern bare slope. The legend-stone of Běkěu rebóděl, a moonlike face with a lizard below (Figure 51), stands there nearly as tall as a man in the middle of the open countryside. The stone was a present of the people of Ngarárd in recognition of the galid's help; the galid lived in blai Ngerukói in Ngarebóděl. In addition in return people from Ngarebóděł received the privilege to take anything they liked while on a visit in Ngěóng (Ngabúkěd p. 50) (see story 50). Compare also Ngēsáng p. 61.

Fig. 51. The stone Běkěu rebóděł at Ngarebóděł.

Constitution.

bai l pelú (village house): Bedagál.

galíd (god): Bekěu rebóděł.

klóbak (council): Ngarabedagál.

female council: ar Tógěd mēás³³¹.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Ikéd	a Idóng	Guóděł'lagád
II	Melís	a Ibluk +	Delebúsěg
III	Gádlbai	a Iróměł	Guóděł'lagád rairómel
IV	Gadlbai ra táng	Ngetúngud +	Dir'rugěłěgíu
V	a Rugěłěgíu	Delbógěł +	Góbil ě bágěł
VI	Keúkl	Saregalíd +	—
VII	Goukerdéu	Gedúkl +	—

	gálděbegěł (club):	bai (club-house)	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
	Ngarbungungāu + Ngaragamáong +	Gamáong + "	Ngēsuleóng	right

In 1909 only 2 blai wereleft, I. Ngaraidóng and III Ngarairóměł; in 1910 the latter one was already deserted as well. The inhabitants of the island Merír (Merířl), which had been destroyed by a typhoon in 1906, were settled here (see Vol. 1, p. 158).

bl. II a Ibluk was kleblil of a Idid in Goréör. Its title-man Melís had to go into seclusion with the new a Ibedúl (see p. 213).

8. Ngarmíd (KUB.: Armid), (plate 15³) consists of two village parts, Regeiungël (N) and Remelik (S), named after both high chiefs.

Description of the place (plan 27): Lies in the extreme south east of the island Goréör in a hollow, which is bordered in the west by the mountains Ngurungevíkl and Nggeiángēs, in the east by a nearly 100 m high gogeál-face. In the basin where the boat harbor lies, the face has a small and deep sideways break, an exit to the east.

Plan 27.

The narrow channel for boats is passable at high tide, just like the mangrove channels, even though lime rocks form the border instead of salt-water bushes. On the northern edge a stone dam runs along. When you go, in-between the rocks, out from the inner boat-harbor, which runs dry during low tide and where the two club houses of the northern village part are situated, B. a Úgularíu and C. a Itúngělbai (Figure 52), then you are after a few minutes in the broad channel which separates Goréör from Babldáob. It is called To ágěl mid for Ngarmíd, in the legend also Ngaramage iug³³². The bridgehead Pipirói³³³ is situated at the exit, which is near the shore, because the deep water reaches here the gogeál-rocks. But in the interior of the basin you climb up 10 m to the west following a smooth winding stone path from the boat-harbor to bai l pelú A. Bágësis. It is situated in a bend of the path, because on the western gable of the bai the road forks to the south, whereas the other path ends after some 150 m further west, after which it continues as a footpath to Goréör. The path that branches off leads to the southeast, after passing the border stream Gëuáng in the village part Rëmelīk.

Figure 52. The inland water Ngarmíd with bai and boathouse Ugularíu and bai a Itúngělbai. In the background the bridge over the exit-channel.

Today, the southern part has shrunk and does not have a clubhouse anymore, even though the beautiful stone foundations of the former rubak-bai A'. Melei are situated in the street's southern angle, about 500 m from bai l pelú A. Ngarabágësis and indicate a great past. The southeastern road forms a hook by adding an approximately 100 m long piece of stone path to the end of the trail, in S-N direction. On the stone square A' stands a stone slab of Dirangarekesauáol with a big face and below a child (Figure 53). The way it is overgrown with ferns gives it a unique appearance. The legend reports: A woman from Ngarekesauáol came back from fishing and watched the ruk-dance. As she smelled of salt water and the dancers had to observe a salt-water taboo, she was so reviled that she with her child at the breast turned into stone.

Fig. 53. Stone Dirangarekesauáol in Ngarmíd, about 1 m high.

Incidentally, from the southern trailhead a good stone path leads about 300 m down to the water that lies there like a lake, because it is closed off from the sea by the gogeál-mountains. There on a beach, built on a stone foundation lies the only bai in the southern part, D. a Magáng. But this is not a painted bai made of boards, but a colorless house of natural wood, a bai l dórt (plate 15³). Thus, it is especially peculiar that, according to the information of the natives, in the year 1783 when WILSON was stranded on a Ulóng it was built with the help of shell adzes; then it was finished with iron tools.

History: It is child of a Guáp (story 2). In story 8 it is described how after their arrival in Tuápël near Ngurusár the people of a Ugélkeklâu, enticed the women of Ngarmíd with kites made of threads of hair; by whirling in the wind they gave the name Pipirói to the pier. The actual founding took place, when Gobágëlbagëlsekerél freed Goréör (see story 195^a). Rubak a Rëmelik, for whom the southern part has been named, won some land from the northern part by delivering women from Ngarbagéd a sâ u (see there). Like Ngarekobasáng, Ngramíd was an oppressor of Goréör (story 195^b) and was repulsed.

Concerning the destruction of Ngardolólók (story 161) Ngarmíd provided the great number of 10 kabékl-war canoes, a sign of its former importance, whereas today it has become quite unprepossessing.

It remains to be mentioned that galid Boi lived for some time in Ngurultágēl near Ngarmíd (story 11). In former times, during a dispute with a Ibēdul, Ngiraikeklāu of Goréör fled to bl. I Blósög (a wealthy house, see story 9) and stayed until the ransom had been paid³³⁴, just like before a Ibēdul 10 fled to bl. 13 Nguruköbēi (see Vol 1, p. 146).

Constitution of Ngarmíd.

N. Regēiúngēl.

bai l pelú (village house): A. Bágēsis. galíd (god): Úgēr a bágēsis (KUB.: Augélyiánget). klóbak (council):

Ngarbágēsis. female council: ar Tógēdméás³³⁵

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women)
I	a Regēiúngēl	a Blong (Blósög)	Gebir'rēgēiúngēl
II	a Guóng	Iebúkūl	a Petkí
III	Gābás	a Gēsēpērēs	Gēbil'lagābás
IV	Iegád	a Derebēi	Dil iegád
V	Golikóng	Ngēdelmóng	Dilolikóng
VI	Búik a gābás	a Ugeingél	Diraugelngél
VII	a Ibēdur'raidóng	a Idóng	Dil ibēdul
VIII	Dingeliús	a Iúngēl	Dil dingeliús
IX	Madrđerár	Ngardđerár	—
X	Pkul a gúdēl ³³⁶	(a Ingéáng)	—

Further blai: 11. Gogöbāi, 12. Golngauáol, 13. Nguruköbēi (see Ibēdul 10 p. 225), 14. Ngarakusuláng, 15. Skíbang.

	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
♂	Ngaratét l dúi	B. a Úgula ríu ³³⁷	a Úgula ríu	Left
♀	Ngaraíolt
♂	Ngaramekerēēl	C. a Itúngēlbai	a Itúngēlbai	Right
♀	Ngarager'roákl

S. Rěmelík.

bai l pelú (village house): A' Meleĩ +galíd (god): Sagáliángěd (KUB.: Sagályánget).klóbak (council): Ngaramelēĩ.female council: ar Tógědměás

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	a Rěmelík	Ngarukěpíd	a Guódě'l'lägád
II	a Tulík	Badurěáng + ³³⁸	Gěbil tulík
III	a Regělül	a Ipelau	Gěbil
IV	Gádlbai	Ngaramétrekáng +	a Ngmál'l
V	Gádlbai rangeruék	a Dims +	a Diúlaubogói
VI	Golikó raiptágg	a Iptágg +	Dilolikóng
VII	Ngiragabagáp	a Gabagáp +	Diragabagáp
VIII	Dingeliús	Ngarúděs +	Dil dingeliús
IX	Mad ra skelsól	Skelsól +	Kěmědángěl ³³⁹
X	galíd Sagáliángěd	—	woman lives in III.

Further blai: 11. Bangmák, 12. Deldápěl.

	gálděbegěl (club):	bai (clubhouse):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
♂	Ngaramangāĩ +	Mangāĩ +	Mangāĩ	Left
♂	Ngaregolěgěsěg +	a Magáng (kldok)	a Magáng	Right

9. Ngarbagéděsau³⁴⁰ +

a formerly important place situated on the other side of the northern swell of the Ngarmíd-Basin, on the northern bank of the island, where now is the grassland. In the east there is the lime-rock face, in the west about 1 km away is Ngarebóděl. From the mountain Ngurungevíkl you can look down on the place. Once upon a time the village was powerful and put the eastern part of Goréör under pressure, whereupon Klotráol united with Gobágělbagěsekerél and destroyed the place. The inhabitants fled to South-Babldáob. But it seems to have been settled again afterwards , because around 1800 Ngarbagéděsau provided 2 kabékl-war canoes (story 161) for the destruction of Ngardolólók by a Răklāĩ and a Ibědul. In 1900 it was already long since deserted.

The inhabitants of Ngarebekál, south of Ngarsúl, took refuge here and twice in Desekél (Ngarbagéd) after the repeated destruction of their place by a Ibědul.

//Krämer, Palau, Vol. 2. Plate 15.//

District Ngarkldéu.

1. Boathouse and Bai a Itáog in Ngatkíp. Bai Tongelói.

2. Rubakbai Raksid in a Jebúkūl.

3. bai l dort a Magáng from the year 1783 in Ngarmíd.

Gogeál Ngaláp.

4. Rubakbai Galángēl in Ngarekesauáol.

10. Ngarekobasáng, politically Moságěl (see story 195^b)

(MCCLUER: Arrakapasang, SEMP.: Naracobersá, KUB.: Ngarekobasánga).

Description of the place (plan 28^{a, b}): landing on the island coming from the government station Madalai, you choose the nearest táog a Il'íl, hidden in the mangroves. There lies the stone-trailhead Matpáng (story 195^b). From here a stone path leads to the west across the island between Rois Besáis and Rois Ketúnd, climbing and dropping to the village Ngarekobasáng, which is situated on the other side of the rise. On the height a stone path leads about 100 m to the foot of the mountain Ketúnd and to the "Upper Village" Bab l pelú. On the trailhead lies blai 19 a Irěbai. Walking down the main road, the "Road of the Chiefs" Gáděsúbak, you reach a stone square, an ilíud. The following story is closely connected with it:

a Ragabei from blai VI Godiláng had lost his gosisál, his "pawn" in form of the dried leaf of the almond tree (miěg), which he had received as security for some klúk-money that had been lent from Ngirangěsěgei, nr. I in Ngivál. Thus, according to the custom of the land, rubak nr. I Gaspángěl from Ngarekobasáng had to pay his creditor as a punishment a piece of klúk-money for loosing the gosisál. The chiefs sat on the stone path and each time when a men's club came as a messenger, each member of the gálděbegěl fetched a stone from the platform of the house Godiláng, in order to built the ilíud-platform, which plays such an important role in the history of the village, that the western táog and the bay received the name a Ilíud. — — —

South of the western trailhead, which in former times had been surrounded by 4 to 5 houses (Vol 1, p. 144), the small bai kldók C. Telkák l is situated, while bai B. a Ilíud is on the beach next to the boathouse with the same name.

A rubak-bai was no longer in existence.

History: Story 113 (see also a Uluáng p. 153) describes the friendship with Galěgúi in a Imelík. Already WILS. recorded the name Pedul for the island, which means "Head", thus he gave testimony for its importance, because the island and the village Ngarekobasáng can be considered equal. Indeed, this place governed Goréör for a long time. The men from Goréör lived here in order to learn until they were about 30 years old. As already mentioned and referred to in story 195, it was only under Gobágělbagělsekerél that Goréör got the upper hand and installed rubak nr. II Ngirangameúsog as a governor for a Ibědul. He is mentioned in story 207, and according to bl. II also called Góbak raiuóng³⁴¹. A so-called Góbak ra ulogotóng is already mentioned in story 12, where much is written about the old settlement, as well as in the before-mentioned story 168.

On p. 202 it was said about galid a Ugélkobasáděl that he lived on Rois Kobasáng and is mentioned in story 14. He is a son of Mlagél Latmikáik (story 3) and a brother of a Ugél kldéu.

Plan 28 a b c.

Constitution of Ngarekobasang.bai l pelú (village house): A'. Meseksít +.galíd (god): Ugél kobasádél.klóbak (council): Ngarameseksíkt(ar Gaspángěł).female council: ar Kídís.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang	ardil (women):
I	Gaspángěł	(Ngelūl)Gomrekóngěł	to I	Guóděł'lagád
II	Ngiramgemeúsog	a Iuóng	" II	Gopkál
III	a Rengil ra gěłúiel	Gěłúieł	" I	Ngěřěklibeĩ
IV	a Rengil ra gokeréng	Gokeréng +	" II	Diramengkí
V	a Ragabei ra pelú	I Iderebeĩ	" I	a Ikěám
VI	a Ragabei ra godiláng	Godiláng	" II	Diragodiláng
VII	Tpekríu l klóu	Tperepór	" I	Diltpekríu
VIII	Tpekríu l kekeréi	L'luál	" II	(Geremáng) a Idíd
IX	Bědúl ra lulk	Lulk	" I	Ngeremegěsěgás
X	Bedúl ra Iriáng	Lriáng	" II	(a Ibūg) Dir'regěkemúr

Another woman is also mentioned nr. XI and nr. XII as kěmědángěł (see Ngarmíd).

nr.:	uriúl rubak (secondary chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):
11.	Regěkemúr ra goliáng	Goliáng +	to I
12.	Regěkemúr ra ugelbáng	a Ugelbáng +	" II
13.	Ngira gorúkei	Gorúkei +	" I
14.	Ngira ngeremig	Ngeremīg +	" II
15.	Ngirugeráol	Ngarugeráol +	" I
16.	Ngira gokeréng	Gokereng +	" II
17.	Mad ra gaspángěł	—	" I
18.	Mad ra rós	Ros +	" II
19.	Ngirairěbaĩ	a Irěbaĩ	" I
20.	a Ugél kobasáděł galíd	—	—

Further blai: 21 a Imaderáng, 22. Tegěruúděs, 23. Metěulǒgól, 24. Mengeólt, 15. Matias, 26. Geluál.

Only 2 extended families (kleblīl) were there, the one of family I Siusikás and the one of family II a Ugelióu (compare tit. bl. VIII Gorěđr).

nr.:	gálděbegěł (club):	bai (clubhouse):	táog (channel)	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaraderípěk	B. a Ilíud	a Ilíud	right
II ♂	Ngaragametákl	C. Telkákł	Gegól	left
I ♀	Ngarasekoál
II ♀	Nragoálăg

11. a Meúngs (MCCLUER: Imungs, KUB.: Amyungs).

Description of the place (see plan 28^c): Situated on the northern coast. There on the beach is a wall with a crevice; behind it is the boathouse Ngardimengí. Next to it in the east is bai C. Úgulagaramál (bai l táog), behind it are the taro patches. On a footpath you walk inland and arrive at the head of the stone road, which is winding up to the stone square where bai l pelú A. Gëdip stood. All that is left is a tet-shrine of the village god. From here the stone path leads up to a height of about 20 m and on the grassland bai B. Ugularáel stands.

History: The inhabitants come from a Ulong (story 17^c), see also story 164 about Măluádlëgúr.

Constitution.

bai l pelú (village house): A. Gëdip +.

galíd (god): Ugér ě rák (see Goréör), (KUB.: Irarisóios).

klóbak (council): Ngarumleblógöl.

female council: ar Madedíng.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	ardil (women):
I	a Ugél	Tegeuár (a Tegoár)	I	a Ugélebil
II	Góbak	a Ultei	II	Bílung
III	Spesúngěl	Ngerukerdül +	to I	Goderaî
IV	Ngiragongór	Duilegútüm +	" II	Díliklep
V	Blitang	Taulpūk	"I	Gobegóu
VI	Ngiklep	Telemetáng +	" II	Dirariáng
VII	Ngeskesúk	Galilaî	" II	Gobagád
VIII	Ngiraruáng	Gamaupelaû	" I	Túrangmegád
IX	Gloikó ra tikei	Ngerukebaî +	" I	Rimu
X	Golikó ra ngírís	Lédës +	" II	a Irís

As nr. XI and XII for the chiefs and the women a Mad from family I and II (IV ♀) is mentioned, who alone have both kleblil Ngeregemís and Pelelai.

In 1910 there were some more blai: 11. Měkár, 12. Kúměr, 13. Bablituóng, 14. a Tabasál.

nr.:	gáldëbegěl (club):	bai (clubhouse):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
♂ II	Ngaragäreál ³⁴²	B. a Ugul a rael	Golekiúěl (?)	Left
♀ II	Ngaratatiróu
♂ I	Ngaralgédëged	C. Ugul a garamál +	Ngardi mengí	right
♀ II	Ngarapódës		(boathouse)

12. Ngeritáng +, on the hill with the same name, see story 152 and 202.

In former times many settlements were located on the gogeál-rocks and -islands between Ngarkldéu and Pelíliou. Ngarkldéu is nearest.

Ngarenggól +, on the Gogeál Ulupságěl, on the SE side.

Ugél pelú +, a reef island outside of Malágal harbor, on the detached reef, settled by a Ugélkekláu (story 8). Just like Ngáruangěl, Ngíptál, etc. it has been destroyed by a typhoon.

Both are mentioned in story 195 (see Vol. I p. 213 and plate 13).

The other settlements have already been mentioned above on p 5: Ngaremedíu, Ngaláls with Goikul, and Ngaramíeg, Pelúgauár, or –goár, Madaragárd, *a*Ulong, Ngëregóng, Ióu- and Bablomakáng, Ngemelís, Ngaregè u, etc.

District IX. Pelíliou³⁴³ (pronounced Pelílju)

(CANTOVA: Pelileu, MCCLUER: Pillilew, SEMP.: Peleliu, KUB.: Pliliu, v.M.M.: Ulu, MISS.: Pliliou).

Number of inhabitants 1.11.11: 594 (together with Ngeaur).

Number of villages: 5, uninhabited ones 10.

klóul pelú (main village): Ngardolólók.

rubukúl (its chief): Góbakraluíl.

aremeau (people): Godesángěl.

galíd (god): a Guóděl .

Political Groups:

Ngasiás, Ngarakeúkl and Gámliangěl form an alliance.

Description of the Land (see plan 29):

An elevated wooded limestone island, in the north it is gogeál-like ragged and mountainous. There is the flat and sandy "Sail-Point" Ngarabákál, where people, coming from the south, set sail³⁴⁴. Rois Gámliangěl, who has a brother on Babldáob (p. 173), has already been mentioned . In the south the island is flat and rises only a few meters above sea level . Remarkable is mostly the rocky point on the east coast : Pkul meseaur ("See Ngeaur"), Pkul gotrúgöl "The End", and point Besül; in between there are two bays with sandy beaches. Two mangrove waters cut inland here. One channel, called Desóměl, also Goleúl klúgös , cuts into the bay Ngardolólók , more about it in story 16, then the channel of Ngatanggäu, called Ngaramongós (see at Ngariáp) that is said to go all the way to the south of the island, something I have not investigated. There lies the secondary island Ngarmókéd, from where the souls of the dead, who are coming from Malágal and going to Ngeaur, jump into the sea.

Plan 29.

SEMPER described the island Pelíliou in chapter XI and XII in his book (see Vol. 140).

Concerning the existence of phosphate see Vol I p. 159 and at Ngeaur.

There are a lot of mosquitoes on the island (see story 163 and 175). According to my experiences, see part vol. I p. 170, also SEMPER II p. 180 is complaining about them. According to MÜLLER's Yap 2. Vol. p. 473 people from Yap went to Pelíliou in order to get a magic mosquito stone.

The island has no harbor and water. Only by entering the Dégēs-Entrance you can anchor in the north of the lagoon. IBARGOITIA landed in the south, in order to fetch some water, but without success (Vol. I p. 129). The best landing place is near Ngaregól on the west coast, from where SEMPER departed and where a Guóděl landed, as told in story 161. There he also created the spring Ngarabeóug in Ngatkauáng, which is now no more than a water hole.

Privilege:

The release of Ibědul see story 162. Is allowed to buy and wear the dugong-bracelet. The animal is absent in its waters.

Industry:

In former times bark-textiles, made from the inner bark of the bread fruit tree, have been produced here (KUB. VIII p. 299), see also tridacna-bracelets at Ngarabesul; production of sails.

History:

About the inhabitants that are darker here see part IV Anthropology. Just like Ngaregolóng in the extreme north, without any doubt Pelíliou and a Ngeaur in the southern part of the archipelago have been settled very early, the last was probably settled the earliest. This is indicated by ancient legends and oral traditions concerning gods and god-like humans, who are connected with the creation of the island and the social order (story 193). All the roots of Palauan totemism go back to Těláměs, who together with two galid of Pelíliou went down into the strait of Makáep, where they visited their fish -mistresses. Gorágěl (story 13) coming from Ngeaur went down into the same depth, in order to win the magic for the construction of houses and the art of house decoration.

Further, the settlement of the islands by foreigners from the east under the command of a Ugélkeklau (story 8) starts here. Also the acquisition of money (story 9) takes place in a Ngeaur as well as Pelíliou, where on the SE beach of Ngarabesul the Chinese were trading long before the arrival of the Whites. Because of them bead money, used in barter, must have come to the Palauans; more about it in part. V in the paragraph "Money". Many galid came especially to Pelíliou; legends report about this, for instance Boi (story 11 and 12), Ugélsúng (story 16), Dilkeděgú and Sagageiegáng, the inventors of numerous magic spells (story 17^a), Golungīs (story 170), etc.

But most of all it was galíd a Guóděl (story 161), who enjoyed great veneration. More about him here:

The small reef rock Ngikúr on the western side (Vol. I p. 198, Figure 19) is considered to be the stranded boat of galid a Guódel and a Ramád lë galíd (see story 161). Both went on shore in Ngaregól and had a look at the settlement. Then they went on to Ngardolólók. There they saw an old woman, Magád ra blai ra ugelióu (see bl. nr. II). The old woman collected këam-nuts and roasted them. The smell attracted both of them and thus they found the old woman, who was alone and they wanted to stay with her. They asked Ngirakíděl, who agreed and ordered them to put the place in order.

a Guóděl became powerful and big, whereas Ramád is his messenger. Due to these two galid Pelíliou and its main village Ngardolólók became important and the house nr. 1 obtained special privileges. But Ngaregól received the order of the galid to bring as tribute every 1—2 years a boat loaded with lime and Ngirakíděl sitting on it to Ngaredolólók.

Even though Pelíliou once was powerful due to its galid, as is shown in story 161, it nevertheless came under the dominance of Goréör. It was so humiliated by Goréör that people were filing off their kluk-pieces of money, in order to make them less sought after; this is the reason why they have the name kluk l pelíliou (story 162). In 1783, WILSON (see Vol. I p. 116) already heard about the warring raids of people from Goréör to there. In 1791, MCCLUER heard about battles that had been fought in which many of the attackers perished. In 1839, DUMONT D'URVILLE was in short contact with the inhabitants of the island (Vol. I p. 131). The newest measure introduced by the German government (Vol. I p. 158) was to end the dreadfully degenerated state of affairs concerning girls in the bai.

In KADU's report you can read about the shamelessness of Pelíliou's people (Vol. I p. 131); he definitely meant Pelíliou when he was talking about Pelli. The reports of a Spaniard, who had been living there about this time for 9 months, are filled with indignation. CHEYNE declares them to be reckless pirates and SEMPER was so outraged about their laziness and the mongol-hustle and bustle that he assaulted a rubak (SEMP. II p. 290, 325, and 337). In fact, already the very first discoverers had bad experiences here and the attempted cutting of the whaler Syren in 1823 (Vol. I p. 130) speaks for itself. The bad reputation of the southern group in former times is therefore justified.

1. Ngardolólók (plate 16^{1a.2)})

(SEMP.: Ardelollec, KUB.: Ardolólók)

situated in the corner of the claws, on flat land near to the east coast.

Description of the place (see plan 30^a): In the bay, studded by mangroves, a stone pier, which is bent at its end like a stick-crutch, juts out. Behind, on dry land a fishermen's-bai³⁴⁵ is situated, it is called Ngatkauáng just like the landing place itself. Once upon a time, the stone wall for the protection against attacks was here (see history) and the spring Ngarabeóug, which is now a water hole (story 161)³⁴⁶. The other landing place Makalbáng lies in the southeast. Only a footpath leads there, meeting the big stone path that leads about 800 m from Ngatkauáng in a southwesterly direction to the stone quadrangle of the rubak-bai Ngarameluláu. On the road, in the north where it makes a small bend, bai F. Merés and bai E. Diberdi + (in ruins) are situated, in the south on a high stone platform bai C. aIbaióng and D. Gomáog +. Near the two rubak-bai A. Bailgalíd (in the south) and B. Ngabīs (in the north) (figure 16¹) in the south-western corner there lies the strange looking blai nr. I Gomūgtokói³⁴⁷, also called Blai raluíl, after rubak nr. I Góbak raluíl (Figure 54). The house is built bai-like, but not exactly in the telegēĩr-form, like in a Iraĩ, Ngargabéd, etc. The broad gable, forming a nearly isosceles triangle, is decorated with 11 pyramid-like, yellow, red, and white angular angles, which cover each other. In the middle is like a pole a vertical black line and underneath this one, in the middle of the gable front, is the high entrance flanked on both sides by big window openings. The interior (Figure: 55) is partitioned by walls into rooms, as has been observed in the galid-house in Ngátpang. In fact it had also been passed off as the house of the priest for the galída Guóděi, and Ramád lě galíd; his residence is considered to be bl. 26 Metéulblai. One characteristic of bl. I is the fact that all around it there were small post in the form of human figures, only about 2 feet high, two on each side.

Figure 54. Galíd-blai nr. I Gomūgtokói in Ngardolólók.

About 30 steps in front of this house of the priest, not even 20 from the southeastern edge of the galdúkl-stone quadrangle Melulāu is an ilūd-like stone construction (a) Gomisógöl (from omis "to see"), where the priest or Rubak nr. I took his place during festive occasions, this is the sitting bench (blu) of the boat of a Guóděi, which lies turned into stone in Ngikúr (see plate 16²). Several legend-stones are standing on top of it; in the northern corner (in the picture left) the head of the money-bird Delǎrók (see story 9) and on the left the long-faced stone head a Iderūg, which is said to have been brought by galid a Guóděi. Visiting it, mothers can obtain a long face for their children.

Figure 55. The interior of the galid-blai Gomūgtōkói.

Behind the Gomisógol-pavement is an even bigger pavement (b), where once upon a time Blai ra gogáio was situated, not far away from Blai ra Gálilai. At around 1870, the priestess Diragogáio built a blai there. In former times a sop-house stood there.

South of the Gomisógol-stone is a dílong — bath, because the taro patches follow further in the south and in the southeast, bordered in the west by a piece of stone path with the name Ngerkeditú, which leads to the legendary Ngariáp.

The stone path Gadēs úrou leads from the stone quad Melulau to Ngasiás, where all the youth had been killed (story 165).

Privilege: Obtaining bai-girls from Ngatangāu.

Industry: see above.

History: As already mentioned above, the legend concerning the totemism of the Palauans in the south has its origin here. KUB. II p. 86 also allocates to it the partition into two: "According to the legend, once upon a time Ardolólok on Pililu was overpopulated and therefore it was divided into two sides. From here the practice is said to have been imitated by the whole group." But in olden times Ngasiás in the middle of the island was the most powerful place, and only by cunning and revenge, as it is written in story 165, Ngardolólok got the upper hand. Due to its galid a Guóděi it became very powerful, which is related vividly and detailed in story 161 (see also KUB. II p. 81). But the god also caused its fall and the envy of his enemies, among whom Goréör was the leader. Obviously it had feared this place for a long time, as can be deduced from the above-mentioned fortifications, which were created in Ngatkauáng towards the sea. Though in 1909, during my visit, there was nothing left³⁴⁸.

Plan 30^a.

More about rub. nr. 1 Góbak raluil in story 161.

Concerning nr. II and nr. III see Ngariáp.

Constitution of Ngardolólók.

bai l pelú (village house): Meluláu. A. Bai l galíd, B. Ngabīs.

armeāu (people): Ngasúrou galíd (god): a Guóděł.

klóbak (council): Ngarameluláu.

female council: ar Búng l péláu.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	klebil (clan):	ardil (women):
I	Góbakraluíł	Gomūgtōkói (Blairalui)	Ngós	a Guóděł'lāgád
II	a Iderég	a) Ngarakekláu	a Ugelióu	Bálang
III	a Itpík	Ngēsílěóng	Ngabárd	Gobirír
IV	a Idēsěár	Ngurulangáng	Gadarúgei	Belēmēsúmog
V	a Smau	Ngarbúōg	to I	Bilsmāu
VI	Mogugěu	Gosěkěd	" II	nr. VI
VII	Ngirangabáng	Soei +	" III	Bilngabáng
VIII	Metílap	a Kesīl	" IV	nr. VIII
IX	a Umedíp	Ngarbárd +	—	" IX
X	Matulíkl'l	a Ugélkerekúr	—	" X

delásěg (totem): I. mesekūk, kalát. II. klúděł. III. měgur. IV. goroviděł.

Further blai: II. Báliau, 12. a Biól, 13. Ngurulekóng (story 161), 14. Pederík, 15. a Idelekéi, 16. Kud, 17. Makabás, 18. a Ngól, 19. Golugáng, 20. Meloi, 21. Ngidálāg (story 161), 22. Gólep, 23. Songiol, 24. a Usúi, 25. a Metúkěr, 26. a Metéulblai (see above), Súngosol, a Biáng.

nr.:	gáldebegěł (clubs):	ptelúl (its head):	bai (club)	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
♂ I	Ngarasebúiēs	Ngiramelói	C. a Ibaióng	Makalbáng	Bab l diberdí
♂ II	Ngaramangoěēs	Ngirangětěbóng	D. Gomáog +		Left
♀ I	Ngaragogumí
♀ II	Ngarabākál
♂ I	Ngaragogádu	Ngirenggei		Ngatkauáng
♂ II	Ngarabóiēs	Góbak	E. Diberdí +	Gebiltáog)	Ióu l diberdí
♀ I	Ngaramitěagět		F. Merés		Right
♀ II	Ngaraměkěbúd

2. Ngariáp +.

Ngariáp is a famous uninhabited place south of Ngardolólók that is full of legends; name from iápěs "cloud", because according to the legend a cloud fell from heaven, creating this place (see story 215 of Bars ra kesau). Big demon Rulebúsog ♂ (see story 12) and ♀Túrang, also called Túrangraisgil, after blai a Isegil.

Two bital pelú (parts of the village): a Raberiókl, the side of ghosts and Ngaragogádu, the side of humans.

Chief Rekăbés; bai l pelú (village house): Gaspángěl.

Description of the place (see plan 30^b): The formerly about 700 meter long stone path that went nearly in a straight line through the settlement from north to south starts with its northern end about 250 m from the southern end of the stone path Ngerkeditú in Nagdolólók. Merely a hundred steps west of the trailhead there is a water hole. In the south on the way there are two 80 cm high stone slabs, orientated in the same direction; they depict rubak nr. II a Iderég and nr. III a Iptík from Ngardolólók, who were constant enemies. They met here and none of them wanted to make way, until they both met their death. Further in the south there is a hole a Uósang where Teláměs sent good food from Gólei down to his mother (story 193), and in the east is the place of blai a Uósang itself. Then further on there is a galdúkl-stone-pavement of a club-house, where the stone Mangagúi³⁵⁰ stands. He was also called "The One Who Eats Hair", because whoever passed by and had not put up his hair, lost it (see story 215 about Kulúkl ketau). Then comes the famous spirit tree Bars re kesau (story 215), of which not more than a 50 cm thick root-trunk, looking east, with a hole as big as a man in it, is left. Here blai Kesau stood once, the residence of the monster Pěágědarsai (story 167). The galid-sisters Sagageiegáng and Dileděgú are said to have placed their children, the těmakai-fish, under the tree and are said to have invented here their gólei-magic(see story 17^a). Opposite of this tree, in the west of the street, bai l pelú Gaspángěl + was situated.

On the southern end an ilíud-pavement stretched across the stone path, where blai Ngaruketkól is said to have been standing, possibly a galid-bai. It was the home of the ghost spider Mangdiáp rutkól (story 12). There also seems to have been the blai of Tělaměs (see story and chant 193 of T. and of the two galíd Gadabedei and Gersói) with the name Ngarutegóng and the other three houses that belonged to it, Igílo, Igílang, and Gomarabáng.

Southwest of this trailhead in a distance of about 50 feet, there is a sort of "sink hole" that once caved into the lime rock, called a Ikilóng. It is 20—30 m wide and about 2—3 m deep. This is the gate of Tělaměs where he went down to the sea. But a piece of stone path, shadowed by high Terminalia branches off from the pavement of blai Ngaruketkól and leads, after a sharp right-angled bent, to the south east.

Plan 30b

3. Ngatangāu.

Ngatangau was poor; the inhabitants lived only on the uósog-extract and gosekěd-figs. Women went daily to Ngardolólók, in order to beg there for their taro. Diragoirémag, the wife of rubak nr. I was too proud to do so. She sat down on the ilíud-pavement Gomedóíēl l tamói at the end of the stone path from Ngariáp and took 2–3 pieces of taro out of the basket of every woman who walked by alone. Thus, she got her food. Therefore, the name of the pavement, from oméd to take away the small taro tamoi.

In 1910 blai Goděbísěg and a second house were situated opposite of the trailhead near a diaong-bathing pool. In the former Mangdiáp (story 12) is said to have grown up. The tree with the same name as the house still stands there. The houses are situated in the vicinity of táog Ngaramongós that reaches from the bay of Ngardolólók all the way here, as has been already mentioned. It is said that the arrivals from the east, from the island Tpensik or Dengasík where a moray eel had eaten everything (story 160), had come here. They had built a great wall around the swamp and filled it up with earth. But the people remained dependent on Ngardolólók where they had to deliver mongols. Because of a lack of food a part of them are supposed to have moved away. My companions reported that the táog Ngaramongós reached all the way to the southern end of the island, something I could not verify.

Concerning the Ngaramélt-Grotto see p. 268, footnote 1, and the story about Ngasiás, p. 273.

4. Ngeríkl +.

East of Ngatangāu, on the beautiful long sandy beach, which is framed by two rocky points Pkul Meseāu ("View of Angaur") and Pkul gotrúgūl ("End"). Here once upon a time, a village was situated that was considered to be a part of Ngatangāu. The sandy beach was used for landing on the eastern side.

5. Ngarabesul +

in the south of point Pkulogotrúgul on another one of the small bay with a sandy beach. Already before WILSON's arrival (1783) a ship from Silang (China) is said to have been trading here. The foreigners wanted to have the tridacna-bracelets of the women, which are only produced here and which were not for sale. Therefore, the Chinese returned home, but came back with 2 ships and new trading goods. But then a fight started, where women and children (ngais) were brought to a walled fortress.

6. Ngasiás

(SEMP.: Nasiás, KUB.: Assiás)

big village, situated in the middle of the island, on a piece of flat land. In the north it touches the hill Gomleblógöl that gave the council its name Ngaragomleblógöl.

//272//

Description of the place (see plan 31): Most of the houses are situated along a stone path that leads in its main direction straight from north to south and is about 800 m long. The southern part is called Mangaláng.

Plan 31.

100 m south of the northern trailhead a stone path branches off to the east. From there the footpath leads between the two hills of Gomelblógöl, leading first through a ravine northward, then via the western ridge steeply down³⁵¹ to Ngarengöl where a stone path leads eastwards

Peliliou

1. The two Rubakbai Bailgalíd and Ngabīs in Ngardolólók.

2. Rub. Nr. 1. Góbakraluíl on the stone seat Gomisógöl in Ngardolólók.

3. Galídbai 24 (house of the priest) Gaukēs bógõp in Ngasiás.

Spirit house

4. Blai nr. I Ngatapālaū with the woman of the house and the man of the house in Ngarakeūkl.

In the corner bai F. a Krór is situated. The eastern trailhead is nearby. However, the stone path still continues, at first somehow unfinished, while it traverses the northern part of the big taro patch. Then it continues in normal quality crossing a smooth rise of land only a few meters height, where bai G. Gongoluátēlblai was situated, which had been burnt by the Spaniards.

On the other side the road forms a second trailhead. From here a footpath leads to the north, which in former times went to Ngaregól, before the new, above-mentioned trail was made. The old path leads along the base of a sheer rock face that is covered with the roots of a Bayan tree. At its base is the cave a Irúr, about 250 m away from the trail-head. It is a sizeable vault, quite like a room with a low door-like entrance and a thin wall next to the entrance. The cave drops towards the west for about 10 m. Down there is clear water; many bats are in the room. It is said to have been the former residence of the two-headed gaild Maluád lē gúr (story 164). From the second trailhead a third, now small stone path leads towards the east, finally meeting the boathouse and the channel Ngabúngēl, because here, too, just like in Ngariáp a táog cuts deep into the land.

After about 225 m the main road of the village meets south of bai. F. a Krór the galdúkl-stonerectangle of the two rubak-bai *a*Itói, which are situated east of the road: A. Gosobulngāu and B. Bilekélēk. The galid-blai 24 Gaukěsbógop is situated in the west of them.

In the south of the village house, on the eastern side of the road is bai D. Ngaramēaus and on the western side is bai E. Lemau, near an old breadfruit tree of uncommon size with a thick trunk. In the south of both [bai] a stone path runs from west to east, cutting the main road. Further on in the west it turns into a foot trail leading to Ngarakeúkl and Pkúlapēlú, in the east 20 minutes to Ngardolólók.

In the southernmost village part Mangaláng, still lies bai C. Dilúbog.

Privilege: A great number of mongol are delivered (klóu mǝngolungēl) from Ngěungēl for former assistance (story 38). Release of Ibēdul (story 162).

Industry: see above,

History: Ngasiás had an alliance with Ngarakeúkl and Gámliangēl, when this one was still on Pelíliou, because all three of them were sons of the deróiog-(little pied cormorant) bird, which had its nesting place on the island Rurīd, on the east coast (plan 29). Ngasiás was the oldest, but Gámliangēl knew how to obtain first place with their mother through its talking. In former times the place was situated on Rois' siás, the eastern part of the mountain Gomleblógōl, but it was driven away into the plain by people from the village Delebógēl (see Pkúlapēlú). Here the settlement became very powerful, until it was destroyed by Ngardolólók, as has been mentioned there (story 165). The woman nr. II Dilíklep saved what there was still to save. She was also the one who saved the woman Dengdangbiúl from Melekéiok (see above 96), by taking her in when she had drifted in a box to the beach of a Imelegól. Later on the latter one jumped into the Ngaramél -Grotto near Ngatanggāu, because she had been treated badly (see p. 271) and turned into stone.

Like in all places of Medege^uipélau, rub. nr. I was the high priest. Rub. nr. II tried in vain to save his people from their high spirits. He was the one, who is said to have observed a máměł-(Napoleon wrasse) fish from a tree on the island Ngéregóng, how he was feeding, how he turned and twisted in order to learn to rule his place well. This is depicted as a log in bai Gosobulngáu in Ngabúkěd. He was called Vitagasiás, the noble from Ng. His efforts were in vain.

Similar to Ngiraikela^u in Goréör, rubak nr. II Ngiragongór seems to have played a preeminent role in Ngasiás, as can be seen in the story about Melekéiok p. 95. Story 166 about Mageideuíd, the inventor of ulangáng-the small spirit-hut, is witness to this, as well.

Góbak ra mangaláng, who before the destruction was only the high chief of the southern part of the village, became rub. III of Ngasiás, by committing his act of revenge. He was also the one who stole the Ibědul's daughter in Goréör in order to make Ngasiás strong. For this Ngasiás paid the a Ibědul for "taking off the hat" (story 162), when he went on shore in Ngasiás after getting the title (see Goréör p. 214).

Around 1850 (see bl. II Goréör and story 164) the inhabitants were chased away by galid Maluád lě gúr, who lived in the cave a Irúr. They fled via Ngarakeúkl to Ngarbagéd, but soon returned.

SEMP. II pp. 282 mentioned his stay in 1862 with a few friendly words. It is important what he says on p. 283 about the priest and his octagonal house, which must have been similar to the one that once stood in a Iraĩ (in detail part V: House). There Mdegei pélau is also the village god, who got his wife a Iluai ra ngamagád from bl. VI (end of story 195 and KUB. II p. 81). In 1909, I only found a simply, not at all beautiful blai-like building (bl. 24, see plate 16³), like the one in Ngarsúl.

Concerning rub. VII see story 163.

Constitution of Ngasiás.

bai l pelú (village house): a Itoi. A. Gosobulngáu, B. Bilekélěk.

galid (god): ♂ Medegei pélau, ♀ Túrang (Duói).

klóbak (council): Ngaragomleblógöl.

female council: ar Maděding.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	bitang (side):	kleblil (clans):	ardil (women):
I	a Ugél	a Segědúi (Ngítogóp)	I	Ngaragomís	a Ugélěbil
II	Ngiragongór	Ngarablúnt	II	a Ugélkúměr	Dilíklep
III	Góbak ra mangaláng	a Kebúi	to II	Ngěskěsúk	Goderěi
IV	Spesúngěl	a Lulk	" I	Blai rasáu	Bílung
V	Blítang	Těsei	" I	to nr. I	Gobogóu
IV	Ngiklěp	Ngamagád	" II	to nr. II	Dirariáng
VII	Mad ra skěsúk	Ngěskěsúk	" II	to nr. III	Gobagád
VIII	Ngirariáng	a Ipělu	" I	(Ngítogóp)	Túrang

IX	Golikóng	a Ramál	" I	—	a Rimú
X	Golikóng mekëkerengáp	Ngaramesëpelú	" II	—	a Irírs

//275//

Further blai: 11. Ngarugóp, 12. Keremiús (a Chinese who has become a Palauan lives here), 13. Basmaráng, 14. Golegerīl, 15. Galuólu, 16. Telmatáng, 17. Ngardókou, 18. Gëmel, 19. Rtagél, 20. Gorúl, 21. Dalás, 22. a Makrëus, 23. Goirei, 24. Gāukës bógöp (gaild-house), 25. Tivedákl, 26. a Itëlbáng, 27. a Tpäög, 28. Goivëráng, 29. Ngalóng.

nr.:	gáldëbegël (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngararóro	C. a Dilúbög	Debüt	left
II ♂	Ngarabitaláol	D. Ngaramēaus
I ♀	Ngaratëló ³⁵²
II ♀	Ngarabirúkël
I ♂	Ngaragëbákl	E. a Lemāu ³⁵³	a Lemāu	right
II ♂	Ngramangasëkárd	F. a Krór
III ♂	Ngarapelód	G. Gongoluátëlbai ³⁵⁴ +
I ♀	Ngaratogodi ³⁵⁵
II ♀	Ngaramerërek

7. Ngarakeúkl.

(SEMP.: Argeútel, KUB.: Ngargeúkl)

Name from keúkl "Western Side", on the western coast, situated almost exactly opposite of Ngasiás.

Description of the place (plan 32): two parts, Bablpëlu the "Upper Land" and the "Lower Land" Ióulpëlu, which are separated from each other by a lime-rock-threshold, which is wavy and as high as a man. Like a wall it stretches from north to south. The stone path coming from the east passes to the left the stone rectangle of the rubak-bai Ngaraikelāu. In the east is A. Gosobulngāu, on its front gable the story of Mad lutk (story 203) is depicted in rare beauty; in the west B. Bilekélëk. In the east of the former is a big, spirit stone platform. The croton-tree that stands here is said to have come from heaven (story 168). The stone path mounts over the above-mentioned swell and continues then to the west down to the beach. On the northern side the kldok-bai D. Koírs.

The western trailhead is situated nearby and has 3 stone pavements in front of it. In the north the former bai C. Ngebasángël +, in the south an ilúud, aswell as one in the west. Here the rubak look towards the setting sun (story 168). A little bit further to the west there is a stone platform that protrudes out onto the sandy beach. Probably a fishermen's bai once stood here. On this "Lower Land" another stone path runs to the south, after having branched off at the wall from the main path. Here lies bai E. Desú

Privilege: To collect bamboo and ready-made sail material in Ngarekobasáng, as the bamboo gets from here to there, as clarified in story 168 about the sun seekers, which made Ngarakeúkl famous. To take away taro-benches, fish heads etc. at bl. II in Goréör (see p. 229).

History: Concerning the expulsion of the people from Ngasiás and Keúkl by the demon Máluádlëgúr and their flight to Ngarbagéd on Goréðr, where they lived for some time and their privileges, which the latter earned at bl. II in Goréðr, see there.

Concerning the alliance of Nagarkeukl with Gámliangĕl and Ngasiás, see at the last one. Keúkl was the youngest of the three brothers.

At the end of 1862 SEMPER lived here, waiting a long time for his ship; he is said to have lived in bl. VII, north of the stone square where a forest of Areca palmtrees is situated.

Galsbong – Spirit house in Blai 14 Tamarikel in Ngrakeukl of Peleliu

Constitution of Ngarakeúkl.

bai l pelú (village house): Ngaraikeúkl. A. Gosobulngāu, B. Bilekélēk.

galíd (god): a Ugélkeúkl (KUB.) ♀ Mlageĩ klóbak (council): Ngaraikeúkl.

female council: ?

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Gad re kerói	Ngatapālaú	Gobagád ra ugélkeúkl
II	Gad l pelú	Lulk	Gobagád ra ugelióu
III	Gē dēlág	Ngērķūák	Gobagádra ra dmíu
IV	Ugél mekedú	a Róro +	a Ugélēbíl
V	Golikóng	Kolabás	Sólei
VI	Gádlbai	Bairák	Dirēklāĩ
VII	Gadapādāngēl	Maltált	Kldil lágád a pādāngēl
VIII	Golikors	Belamāĩ	nr. VIII
IX	nr. IX	Dormōgól ³⁵⁶	" IX
X	nr. X	a Imēráp	" X

The titles I—V came down from heaven, as is told in story 168.

Further blai: II. Mesésogúr, 12. a Ikrēbāĩ, 13. Mlangedáol, 14. Tamarikél, 15. Barāĩ, 16. a Ilemasáng, 17. Modngerúr, 18. Gosiaú, 19. Gongābiluél, 20. Belamāĩ, 21. Ngivál.

nr.:	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngaramogorógör	C. Ngebasángēl +	Ngebansángēl	right
II ♂	Ngaraiol'l	D. Koírs
I ♀	Ngarabērokórok
II ♀	Ngaramelamiákl
I ♂	Ngarabóiēs	E. Desú	Desú	left
II ♂	Ngaraiús	"
I ♀	Ngaralmál
II ♀	Ngaratógodulík

Entrance through the reef Vol. 1 p. 218.

8. Pkúlapēlú (Delebógēl +)

(SEMP.: Acbolabölu, KUB.: Pkulopelú)

"Point of the Land" where in former times Delebógēl + is said to have been situated on the southwestern point, on the flat land of the low-lying rocky coast. From here you walk in 12 minutes to Ngarakeúkl.

Description of the place (plan 33): A short, obtuse-angled, bent stone path crosses the settlement from north to SW. In the south of the bend is the rubak-bai A. Barāi. On the trailhead near the beach, is on both sides an ilūd-like stone construction and in the south is bai B. a Tkum. Before the trailhead lies a stone pavement in the form of a triangular sail with its tip towards the head. South of it there are two boathouses and a small boat shed, a sign that seafarng is of some importance here. In fact, Pkúlapēlú is the port of departure for the crossing through the strait Gēúgēl to a Ngeaur. Here the reef of the beach is only a few hundred meters wide and has an entrance.

Plan 33.

Histroy: This place belongs to a Idíd (bl. I in Goréör p. 227). This happened because: Ngaběángēd on Ngeaur had been destroyed. a Ibēdul 4 Ngiragolivál had married a woman from Pkúlapēlú and brought the homeless people from Ngeaur to Pelíliou. He talked with a Ugél in Ngasiás and told him he should protect Pkúlapēlú, but should not suppress it, otherwise he would bring the people to Goréör. Thus they fared well.

SEMP. II p. 304 and 305 describes the ceremony of a young mother mounting the inging-platform the way he saw it, as is the custom of Ngeaur, and as is correct.

The old Delebógēl which was said to have been situated here before the settlement of the people from Ngeaur is only mentioned in the story about Ngasiás. It is said that people from this place were been driven from the mountain into the plain. Thus it must have been a strong place.

KUB. V p. 20 mentions Koréomēl as galíd, the Gereómēl from story 3, the son of goddess Latmikáik.

Constitution of Pkúlapělu.bai l pelú (village house): A. Barai.klóbak (council): Ngarabaraí. galíd (god): Ngira ded melói ♂ and Gereomel, Mlagél ♀

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women)
I	a Rěngūl	Ngarmidól +	a Rukebái
II	a Rěngărúgěl	a Irúr +	Talobagád
III	Gademěsép	Blulúkēs +	Gobagád
IV	Iegád	a Langóklblai +	Guóděl'lăgád
V	Regăsmóls	a Imadeliáng +	nr. V
VI	Rěngūlpelú	toII	nr. VI
VII	nr. VII	" III	nr. VII
VIII	nr. VIII	" IV	nr. VIII
IX	—	" II	nr. IX
X	—	" II	nr. X

Next to blai II, I also saw 3 others: 6. Sebáles (Span.), 7. Ngurugoróng, 8. Kekerélblai.

nr.:	gálděbegěl (club):	bai (club-house):	táog (channel):
I ♂	Ngaragosónd	B. a Tkúm	a Tkúm
II ♂	Ngarábesěgărěákl
I ♀	Ngarasekól
I ♀	Ngaramelivékl

9. Ngaregól

(SEMP.: Orocoll, KUB.: Aragól)

from a gol "sand", because a long sandy beach stretches from here all the way to the northern tip.

Description of the place: Once the village was situated inland on the hill a Rois, where even now stone settings can be seen; but nobody remembers it anymore (see at Ngasiás). Today, it lies at the southern end of the sandy beach where the rocky coast starts. It cannot be passed, therefore you have to climb from the small flat beach where the houses are about 30 m up in order to reach the valley, which leads in 20 minutes to Ngasiás. A kldok-bai is situated on the beach, a little bit inland; not far from it lies the rubak-bai a Ibeságál, A. Gosobulngau and B. Goubogúkl. The latter is a bai, about 70 years old, with posts in the shape of men, as fertility magic. I cannot indicate the setting of the club-houses and the village road, because I visited the place only for a short period of time, and the order for mapping, conducted by one of the ship's officers, was not given.

History: The village god of Ngarevíkl in Ngatēlŋál (p. 115) is said to have come from here. Hence the friendship with this village.

The priests were very powerful here, nr. I was at the same time the high priest (compare KUB. II p. 81)

Constitution of Ngaregól.

bai l pelú (village house): a Ibeságāl. A. Gosobulŋāu, B. Goubogúkl.

klóbak (council): Ngarapalāu.

galíd (god): Gomúiek ♂ and Mlagei ♀

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	ardil (women):
I	Góbak	Ngatagáp +	Dilogúg
II	Ngirakídēl	Mesmagáng	Dirakídēl
III	a Ugél	a Imanglí	Ditagáp
IV	Lóug	Ngataguáng	Dilsepsís
V	Mangalíl	a Smau	Diltpák
VI	Bútlbai	Mádlbai	Gabogóiēl
VII	Ngirangatpák	Ngatpák	a Ripák
VIII	Ngirablagei	Kosīl	Medú
IX	Iluaildúi	Kaiungél	nr. IX
X	Ngirasokós	Bitálagalú	nr. X

Further blai: 11. Maiagúdēl, 12. a Uél, 13. Golekáng, 14. Ngēřēklepīl, 15. Ngerungurii, 16. a Bedegál, 17. Ióuang, 18. Magalbáng, 19. Getelblóng, 20. Galuólu, 21. Kébang, 22. Ngeskeróu, 23. a Imūl, 24. Ngeúngēl, 25. a Gúr, 26. a Iuelekáng.

nr.:	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
I ♂	Ngarakrer	C. Golo	Golo	right
II ♂	Ngaragoungāu
I ♀	Ngardelegédāg
II ♀	Ngaratelpúāt
III ♀	Ngaradongesei
I ♂	Ngaramerabás	D. Ngabīs	Ngabīs	left
II ♂	Ngarameliuékīl	E. Medūlbai
I ♀	Ngarateremúd
II ♀	Ngaratelŋāi

10. Gomiotel +, in former times a settlement on the steep height above Ngaregól, see in Dīlíklep's chant in story 165. Compare also SEMPER's account above at Ngasiás .

11. Gámliangēl +, in former times an important village, nearby the mountain with the same name, on the northern tip of Pelíliou. It had a brotherhood bond with Ngarkeúkl and Nagsiás (see there). Furthermore it had strong friendship bond with Goikúl when this one was still situated on the gogeál Ngurukdápěl (p. 191). But when both of them rose against the main villages Ngardolólok and Ngasiás, they were chased away by them. Gámliangěl settled at the foot of the mountain with the same name on the western coast of Babldáob (distr. VI). They had left behind god a Ugél'lëgalíd (story 129).

12. a Imelógěl +, on the eastern coast near Rois Gámliangěl. One house and some coconut palm trees are said to still be there. The box with the woman Dengdangbiúl drifted to a Imelegól, as has been told in the story of Melekéiok (p. 95) (see also Ngasiás). If this is here or somewhere else is not known.

13. Ngarsióu, according to story 161 with a landing place Ngarekëvékl nearby Rois Gámliangěl, where a Guóděl landed and lived. Once a very important place, as can be deduced from story 73. The rubak died under the lime rock Ngurukdápél. The 7 Debasăg-devils took revenge on Ngaraklemáděl in a Imelīk, which must have been guilty.

14. a Oét +, no particulars are known.

15. Ngaremangiaū +, mentioned in story 9, because the money-bird was flying over it (compare bl. II Goréör); not sure if it was a bigger settlement.

District X. a Ngěaur (plan 34)

(MCCLUER: Angour, SEMP.: Ngaur and Angaur, KUB.: Angyaur and Angaur, v.M.M.: Angaur, MISS.: Ngeour.)

In Central Carolinian the word eaūr means south, as can be seen from the island names Aurepik, Eaur on Truk, and Nauru. The island, which is depicted on the maps of the R. M. A. II (see plan 2. Vol. 1) and III,³⁵⁷ is separated from Pelíliou by the 4 1/2 seamiles wide strait Gëúgěl or Geiúgěl (see above Nggeiāngěl p. 40), also called Makáep, after the 17 meter deep local shallows; it lies in the southwest of it. Coming from the north you can see a Ngěaur first from Pkúl a meseaur "Point Ngěaur-View", on the east coast of Pelíliou, in the west from Pkúl a pělú (see p. 278)

Number of inhabitants 1909 approximately 150.

Amount of villages: 4, deserted ones 8.

klóul pelú (main village): Ngarapelāu.

rubukúl (its chief): a Ugěrpělāu.

armeāu (people):

galíd (god): Medegēi pělau .

Plan 34.

Political Groups:

Since ancient times 7 villages held the power, they were called Euíd l iá ur. Before, there were supposed to have been even "Thirty Villages", Eíked pelú. In 1910 people were only talking about Gëdéliá ur "Three ngeaur", Ngarapelau, Ngabéangéd and Ngaramáság.

Description of the Land (see Vol. 1, plan 2 and pp. 159 a. 160, a. 196, R.M.A.I. part IV p. 47; II and III maps):

Citing the sources, especially the description in Vol. 1 p. 196, I only need a few words here.

Story 9 mentions a Pkul a dúdēs (geidúduēs = pebbles), which is said to be situated at the beach Ugul a ker'regár. About 400 m south of it is cave a Iloguai. As indicated on map 34, the settlements are in the middle of the island, which is about 5 m high where the slight basin allows the cultivation of taro patches. In the middle of the northern part is a circular stone path, where the villages Ngarapelau, Ngabéangéd and Rois are situated. The southern tip is "pointed", and is therefore called Medórom; this was also the name of the village which once was situated there and which founded new settlements on Babeldáob, just like the still-existing Ngaramáság. In the west of this place is the beach of the souls, called Ngëdelóg (Figure 56.)

In 1910, the 4 villages that were still there were already very restricted and the bai with only 6 aimūl, were insignificant and spoilt. There are no trailheads. Despite the reservation the decline of the villages can obviously not be stopped.

Concerning the mining of phosphate, the most necessary information is already written in Vol. 1 p. 159 and 160. Concerning the technical and geological aspects I refer to the book of ELSCHNER, "Korralogene Phosphatinseln Austral-Ozenaniens and ihre Produkte, Lubeck 1913", and to the work of Dr. P. HAMBRUCH, who wrote the monograph of Nauru.

Together with Angaur, Nauru exports the following growing amounts:

Year	kg phosphate	of which from Angaur	value M. total
1909	74 782 000	—	1 869 550
1910	176 633 000	339 580	4 503 820
1911	133 113 000	446 500	3 461 775
1912	193 125 000	544 000	4 991 325

I still have to mention here once more that the Deutsche Südsee-Phosphate-Aktiengesellschaft [Southsea-Phosphate-Corporation] distributed in 1914 for the first time an 11% dividend.

The total amount is said to be 3 million tons (80—86 % tricalcium compound) but it is probably higher.

Privilege:

The ngamásag "climbing" on the inging-frame by the young mother (see SEMP. II p. 304) is here also called gorolúi. It is not permitted to wear the dugong-bracelet (KUB. VIII p. 176).

Industry:

Construction of peculiar seagoing boats dogú (see Figure 56), which were more seaworthy than those from the northern parts. Special fleets; connection with abroad (story 174).

History:

At Pelíliou parts of the old history have already been mentioned. Even though the name a Ngeaúr is Central Carolinian (see above p. 281), the island, nevertheless, can be considered to be the oldest real Palauan settlement. Within the legends it is similar to Manu'a in the Samoan archipelago. There is an old creation chant that is said to be kept here, but despite of all my efforts I could not obtain it.

The creation of the land is connected with the original volcanic rock (story 1), but soon afterwards Ngeaúr appears built up by coral rock. The first giant develops here. While falling he smashes the landmasses, thus creating the present day archipelago (story 2). Goddess Latmikáik stepped out of risóis; her most important descendants on Ngeaúr were mentioned first, especially Ngiraidemaĩ who was created in the village Ngaramásăg (compare Ngabiúl p. 27), Ugélbebăĭl, Ugél a gai, and Ugel kemúr l gadéng, all of them fish-gods. The latter, the shark, plays a part in story 8 about the immigrant a Ugélkeklāu, and in story 172^a, where the Keklāu-People created the blow hole Tiai on the northern coast when they were leaving. galíd Golungīs, who is also mentioned as a descendant, plays an important role, too, in stories 161, 170, etc. He seems to be another variation of galíd Medegeipélau (story 197), who has also been mentioned as god of Ngaramásāg (see story 170) and as Ngiraidemāi of Ngabiúl and Ngirailuóng of Gólei in Ngaramásāg and Ngarapelāu (story 3).

Figure 56. The beach of the souls Ngēdelóg, seen from the north (Ngaramúdēl);
in the foreground a seagoing boat (dōgú).

Story 173 takes place at the waterhole Garangáol or Garangák1. It shows the importance Ngeāur has for the dead. The dancing ground of the souls is at the nearby beach Ngēdelóg or Ngadólog, in another way of speaking also called Ngamrúr (a Rok story 27). They came via Malágāl and Pelíliou (see there) from the north, this further means from the Central Caroline Islands (Vol. 1 p. 186), in order to disappear to the west, crossing the bridge to the hereafter (see part VI death cult).

Since a long time ago a Ngeāur stood, just like Pelíliou, politically under Goréör, as story 171 tells. The liberation came not with the help of the Spanish, but by the trader SIMS, who made himself the high chief of the island (see Vol. 1 p. 151). Before that it was under the power of Ngardolólok on Pelíliou, and therefore in the olden days it was called Oúēr iaur "subjugated" Ngeāur. Ngeāur also became important because of its wealth (see story 9).

Concerning the chiefs I have to mention that the high chief proudly called himself the "First One of Pelāu", a ugér Pélau (mostly spoken Úgēr pēlau): the many Ugéltitles go back to galíd Ugél súnġ, who landed here with his pots and proclaimed the titles (story 16).

On Pelíliou, there are connections especially to Pkúlapě́lú (see there).

1. Ngarapelāu .

Description of the place (plan 35): Lies in the middle of the island's northern part, in the east of the circular stone path C. If you walk on the road from the NE-bay Úgul a ker'regár in a southwestern direction, you encounter the spot on the circle where the rubak -bai A. Ngabīs of Ngarapelāu is situated. At its northern gable is a deep hole, called diong Gerēiut, which galíd Golungīs had dug with the help of magic. That is his priest, a man about 70 years old, from the house Golbídě́l, said he still had seen it. Opposite, on the inner side, is the bathing pool Diorangabīs. If you continue on the southwestern path, you soon notice on the southern side bai B. Kemángě́lbai. On the other side of it, just a short distance away is the borderline of the village. In former times, a footpath was leading from bai B. in a southeastern direction to the sandy beach of Garítm. Towards the north bl. III lies across the stone path, this is a rarity not to be found otherwise.

History: Dilěpelau made this place rich and famous (story 9). The rubak-woman nr. I got her title from her. Due to her blai Ngatělkóu became the richest one of Palau and the place seems to have gotten its supremacy due to this. bl. II was also deeply involved.

God Ugělsagál the "First Man" can also be found in Ngardíms in Nggē iangě́l. House I a Idíms reminds us of this fact as it stands in close relationship with Rois ' close relationship with Ngarapelāu. That galíd Medegēi pė́lau is the reason for it is apparent because of the title Ngirailuóng for the village god (see story 3 and above p. 284).

Constitution of Ngarapelāu.

bail pelú (village-house): Ngabis.

galíd (god): a Ugělsagál and Ngirailuóng.

klóbak (council): Ngarangabis fleet: ar Blekú

female council: ar Kúměr.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	kleblil (clan):	ardil
I	a Ugěrpelāu	a Dósűp	Gorakiblai	Dilěpelāu
II	a Ugěrbúög	a Ger'riáng	Ngăřěbúög	Dir'rebúög
III	Góbak	Ngărtúngě́l	a Ugelióu	Gěbil
IV	Gádlbai	Gor'rákl	a Gedarúgei	Goblitelúk
V	Bibúgě́l	Ngiráus +	—	Gomitbíl
VI	Midögúls	Goltóbědgúr	—	Gungós
VII	Gaidāu	Gomurėng (Ngetělkóu) +	—	a Ripăřěg
VIII	(Ngiramíěg) Kótep	Ngelsei	—	Mekeuflt
IX	Talobák	Goivél (Sílang)	—	—
X	(a Iderėg) Gūóng	Ngaramel'lóng	—	Pupúngě́l

Further blai: 11. Moir, 12. Ngatělkóu.

Plan 35.

	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club-house):	táog	bitang
♂	Ngarabersóiōg	B. Kemángēlbai (a Lei+)	Ngarapelāu	right
♀	Ngaredelegedég
♂	Ngarasikērōu	C. Gelel'lklóel +	—	left

2. Rois.

The name "Mountain" is not explainable, maybe from the elevation in the north, mentioned in Vol. 1 p. 196, maybe also from Roispelú in distr. V, because bl. II a Ibedagál was nr. I there.

Description of the place (plan 35): Immediately adjacent to the SW-side of Ngarapelāu. After 100 steps you reach the southernmost point of the road from where 2 stone paths radiate to the south, though they are blind alleys. Obviously in former times there were some settlements. The circular path turns to the north, and passes in-between the rubak-bai A. Nggáēd, with its bathing pond at the southern gable and bai B. Gal'lát. Finally it reaches, 250 m from here, the border of Ngabeángēd.

History: Obviously only a secondary place of Ngarapelāu, without any special significance; compare the blai, which are partly the same.

The beautiful story about Dirarois and the rooster takes place here (story 127^b), now Diramalk nr. V.

The name of rub. nr. I is connected with galíd Ugél kemúr l gadéng (story 3), as can be seen from story 172^a, which though points to Ngabēángēd.

Had a special fleet, called ar Mengesúl.

bail pelú (village-house): A. Nggáēd.

galíd (god): a Guódēl.

klóbak (council): Ngarenggáed.

female council: ar Úgo1.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	kleblil (clan):	ardil (women):
I	a Ugél rekemúr	a Idíms	Plíup	Dir'rekemúr
II	a Ugéramedép	a Ibedagál	Gokederáuol	a Isengebúíēl
III	Gorák	Ngiráus	Polongkáng	Tálebil
IV	a Ugélemelís	(a Idims I)	Ngeráus	Gouróu
V	a Ugéradmís	Ngaremel'lóng	—	Diramalk
VI	Megal'l	(a Idims I)	—	Ngeói
VII	Gadísēs	Goivél	—	Gomrips
VIII	Delmákl	III	—	Ngidēlúngg
IX	Delmaklualg	—	—	—
X	nr. X	to I	—	—

Further blai: 11. Merúrt.

Footnote 358: Name of the fish-daughter in the Ngorót-story.

	gáldebegël (club):	bai (club-house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
♂	Ngarabelëbël	B. Gal'lát	Ngedóps	right
♀	Ngaradelégédeg
♂	Ngaratelëkiúel	—	—	left
♀	Ngarateteldúi

3. Ngǎbëángěd.

On the northwestern part of the circular stone path . First the stone path goes north from the border towards Ngarapelāu and then turns to SW. In the northernmost loop the bathing pool a. a Ngaegasáng is situated. Opposite of it, on the northern tip, a footpath goes from the stone path to the northern coast, which is supposed to be not even $\frac{1}{2}$ km long. South of bl. 11 a supposedly arduous and nearly 1-km-long footpath leads to the blowhole Tiai rengelūl. In former times the water blew into a kim-bowl in front of the house of rub. I Rengūl, until a man from a Imeúngs widened the hole (story 172^a).

a UgelKeklāu is said to have lived here (story 8); see Rois.

Constitution.

bai l pelú (village-house): A. Kesúk.

galíd (god): Ngiradedemelói.

klóbak (council): Ngarakesúk. name of the fleet: a Ie female council: ar Rubagád.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	kleblil (clan):	ardil (women):
I	Rengul	Seuei +	Seuei	a Rúkebai
II	Rengulugélt	Tertú	Ngeúděl	Talobagád
III	Gadmerép	Posaol +	Posáol	Gobagád
IV	a Iegád	Tkap +	Sëgëdúi	Guóděl lagád
V	a Iegád ra iplkúngěl	a Ipelkúngěl	—	a Regedmóls
VI	Rengul pelú	Ngeúděl +	—	—
VII	—	Ngerepád +	—	—
VIII	—	Sëgëdúi	—	—
IX	—	to I	—	—
X	—	to II	—	—

One further blai: 11. a Dus.

	gáldëbegël (club):	boat (club house):	táog (channel):	bitang (side):
♂	Ngaragosóngd	Mongmáreg +	Ngemersau	right
♀	Ngarailéngël
♂'	Ngarabesegereákl	Nggebángěl +	—	left
♀	Ngaraólt

//Krämer, Palau, Vol. 2. Plate 19//

Goréör

1. Ngitegóp from Blai 24 a Ivotogóng (William Gibbon's daughter, see Vol. 1, Plate 4³)

2. Siabal from Bai 13 Tamarikél (foreign blood).

4. Ngaramásăg.³⁵⁹

Same name as the deserted village on Babldáob (p. 84).

In the middle of the southern part of the island.

Description of the place (plan 35): From the landing place Delūtáog a path leads in a southeastern direction to the village, which obviously had there its main táog. About 500 m from there you first meet the rubak-bai A. Gereívěd, soon followed by B. Míěg (in the south) and Bai C. Meléngěl (in the north), situated on both sides of the stone path. The path continues to the west and finally comes to the taro patch Urírd where some of the houses are nearby. In the middle, between the bai and the end, a road, called Goimlageĩ, branches to the north and suddenly ends, just like the 2 in the south, whihc are situated at Rois; apparently without attempting to connect.

History: Known because of galíd Golungīs, who had been born in bl. IX Ngadedúr, to the giver of taro a Iluógěl (story 170). He is a secondary aspect of the village god Medegeĩ pélaũ (see above).

Constitution of Ngaramásăg.

bai l pelú (village-house): A. Gereívěd.

galíd (god): Medegeĩ pélaũ (Ngiraidemaĩ of story 3).

klóbak (council): Ngaragereívěd. fleet: ar Uiláol. female council: Rengel'lítěl.

nr.:	arúbak (chiefs):	blai (house):	kleblil (clan):	ardil (women):
I	a Ugér'ramásăg	Marăkesang	Kédídai	Dir'remásăg
II	a Ugéldíkěs	a Rórou (Kerekúr)	Ngerúgělpelú	Rogormengákl
III	a Díp	a Metúkěr	a Dmíu	Rugeltkiúel
IV	a Ugélsiás	a Kedám	Ngaragělbúgăp	Rugeldmóls
V	a Ulonggóng	to III	—	Gobilgerágěs
VI	a Isagál	Ngerúgělpelú	—	Guódě'l'łágád
VII	a Ugélděséng	Gěděrék	—	Ngíoi
VIII	Gádlbai	to III Ger'rúl	—	gongeaĩ (nr. VIII)
IX	Gomóiũk	Ngadedúr	—	a Ugéliúěs
X	a Uger'rěsóměł	Kékerelblai	—	Gobilěgesóměł

The totem animal of I is the pink perch kedeau.

Further blai: 11. Gomosauágăł +, 12. sop, 13. Lúkilei, 14. Ngaremesengeĩ, 15. Andersen's house.

	gáldēbegēl (club):	bai (club-house):	tang (channel):	bitang (side):
♂	Ngarakedáol	B. Miég	Delūtáog	right
♀	Ngaraprekórok
♂	Ngarailóbog	C. Meléngēl	Delóg	left
♀	Ngaráek

Deserted Villages:

5. a* Ií + "Cave", in the west of Rois and Ngarbēángēd, with the landing place and sandy beach Ngúrugei . Once a big place , which was settled by Keklāu -People. A flat rock , Ngarakeklāu, is still supposed to be there where they used to dance.

The "cave" is probably the one mentioned in story 172 ^b, called Ií ra umēi.

6. Garítm +, east of Ngarapelāu and near to the eastern point Ngariōis, with a sandy beach nearby.

7. Medórōm +(a place with the same name in a Imelīk, p. 176, which was founded from here). It is situated on the southern tip and has a lot of sandy beach nearby. See the following 2 villages.

8. Golugāu + } see the village parts of Medórōm in a Imelīk which still have the
 9. a* Kídēl +. } same names today]

10. Ngarakóngēi +.

11. Ngatkebúi +.

12. a* Debós +.

//291//

Part IV.

Demography, Anthropology, and Language.

a) Demography.

As can be deduced from the history of the settlement, p. 5, in former times numerous natives lived on the Gogeál-lime rocks, before they settled on the volcanic land Pelau. As has been explained there, it was safety which made people take up their residence on the sheer rocks which were difficult to reach. But only a limited number of people could live there. Without any doubt any growth of their number was always one of the most important reasons to move to the flat land, where agriculture and catching fish were more profitable and easier to accomplish. A flourishing, well organized, and strong community was always considered to be the best protection. How many heads such a village-community formerly had is unfortunately not known. But there are a few clues, which make it possible to estimate it. SEMP. II p. 350 wrote in an appendix to his book that at WILSON's time the islands must have been much more densely inhabited. He mentions a war-trip to Melekéiok where first 150 boats with 1000 and then 300 boats (see above p. 98) were involved. In SEMPER's opinion these were only $\frac{1}{6}$ of the warriors of all of Palau, whom he estimated to be 13—14.000 men. His impression was that in 1783 the entire population must have been 40—50.000 people. At his time, in 1862, he counted the members of 42 men's clubs and calculated an average number of 17,8 men. Considering the entire number of men's clubs to be 218, then the male population was 4000 head strong. Thus for the year 1862 he estimated the maximum of the entire population to be 10.000 souls. In 1885, KUB. II p. 145 estimates the number of warriors to be 1500 and the entire population to be 4000. Ten years before it must have been 5000, so he thinks.

In 1832, HOLDEN estimated the population to have been 4000 (according to GULICK, see Vol. 1 p. 133), but this definitely is not enough.

Based on my records in 1910, thus 60 years after SEMPER, there were still 177 men's clubs in addition to 145 women's clubs. But a count according to these clubs was no longer possible as many of them were only in existence by name and mostly had only a few members.

But another statistical series can be used in order to come to some conclusion. In 1910, I still found 84 inhabited villages. Of those, only 57 still had a considerable number of men's houses next to the residences, and some men's clubs were still there. Next to these 84 villages 151 other (with Nggeiangēl and the deserted Gogeál-places even 169) uninhabited or deserted villages were mentioned. Some of them, according to legends, must have been quite big.

Today's 84 still existing villages have, as we will soon see, about 4000 inhabitants, thus 50 inhabitants on average. From the maps of the villages as well as from the genealogical charts we can deduce without difficulty that these villages once were far bigger. Thus, I think an average population of 100 is even too small rather than too high. In this case the 235 villages, which existed around 1800 (84 living ones and 151 uninhabited ones) (because tradition concerning the deserted ones does not reach further back), had about 20—25.000 inhabitants. This seems more probable to me than SEMPER's estimate of 40—50.000. The decrease of about 1000 in the years 1870 — 80, which has been only estimated by KUBARY seems quite probable, as well as its ending since then.

Concerning today's number of people a census by the German government from the year 1901 has already been mentioned in Vol. 1 p. 156. 3748 Palauans had been counted and this seems to be not enough. Higher numbers have been recorded in the magazine "Aus den Missionen" from 1912, 1913, and 1914, but they vary.

Thus we find for 1. 1. 1911:

	count	deaths in 1911	births in 1911
men	1359	47	—
women	1313	42
boys	738	18	36
girls	691	16	37
1911:	4101	123	73
1912:	4700
1913:	4300

Most certainly we are correct when we assume for 1910 the numbr of 4000.

That the land is not fertile was noticed first in 1783 by the Chinese of WILSON's expedition (see Vol. 1 p. 111) and I also noted there, on p. 243, several reasons for this fact. Therefore, I think SEMPER's estimate is far too high. The land with its infertility is too small to sustain such a number of people³⁶⁰.

As far as the area could be calculated, due to insecure maps, the entire land for settlements is about 400 square kilometers.

It is distributed approximately like this (according to my calculations):

Babldáob	375
Goréör without lime rocks, Ngarekobasang, and Malágäl	8
Pelíliou	20
a Ngeaur	8

411³⁶¹

The lime rocks are not included.

With SEMPER's above mentioned number of there would be more than 100 inhabitants per square kilometer. Concerning the vast uncultivated land (see Plan 2) this would have caused severe famines.

On the other hand today's relationship of a maximum of 10 inhabitants per square kilometer is frightfully small.

But it cannot be denied, that since having come in contact with the Whites, thus since 1783, the numbver of Palauans has strongly decreased.

What are the reasons for the decrease?

SEMPERsees the responsibility in the iron-age following too quickly after the stone-age. "The knowledge to work hard in order to acquire the meager needs for life there raises their energies and this reflects of course onto their needs. Artistic carvings, richly decorated soup bowls, beautifully decorated knives, made from turtle shell, as WILSONdepicts them in his book, seem not to have been rare in those days. Their long benches and round supports for the kukau-pyramids were decorated tastefully with white shells. In every household an often delicately woven cupboard was hanging above the stove; here the non-used food items were stored. Now there is no trace of all these activities." — This is not quite cwrong, as 50 years later all these things were still there, just as they had been described. On the contrary, as described in more detail below, I assume that with the introduction of iron, the artistry and industriousness of the Palauans really started!

Others like to blame the mongol-institution, the life of the girls in the bai, which is said to have had a corrosive influence on Palauan family-life.

But such an old institution, which once elevated the population, cannot have led to their destructionIt is obvious that recently this custom has had adverse effects in the small and dilapidated population, due to weakened club-institutions and the introduction of sicknesses.

The reasons for the decline of the South Pacific people also generally relate to Palau. These are:

1. The involvement of the Whites into the lives of the natives, into the structure of their society, their form of state and laws; the theft of people and land; the economic exploitation. All this caused an inability of defense and the natives' joy of life has been reduced.
2. The introduction of goods of European culture such as: cloths, corrugated metal, umbrellas, petroleum, fire arms, alcohol, tobacco, etc. When not monitored closely they create a disadvantage. In the worst sense they influenced the maidens of the country, who more and more hesitate to marry one of their own and loose the will to give birth.
3. The introduction of sicknesses, in correlation with lacking or insufficient medical attention.

All these influences and conditions have a dissolving effect, which I brought together under the name of *resolvent*³⁶². These are the childhood diseases of the time of the discoverers which can only be soothed or solved with the help of an understanding mission and a well-organized and fair government. The economic genocide such as the one of the Tasmanians and Australians, of the Maori in New Zealand, and the Hawaiians on the Sandwich-islands, because English settlers wanted to have their land. The displacement of islanders as forced laborers on the sugar plantations of Queensland and other recruitment of workers did not affect the Palau-archipelago, because the tiny piece of land, which is not very fertile, did not attract many settlers, and because for recruitment it was off the general course. Cruelties, such as on the Marianas, also did not happen in Palau, because the mission started here very late, as has been told in Vol. 1 p. 106. There it is also mentioned how, soon after WILSON and MCCLUER, a busy ship connection started; especially in the years 1790—1830, which has been mentioned there on p. 126—130. What kind of venereal diseases these visits caused, because of the easy availability of the Palauan women, can be imagined without difficulty.

The destructive influences on the families can be deduced from the following compilation, which has been gained from the genealogical charts of Goréör (1.—5.), Melekéiok (3.), Ngarakeai (1.—3.) and which comprises the III.—VII. generation, thus approximately from the time of WILSON (1783) to 1910, where the VIII. generation starts.

Marriages and number of children of some of the uppr-class Palauan families in the last 150 years, the childless marriages were not considered.

	number of couples	with 1 child	with 2 children	with 3 children	4 children	5-10 Children	total number of	double progression
until 1790 Gen. III	12	1 (8,3%)	3 (25,3%)	3 (25, %)	3 (25 %)	2 (17 %)	40	40
" 1820 " IV	30	9 (30")	6 (20 ")	5 (171	5 (17 ")	5 (17")	83	80
" 1850 " V	46	10 (22 "	14 (30 ")	12 (26 ")	2 (4,5 ")	8 (17")	139	160
" 1880 " VI	63	20 (32 ")	13 (21 ")	8 (13 ")	6 (9,5 ")	16 (25 ")	203	320
" 1910 " VII	42	16 (38 "	17 (40 1	4 (9,5 ")	1 (2 1	4 (9,5 1	91	640
	193						556	2240

You can see how in those first and highest families life was flourishing at around 1800, but also how then the number of children declined in relation to the marriages, until at around 1880 when a sheer decline appeared, which had already started earlier so that instead of 640 descendants which could have been possible, only there only 91 are appear and this in the high and well-to-do families. Especially the number of a single-child-families increased frightfully and the same must have happened with the childless families, which are not recorded here, because it was no longer possible to find out about the former times. According to nature only descendants are kept in the memory. Families without children are subject to changes. Nevertheless you can see from the data of children in relation to the following marriages 139: 63, 203: 42 how few marriages were fertile, how many descendants were unmarried and died without children, and how many children died already young.

Especially among the newly married ones, which I found in Goréör, having no children was widely established. Therefore, my wife, urged by the pleading "Station Manager", gave the assembled women urgent admonitions.

Having no children has its reasons: in most cases it is due to venereal diseases and a lacking will to give birth, which expresses itself in abortions. Thus the infertility is the more remarkable as the women of Palau are fertile. That $\frac{1}{6}$, in Gen. VI. even $\frac{1}{4}$, of the marriages have 5 —10 children is certainly a good sign. Families with 10 children were not rare. I refer to family Rul in Melekéiok (figure 6 ²); a nice family. About Mad Goukerdéu from Ngariélëp³⁶³ it was said that he had had 16 children, but obviously from several women.

Finally a sad example to illustrate the conditions:

Rois Miráir, the first lady of Goréör had 8 children (Gar. At. 4 Gen. IV). Of all her daughters only one had descendants, 4 children, of those 3 daughters. Again of all of them only 1 had 1 daughter. This great-grand child is the only hope of the old woman for her family.

In addition to this in 1910 her sons and grand children had no descendants either. Only in 1913 a Umang is said to have had a child from William's daughter (Abt. 1. figure 3 and 4), a mixture of White, Negro and Palau (see also bl. 24 p. 237).

It can hardly be put in words how much one man, for instance the English CHEYNE, and especially BLANCHARD³⁶⁴ have harmed the islanders. Nothing can illustrate his bad influence on the natives better than the account of his disastrous doings, Vol. 1 p. 135—143.

After the natives had done away with their oppressor, who had dishonored them, according to their own and the general human morale, and quite justly so, then comes the European justice and punishes their act severely, only because the White, the English, is supposed to be untouchable. No wonder when these children of nature as a people develop a deeply rooted bad temper. Their right is powerless, their women are considered fair game and their trade is restricted!

But a mentally sick body also loses its resistance against the influence of Diseases.

These are the ones that start the earliest and kill far more people of the untouched primitive people, than all wars and skirmishes. Even the Hamburger expedition experienced this. After their stay on Tobi the islanders fought with all their means against the bad influence when their dying on a big scale started.³⁶⁵ The Carolinians call this sickness, which occurs on the rarely visited islands after every visit of the ship, masélepik; on Palau it is called terétěr. We cannot be wrong in assuming that the bacilli of a cold, influenza, etc. can create great havoc on the virgin-like culture medium as represented by some primitive people.

According to general experience we can assume that already in the early days of discovery Palau had been subject to such epidemics, but we have no account about it.

Only in KUBARY I p. 11 do we find a very significant remark, which has already been mentioned in Vol. 1 p. 147. He writes that influenza happens every year, but in 1871, after the departure of the "Susanne", it was especially bad. "In Korrer all chiefs were sick, no canoe was sighted for weeks, no native stayed with me, all roads were empty and all activity had ceased."

In KUB. II p. 146 it has been mentioned that within 1 year (1882—83) in 133 communities of the Ngatělngál-Union 58 people had died of "Tretr", 7 at births, in Ngaregolóng 50, in Goréör 35, in Pelíliou 30, etc.

In any case the natives, too, blame the introduced sicknesses for the decline of the population. In 1907, during the visit of a Ibēdul, when the "District Administrator" asked him for the reasons of the decline, he replied: "The foreign ships bring all sorts of sicknesses into the country."

I, myself did not experience any epidemic. But the "Medizinalbericht aus den Deutsch. Schutzgebieten (Medical Report from the German Colonies)" 1911/12 recorded 494 cases of mesillepik in the phosphate plant on Angaur, of which 6 were fatal. Because so many Carolinians, Asians etc, are working on a Ngaur, it is not clear what is meant under "colored". Besides this, there were 18 cases of amoebic dysentery, 15 of leprosy, 4 cases of thiamine, 23 cases of frambesia recorded, and 15 cases of gonorrhea, 8 cases of bubo in addition to 14 cases of syphilis. Already the cases of thiamine point to the fact that Asians and Chinese were also involved, as this disease is not endemic in Palau.

Until recently the Palauan island had no medical service, with the exception of short visits of the government doctor of Yap and the doctor on a Ngeaur̃. Therefore, very little about the health situation of these people is known. Naturally I helped wherever I could. More below.

In 1912 an eye-disease occurred, which was healed very soon. Generally Palau can be called healthy, not considering introduced sicknesses.

Tokelau and ringworm (Tinea imbricata and circinata)³⁶⁶ are fortunately nearly absent, due the cleanliness of the natives, who bath 1—2 times a day in their bathing ponds. How sókēl came to Palau is told in story 107.

There are no harmful insects and poisonous snakes. Scolopender [centipedes] and scorpions are small and rare. Malaria is absent, as well as typhus, amoebic dysentery, etc. Elephantiasis, gatpáel or gēsúp, also mekngit a rákt "Bad Sickness", is rare. I doubt if there are any swellings of the scrotum, such as in Samoa, even though the stories 170 of Golungīs and 97 of Tagetbós indicate it. At least I have not seen it.

Leprosy, ngabedēs, ngilél a beap, seems to be established since a long time ago, as I have proven in Samoa. But recently this sickness seems to have been reintroduced by the Chinese, of whom I saw one patient in Ngasiás on Pelíliou (bl. 12). The swelling in story 9 could be diagnosed as leprosy. In recent times rub. II Ngiraikelāu of Goréör is said to have gotten sick with it.

Syphilis, gasēgēs, too, must have come at a rather early stage from the west, as story 43 of Galsibong and the case related in Vol. 1 p. 108 show. This one and gonorrhea are the main cause of the population's decline.

Frambesia [yaws] (kerdik story 201) which occurs in Yap and afflicts 100% of the population is rather rare on Palau, according to the Medizinalbericht d. D. Sch. (Medical Report) 1911/12, Unfortunately, eventually tuberculosis spread very much in the archipelago. The good looking girl a Tkelgáng (plate 14) died during my stay and many sick came to me for help.

More about local medicine see Vol. 3.

b) Anthropology.

The first news concerning the appearance of the natives comes from the discoverers in 1710 and has been written down in Vol. 1 p. 51, where their well-built bodies, the color of the skin and their hair is mentioned. Also concerning the 2. journey in 1712 some observations has been mentioned p. 99. Later visitors also mentioned it, though briefly.

Only the zoologist SEMPERII p. 361 wrote more in more detail about the physical characteristics, based upon his "specific view". He thinks: "that in the hair as well as in the form of the face a distinct mixture of two races can be identified, the Malayan-Polynesian and the Papuan". His report will later on be partly cited. He also has the skull that he (SEMP. II p. 363) found in Ngabúkěd, which thus seems to be authentic. A. B. MEYER reports about it.³⁶⁷

KUBARY also just makes general remarks, concerning the physical characteristics of the Palauans.

Only the Russian v. MIKLUCHO-MACLAY deals with them in a scientific manner. His works have been mentioned in Vol. 1 p. 149 as well as in the bibliography.

At SCHMELTZ-KRAUSE we can find a skull from the Goddefroy Museum, which has already been mentioned by VIRCHOW³⁶⁸. Besides this one also there is also the skull of a child from a certain Schetelig. Who this was I do not know.

In Dec. 1906 while staying on Yap (Vol. 1 p. 161), I measured 9 soldiers of the local police force, who were from Palau. Dr. P. HAMBRUCH used all my measurements of the travel of the Planet in the "Planet-Werk" Vol. V³⁶⁹, where the data can be found. He then accompanied the Hamburger-Expedition as an anthropologist and made 50 measurements on living persons on Palau as well as collecting some skulls, etc.

The general results of the expedition will be published in form of a special volume Anthropology, thus I only report briefly here. I just point to the pictures of those natives, who were genealogical native. In my opinion, at the beginning of his work, the anthropologist should start with a genealogical chart, and most of all investigate those people who have been included there. If you would start the other way around and want to genealogically determine the measured people, you would become aware what you have measured.

How much mixed blood there is can be seen in the tables. From the history of the discovery (see also Peliliou p. 271) it is well known that Chinese were trading with the Palauans long before the Whites. In 1793, MC CLUER brought also a Chinese to the archipelago who, in 1798 SNOOK took again with him (Vol. 1, p. 126). In 1794 MC CLUER left with 3 Malaysians. About these Malaysians HOKIN p. 26 says: "The Malay Sugel, who had been on the island at the time of captain WILSON, was still alive and held no small part of the esteem and favour of the king. He had a family of four to five children, who were born on these islands. The crew of a Malaysian proa had drifted to the southern islands or Pellelew, and had been brought by the natives to their island", etc. In 1838 a boat with 7 Malaysians was stranded on the same island (Vol. 1 p. 131). At the time of KUBARY Chinese workers had stayed several years on Goréör, who, of course, had left their marks. But after the German dominion the Japanese came. About 50 of them stayed already at my time in the archipelago (see Vol. 1 p. 156). The family of the Negro Gibbon has been mentioned at Goréör.

A Chamoro-settlement (in 1901 there were 43) has been mentioned at Ngatmél p. 38. Since 1783 the Whites have been flooding Palau, as well as the money producing Yapese, and the Carolinians who settled or drifted here. (story 8) who come here to make their money, and the settled (story 8) and drifted Carolinians. The history of the discovery relates everything that is known. More information and in more detail is in the genealogical charts, though most of it is hidden in darkness.

Thus we have to admit that measuring without any genealogical charts can be misleading.

Especially dubious though must be measurements of skulls when nothing is known about their origins, only that they come from a certain country. In this respect I point to LUDWIG BAUER's work "Beiträge zur Karniologie der Baining [Contributions to the Craniology of the Baining] (Neu-Pommern)", published by the Archiv für Anthropologie. There, on p. 193, the place of Brachyhypsiakrokephalie is indicated: "the western foothills of the Carolines, Palau and Yap, the Kaniët-Group and the north western Gazelle Peninsula, the residence of the Baining". Regardless of whether this remark is correct or not, I only want to state that BAUERpp. 184 a. 185 indicates for Palau 83,8 degrees of latitude and 85,6 of longitude and cites KRUSE as the author. Thus these numbers come from the catalogue of SCHMELTZ-KRAUSE (see lit.), average

							♂♀
Body-size:	v. M.M.	♂ (25)	152,0—172,0 cm	♀(12)	145,0—159,0 cm	—	—
	KR.	♂ (9)	151,6—173,6 cm	—	—	—	161,5 —
	HA.	♂ (38)	146,0—174,0 cm	♀(12)	147,0—159,0 cm	161,6	152,7

Accordingly the Palauans belong to the medium tall ones, nearly to the small races. But the general impression is that they are of medium height, because among the rubak you can see some imposing figures. The well-known Arikoko (a Regúgër) most certainly measured 180 cm. SENFFTsays of him: "His tall and muscular body, with an expressive and energetic face and his white, long beard and bushy eyebrows strike an imposing figure; a marvelous model for an artistic representation of Neptune." (See part I plate 4). You can also see him on plate 12 ³.

One especially dark colored and another especially light colored boy are shown on color plate 20, a middle brown shade Vol. 1 plate 1 and here on plate 1. The soldier Makréus (HA. 130) from Melekéiok, the tallest one I measured, I found yellowish-brown (R. 6; v. L. 22). But these are exceptions as can be deduced from the following explanations. Their descent is not known to me.

HAMBRUCH1 p. 42 says: "The color of the skin is a shade of transition from the rose flesh-colored to yellowish-brown" (3, 4 v. L.). But I am sorry to note that in the course of t my notes' transcription some confusion occurred between the color plates of RANKEand LUSCHAN. Thus I want to rectify it here, because HAMBRUCHalso did not mention the names of the persons who were measured and I will make up for this here:

HA. I p. 52	name	origin:	color ton (Planetband V p. 28)	RANKE (R.)	v. LUSCHAN (v.L.)
125	a Rmosgár	Ngaregolóng	Face: medium-brown	4	24
			Body: dark-brown	3	25-26
126	Mëuáng	a Iraî	Face: light-brown	5	22
			Body: medium-brown	4	26
127	a Greiuk	a Imelîk	Face: light-brown	5	23
			Body: medium-brown	4	25
128	Ngumungórd	Melekéiok	Face: brown-yellow	6	22
			Body: medium-brown	4	28
129	Kartél	a Gól	dark-brown	3	29-31
130	Idbá	Ngivál	medium-brown	4	25
131	Makréus	Melekéiok	brown-yellow	6	22
132	a Trokl	Goréör	Face: light-brown	5	24
			Body: medium-brown	4	25
133	Takabóug	Ngaramlungúi	Face: light- brown	5	23
			Face: dark-medium-brown	3-4	28

Nr. 128 — 133 have been depicted in HA.I p. 43.

Thus 2 were dark-brown, 6 medium-brown, and 1 brown-yellow.

The shade therefore varies very much. The first observers confirmed this.

The first discoverers talked about the mulatto skin coloring of the natives; others were said to have been quince-colored, and others again were even darker (Vol. 1 p. 51). SEWERII p. 361 means: "The body color varies between a light yellow-brown, copper-brown and quite intensive brown-black." VON MIKLUCHO-MACLAYII p. (106) says briefly: The color of the skin shows the extremes: nr. 21, 30 and nr. 43 of the BROCAplate, which = 17, 21, and 27 v. LUSCHAN, thus light-brown, medium-brown, and dark-brown.

v.M.M. draws attention to the different coloring of the skin of different parts of the body³⁷¹, as can also be seen from my chart above. On p. 105 he expresses himself like this: "The natives of the Palau archipelago, in respect to their physical-anthropological habitat, cannot be separated from the Yap islanders, and especially not from the West-Micronesians (who I have seen). In case you want to find differences, the first ones have a more stout figure and slightly darker complexion, and are thus the main basis of this view".

This is the general impression, which you get from the coloring of the Palauans. W. MÜLLER calls the Yapese a light-brown type of people, which definitely is true concerning the women, where I even found numerous yellow-brown ones (R.6) (see HA. I p. 44 and 54).

Thus, the Palauans are one shade darker than the Yapese, and stand in-between the Micronesians and Melanesians.

Their hair is also similar.

The first report (part I p. 51) talks about frizzy, long and reddish hair.

SEMPER II p. 362 says: "The hair is black, sometimes shiny, but mostly dull, and then when not oiled, it has a brownish touch. The shiny black hair is usually straight or only slightly frizzy and grows in big curls, which are, strangely coiffured, so characteristic of the Papuan inhabitants of the actual Melanesia. But both genders wear their frizzy tufts of hair very simple, combed from the front to the back, and collected at the back of the head in a simple big knot. When they are taking a bath they open this knot and you are surprised about the amount of their hair, which covers all parts of their head in the same length just like a big round cap".

v.M.M. II p. (106) says: "Both genders wear their hair long and fasten it at the back of their head in a knot. For a man when it has not yet reached the length in order to form a knot, and when it is delicately curled or frizzy and also combed, then it looks quite similar to the big Papuan hair style. Straight hair also exists but mostly it is curly³⁷² to different degrees in different grades. In order to become acquainted with the frequency of the different forms of hair, I looked more closely at the hair of 20 men which were standing by chance around me: 4 had straight hair, 7 curly (bouclé) and 9 more or less frizzy (frisé), which, as has been already mentioned, when combed and not looked upon from too nearby does not look very different from Papuan hair. A beard is worn seldom. The facial hair of men is usually plucked, but not in the armpits and in the genital area. But the women pluck precisely these areas".

The hairstyle resembling a Papua-crown is shown in the picture in Vol. 1 plate 4; there you can also see the medium wavy hair on picture 2 and 4 which you can even call wide-wavy. But the really frizzy hair on picture 3 is the mixture of a Negro and a female Palauan, which I never observed elsewhere, whereas normal frizzy hair is not rare, as shown on the picture of the man from Pelíliou (Figure 57). Of the nine persons investigated, 4 had long (wide) wavy hair, 4 medium-wavy and one short (narrow) wavy hair.

It is remarkable that, just like William Gibbon, a half cast Negro-Palauan, also Johann, a half cast White-Yapese, and Otto the grand child of an Englishman (plate 3 left part I) had curly hair (as a counter example to the right side of them three real Palauan boys with wide-wavy hair) whereas William's daughter with a Palauan woman still shows traces of small-curly-frizzy Negro hair, though generally has already wide-wavy hair.

Actually William's hair was noticeable due to its characteristics. But from time to time his descent was even more noteworthy. Whenever he, who was a very clean person and bathed several times a day, was prevented from bathing then the well know body odor of the Negroes was prevalent. This I never observed with Malayan people, and of course just as little with Palauans.

Concerning the length of hair, I report to have measured the men with 50 cm (as for instance HA. 128). Some of the women have 1 m and even longer hair (see plate 18⁴), as it is the rule with the flat-wavy hair of the female Micronesians. But I got the impression that they like to keep their hair below the length of an arm. In Vol I p. 99 long hair is also mentioned and the first picture of the Palauans (pict 4 F p. 71) shows clearly hair falling down to the shoulders, as well as full beards on both on the right side.

I did not see hair on the entire forehead in Palau, as v.M.M. p. 104 reports it from Yap But I did notice that the hair in the front is often very short, thus it frequently forms a garland on the front. Numerous pictures show this quite clearly.

Concerning v.M.M.'s report about the beard, above p. 302, I cannot confirm this for the time I was there. Most of the older men had beards, often quite tousled, and bristly, but often also long and flowing, as the picture of the formerly mentioned Arikoko shows, which has also been published in HANS VOGEL "Eine Forschungsreise im Bismarkarchipel", p. 305. That beards also existed in the old times, is shown in Figure 4 F in Vol I p. 71.

Mustaches were also frequently found. Of the nine examined ones, nearly all had at least a trace of it.

The old people have medium faint body-hair.

Bald heads are not so rare with old men, also in former years, as the pictures of a Rāklāi from Melekéiok (plate 6¹), of Ngirtemei from Nggēsár (plate 8¹), and of the old man from Pelíliou (Figure 57) show.

Figure 57 Old man with a bald head, from Pelíliou.

The color of the hair is black to brown-black.

The form of the head is known due to not very extensive, but sufficient measurements. Those of v.M.M. are known as an average, the others as those from individuals. Of the 50 results of measurements, which I got from HAMBRUCH, I counted the length-by-width-index of 37 men (minim. 54,0; max. 94,9) to be an average of 72,7.

Living:

authors:	length-by-width-index:		below 75 (76):	75-80 (75-81):	above 80(81):	length-by-height- index:
	♂	♀
v.M.M.	(25) 71,4-83,5	(12) 75-81,6	4 (?)	21 (?)	9 (?)	?
Krämer	(9) 75,4-83,3	—	— (1)	7(6)	2 (2)	67,5
Hambruch	(38) 75,13-90,56	(12) 77,09-91,30	— (1)	16(22)	34(27)	72,7

Skulls:

Krause (origin?)	83,8	—	—	—	1	85,6
A.B. Meyer (Semper)	75,1	—	— (1)	1 (0)	—	77,3
Virchow (Schetelig)	81,5	—	—	—	1	80,4

Thus the skull of the Palauans is "mesokephal" to "brachykephal" but the high numbers of "hypsikephalie" of the head described by KRAUSE and VIRCHOW, which is of unknown origin, have been proven wrong by the skull SEMPER found in Ngabúkēd, and by the measurements of HAMBRUCH. There is an "orthocephalie" with a tendency to "chamaecephalie". BAUER's "brachyhypsikephalie" is out of question.

The face of the Palauans is of a type, which is quite common. It can clearly be seen with older women. Plate 18² is a good example. Most of all the protruding cheekbones and a sad touch around the eyes. But the face of girls is more rounded, snub nosed, with round nostrils as I already described them in Samoa, and as v. M.M. shows them on his plate XI 4, and as can be seen with the girl on plate 18¹ at the bottom on the right-hand side. The same picture shows a laughing woman, where you will look in vain for the nose wrinkle, which v.M.M. shows on his plate XI 1 and p. (107) and which he describes as characteristic.³⁷³ I consider this information exaggerated.

1. Women from Melekéiok.

2. Old Palauan woman with monetary jewelry.

3. Three Palauan girls.

4. Woman from Mangal'áng

I also could not notice a perforated septum, which v.M.M. mentions to be still widely practiced³⁷⁴ and which has been confirmed by SEMPERII p. 336. This seems not to be done recently.

SEMPERII p. 362 also mentions Jewish noses, which are not mentioned by v.M.M. Noses that are slightly bent are not rare, especially with old people, as the plates 8¹ and 13³ show, but they cannot be called Semitic. If SEMPER brings them into a connection with a Papua-descent, then we have to consider that they can also be found on older men, I also observed them in other places such as for instance on Apamama in the Gilbert islands³⁷⁵.

The girl on plate 14¹ has a broad and flat back of a nose. She and the one on plate 19² also show that sometimes the eyes are not straight.

Finally v.M.M. also talks about a considerable width of the "palpebra tertia", which is supposed to be common. The laughing old woman on plate 18¹ has such a covering-wrinkle in a remarkable size and the creation of two outer corners of the eyes. I could not see an obvious "epicanthus".

The ears are of medium size, the lobes mostly perforated. Palauans perforate them sideways. All the people I examined had small sideways slits. There is no widening as for instance on the Ralik-Ratak Islands.

These are the most important facts about the physical characteristics, in reference to the anthropological special work. — Finally the Disposition of the Palauans.

Since old times they had a reputation for being rough and greedy. This is already mentioned in the reports of the discoverers (Vol. I p. 67 and 99), even though they were themselves as rowdy as the natives. This can be noticed especially well in Kadu's report, CHAMISSOp. 133, where the indecency in their sexual relationships is pointed out also from another point of view, which without any doubt can be ascribed to the unruly high spirits of the men's clubs. Here I only want to remind of story 161 about club Ngaratatiróu.

In 1783 WILSON only reports well. One of his men remained back out of enthusiasm (p. 117). Ten years later even Captain MC CLUER (p. 126) decided to stay among the natives. However, after only 15 months his stay was spoiled for him to such an extent, that he left the island in an open boat. More detailed accounts about his adventures are not available. The first reliable reports about piracy and their lust for killing date from the year 1823 (p. 130), 1832 (p. 133) and 1839 (p. 131). Later visitors had better experiences, though. How CHEYNE was allowed to behave on this island, until he went too far has been reported in detail on p 135—142. Incidentally he was the one who suspected in newspapers reports in Singapore and Hong Kong the Palauan people to be pirates, as we know from SEMP. II p. 337.

Thus the white people must also have been to blame. SEMPER relates in such an appealing way how well you could live among the Palauans. He had lived among them for nearly one year and held them in great esteem. Though he was also disappointed, as he relates at the end of his book, p. 322. There he starts to complain about the people from Pelíliou, who have a reputation of being the rowdiest ones, as already mentioned on p. 264.

KUBARY, who can be considered the most knowledgeable person about the old Palauan ways, also had to suffer among them as can be read in KUB. I p. 1—29. Later he describes them in detail in his chapter "Social Institutions" (II), especially the greed.

But, nevertheless, he fared well among them, and his numerous works prove how much he valued these people. In the course of prolonged contact with the natives, we the white people tend to allow ourselves to be led to measure their customs and traditions from a European point of view. Often injured vanity or an offended exaggerated sense of neatness and tidiness cause us to be annoyed. Back at home, we gain a more composed perspective and then the good traits are more noticeable, which are always there next to the bad ones and once they are awoken they very often develop beautifully.

v. M. M. says: "To me they seem to be mendacious, taciturn, and exceedingly selfish." Though he assumes that their character is made worse by the European influence.

In 1881 SCHMELTZ-KRAUSE writes on p. 409 that immorality, greediness and deceit are the three most notable characteristics mentioned by new observers. Concerning the last one, I cannot contribute any out of my own experience, as I have not experienced anything the like. Also the local stories show little that could attribute to this verdict. Though it is a fact that in former times every trick was used in order to obtain a head trophy. But this can be considered a warlike action where, as we know from our own experience, all lower impulses are unleashed and strengthened.

But the Palauans were also able to be very cruel, as is shown for instance by the killing of an old chief or head of a family because of the succession and the heritage (KUB: II p. 43). Especially where revenge was concerned or a high chief had been insulted, nothing could hold them back. Then it was not only a question of destroying big villages because of a minor incident (such as Ngarekekla'u story 8, Ngíptál story 19, Ngáruangēl 20, Nggeiangēl 22, Ngareböku 86, Goikúl, 143, Ngardolólok 161, etc.) or of chasing the inhabitants of an entire village into the burning flames of a pyre as related in the stories 116, 123, and 161 (compare KUB. II p. 97 and IV p. 79). Also story 59 about Túlei, who beheaded his lover out of anger is quite remarkable in this context.

Therefore, there are many reports about revenge. It stands out how Dir'ringulbai revenged her murdered brother (story 207), who demanded the death of an entire men's club. But also minor aims of revenge show well developed ways, stories 53, 61, 76, 206, etc., a sign how difficult it is for Palauans to forget suffered injustice.

But stronger than the urge for vengeance is the greed for money, through which the first one can easily be appeased. Already SEMPERII p. 61 noted this, then KUB. II p. 44 and in many other instances, MIKLUCHO-MACLAY etc. The German government made the same experience and it is written in the "Deutschen Kolonialblatt (German Colonial Paper)" of 1906: "to own money is life threatening". Indeed for a piece of valuable money everything can be obtained, each sort of adultery and every murder is thus atoned for. The one who is rich is allowed to sneeze aloud, can throw scrap food against the wall of the house behind him, as is told in story 61, etc. Already at the invention of money the greedy chiefs squeezed the defecating money-bird dead and story 161 deals basically with finding out who is the richest man and killing him. From childhood onward all the pondering and striving of the Palauan is orientated towards money, toward his bead money, and from this point of view he has to be judged.

In comparison to this the sensuality, of which the Palauan is accused, recedes into the background. For me he seems to be not more carnal than the other tribes in the South Pacific, and for certain the inhabitants of the Ralik Ratak Islands are much more unbridled than the Palauans. I mention this because the mongol-institution (see there) and the pictures in the bai are always considered a sign of depravity. But the small number of obscene songs contradicts it; I did not leave out any because of this reason, whereas in my collection of songs from Jaluit there are many that cannot be reproduced. It is quite sweet to see the little children in Palau, how they hold their small hands in front of their faces when they are ashamed. It is well known how strictly separate the female bathing spots are. During the time I stayed there with my wife or alone, I could not detect the slightest sign of immodesty. I would consider the women and girls of maiden-like modesty, as CHAMISSO did on Ratak, if I had not known the way of Pacific islanders and especially the habits of the Palauans.

The female exhibitionism depicted in the dilukai-figures on the bai and mentioned in story 92, as well as the love schools, speak bluntly. During the performance of dances at a late hour omogeiĕp, the lifting of the skirts, quite often happens. Though the existence of the begel, the extended labia minora, explains the self confidence of a woman sufficiently.

Furthermore KADU (Vol. I p 133) reports that he found the Palauans bare of any modesty, thus they were satisfying their natural urge in front of everyone. Around the same time a Spaniard also reports such detestable habits of the islanders. Probably it was life in the bai that allowed such observations.

Because, in their high spirits, the men's clubs were capable of all sorts of disgraceful deeds.

Names for the different sorts of perversions are current among most of the primitive people, so that one will hear from any native expressions for onanism, pederasty, irrumatio, cunnilingus, etc. which in our society not even all the doctors know. This you have to take into account when judging the natives.

As everywhere next to this immorality you can also encounter exceptional affection between the sexes, love and fidelity to death, as is told in story 17^c about Máriar and Góreng, story 59 about Túlei, etc. Though in the last case there is another characteristic as attendant circumstance, a deep depression, to give oneself up for lost, especially when treated with frequent hostility of relatives. In several stories we can see how a man is seeking death when it is wanted, just as Ngirangameusog in story 207. Others leave the earth and go to heaven like Madlutk (story 203) or they go to the moon like Gogit (story 6).

On the other hand courage is praised and countless heroes are mentioned, like Bekëu rebódël (story 50), a Ugél re gulsíang (story 204), Ngirailangaláng (story 205), Ngiragókëbai and Ngiramoai (story 198) etc. Next to them there exists a pathetic cowardliness, which caused some individuals to not spurn even the taking of the heads of women or even children, in order to show off with them. And the people even approved of it.

The initial spark for an act happens very often through insulting words, which would be taken in daily life with laughter, though in the course of a battle provoke fury. These are special insults of the mother: pedíng, ukíl, begél, talakamákl a delám, the bad odor, the private part, the labia minora and the fat mouth of your mother!

Evident bravery cannot be denied, but stamina is definitely not the strong point of the Palauans. Thus it happens that the Palauans are often accused of being lazy. Here we find the same reason as with many primitive people: favorable life circumstances, a small number of people in a warm and pleasant climate. I may ask with a certain right how you can call a Palauan lazy who builds such beautiful houses and long stone paths. On the other hand I have to take into account that in case the chiefs do not assign a task to a men's club, they allow the wood of their houses to be eaten by ants, the houses to collapse and the stone paths to crumble. Nobody will do anything when he is not paid for it. This is the custom. Though once a job is accepted it is executed accurately and diligently. Our servants, depicted and mentioned in Vol. I, were constantly working hard for little money, according to our estimation. They worked in the house, on the boat, in the kitchen, with the quill or the pencil, whatever we wanted from them. It was a lot of unaccustomed and heavy work for them; nevertheless it was executed without any grumbling. And what do the women achieve in the taro patches! Such people you cannot call lazy! They also lack the merriness necessary for carelessness and laziness. You can hardly hear them laugh and sing. Music and jewelry is nearly completely missing. In comparison to the vain, lazy and delicate women of other islands, the industrious Palauan women appear like unsophisticated country-women in contrast to smart city girls.

They do not like to appear lazy, quite on the contrary, especially when asked they generally consider themselves as very busy kmal magasáng; in the journal "Aus den Miss." from 1910, p. 32 it is nicely depicted. SEMP. II p. 324 also talks about makesáng. Thus also in this respect they were unjustly judged.

Finally one bad side of the people is their ungratefulness, which seems to stem from their greediness. That it is also oriented against the doctor seems to me a general evil. A few experiences might illustrate this:

Chief Mad of Ngabúkēd, SEMPER's old Arakalulk was suffering from amoebic dysentery. Nearly every day I went from Galáp to see him. I counseled him, brought medicine, food prepared by my wife, even gave him a woolen blanket to wrap himself in, etc. In short, I provided everything he needed so that the old man got well again. When I was about to move away I saw in his house a simple mat that attracted me ethnographically. I asked his wife in jest how much she wanted for it and she wanted a quite remarkable price!

My daily consultation hours in Koror were soon very popular, and consumed a large amount of time every day, counterproductive to my ethnographical work. At the same time we were often lacking food. Even though I did mention it from time to time, nobody brought any. Finally I decided whoever came to the doctor had to bring at least some coconuts, taro, etc. Only then did some of them bring food and in due course my time was no longer needed so much.

Finally one day, a man in Ngarbagéd, about half an hour from Goréör, suffered a paralysis of both legs (broken spine due to a fall) and he could no longer relieve himself. Three days he had already lain there without any opening. Then I inserted a catheter and freed him from his tormenting pain. Because I could not come every day I left the metal catheter there with precise instructions how to boil it before using it, etc. But nevertheless an infection of the bladder developed and blood appeared. Thus I took the catheter with me in order to replace it with a much softer one. Only then and out of fear I would leave him in the lurch, the man sent a few pieces of pork.

This insensitivity can also be deduced from the stories, as for instance story 195 where the rubak in Goréör and Melekéiok did not want to be reminded of their promise to give their helpers a present. In the same story, as well as in stories 14 and 150, the trait of the people to greedily fall on something so that for their leaders nothing or only a bad part is left over is mentioned. Thus in many cases the village gods are fobbed off with a lower place in the hierarchy, so that the priests could not claim all the goods for themselves.

One assets also must be mentioned: people cling to their old beliefs, especially their clothing and their houses. It would be lamentable if the Mission misled them, out of the wrong shyness.

In all this we see that in the Palauan people good as well as bad characteristics are mixed, though I want to point out that the former are prevailing. A bad influence is their greed for money, which causes miserliness and ingratitude, also the striving for rank and titles, which does not shrink from murder, and the addiction to cheap glory, which does not shy away from depravity.

The installation of the bai-girls also damaged family life and supports their self-interest. The government and the mission were able to drive back and suppress this evil.

On the other hand, the people are good-natured, serious, artistically inclined and, when treated right, also industrious. When family life can be promoted, then it has a bright future. The best way to achieve this is by installing some doctors for keeping up the general health and order, so that the old, expensive and often ineffective government administration will no longer be necessary. We should always try to achieve that the natives on whom we are more or less forcing ourselves, will govern themselves as far as necessary. Then the welfare of the people and the joy of life will increase and trade as well as science will profit.

c. Language.

There is only one language prevalent in the archipelago, with minor differences in the south and in the north. During my stay virtually nothing was known about it. WILSON had already published 270 words, MC CLUER 650, CHEYNE around 70, SEMPER approximately 1000, and BUTRÓN³⁷⁶ ca. 225 in some lists³⁷⁷. The later researchers published nothing the like. In '73 we find in SEMPER's text on pp. 314—318 only two chants mostly in a form of non-interpretable original text, and in KUBARY's work there is a short chant in III, p. 6 and in VIII, p. 160, further on there are a few sentences in VII, pp. 129—131 and on p. 160;

otherwise there are everywhere numerous individual words. However, until 1910 there was no trace of any grammar, apart from a few hints by SEMPER.

In the year 1910, when I left Palau, the Capuchin Mission at the Printing House in Freiburg in Breisgau published a catechism and one biblical story as a forerunner, yet, only in Palauan without any German. Then, in the following year, the grammar of the Palauan language written by Bishop SALVATOR WALLESER was published, and a Palauan dictionary with ca. 4500 words followed in 1913.

For several years I had observed the studious and diligent work of this efficient Capuchin missionary. Due to so many other necessary tasks I would have preferred not to deal with the grammar of this language, all the more because it is one of the most difficult ones of all the languages in the South Pacific, as far as they are known. I cannot imagine anything more intricate³⁷⁸. Anyone who just looks briefly into my studies will understand this. How easy was it in comparison in Samoa where, just like in the Malayan language, there is for all intents and purposes no grammar, and where an excellent dictionary already existed!

I, however, was forced to deal with the language of the Palauans, because in 1909—10 WALLESER's work had not yet been published. It also was a particular concern of mine to finish a monograph of this group of islands. How would it be possible to translate original texts and chants without both? How should words be written down without at least a certain knowledge of the language?

The travail was beyond all bearing, considering my stay of only 10 months, of which I could only dedicate the last 4 months to studying the language thoroughly, while at the same time also completing my record of stories, legends, etc.

As I had collected my data concerning the language from another perspective than the mission, I found, despite the head start and other advantages, quite a few indications that allowed a comparison and confirmed and added to the already known. I was able to add more than 2000 new words to WALLESER's dictionary, which will be compiled in Part VIII.

Just when I had finished the draft of my grammar, WALLESER's work was published, so that the following work of mine is independent and entirely uninfluenced. The examples of words have also been taken from my own recordings³⁷⁹. When many of my records are surprisingly similar, despite the difficult orthography, I have to remark that according to my knowledge, WALLESER, also used for his work William Gibbon, whom I had trained, as his interpreter. On the other hand, there are also remarkable discrepancies, as for instance:

	WALL.		KR.
uadám, uádíl	father, mother	gadám, gadíl ³⁸⁰
mechiuáiu	to sleep	mageiváiu
trüöch	ten	trüüŕg
uüid	resin	vüiěd
chiul	millipede	gěvúl

These are some of the biggest differences.

WALL. often uses u instead of v, as can be seen above in machiúáiu; an e for my short ă, as for instance in the verbs mengetákl instead of măng ătákl, mangang instead of măngáng, etc. Or an e instead of o, like chälolem instead of gělólŕm, mengól bai-girl instead of móngol, chelegól sand instead of gologól; or e instead of u like in chutem ground instead of *gutŕm*³⁸¹.

This is because the short e often sounds like ă, ĩ, ŕ, or ŭ. Wherever this was clearly prominent, I kept also these last vocals.

When it comes to ch and g, I was not able to come to an oral agreement with the Mission while still in the field, as has been mentioned in the introduction of Volume I. As the Palauan reader had already been printed, they thought that no changes could be made any more. Formerly I wrote th and g, where the missionaries wrote and still write d and ch. Concerning the first issue I gave way, writing instead of the English th sound, which already WILSON had written down, a d. However, instead of ch I wrote g, because it is shorter and the sound is not pronounced like a ch. I hoped the Mission might accommodate me, meeting me halfway by accepting the g. Unfortunately the Mission did not agree, thus there is a deviation here; I believe it is to my advantage. We only have to look at the words gologódog and cholochoolodoch, Geiúgěl and Cheiúchěl in order to see the advantage of the spelling. Besides, to me it seems in the Palauan language the soft g has no right to exist next to the k, while b and p surely exist next to each other, although often difficult to distinguish.

More about the pronunciation below.

By the way, quite understandably, the different observers recorded very differently. This can be seen in the names of landscapes and villages in Part III, in the scholarly piece about the name Palau in Volume I, p. 182, and in the list of names on p. 178.

For good measure, I present some words which have been recorded by nearly all visitors since 1783.

	1783—93	1863	1863	1883	1913
	WILS. MC CLUER	CHEYNE	SEMP.	KUB.	WALL.	KR.
axe (iron)	koypattle	kybakle	—	kaybaklchäbáklgëbákl
bai-girl	moong ole	armingowe	armungul	armengólmengólmóngol
betel nut	pook, pooaack	bouk	bua, buyo	—	búuch	búög
boat	ulm-mallayee	imly	a mlai	a mlay	mlái	mlai house	Py, Playe, Ply, plick, plim,	ply	bai blai	bay blay	bai blai	bai blai
club	—	klubaguel	klöbbergöll	klobogól	klebególl	klebëkól
(my) friend	succalic	sukaleek	sakalik	sukalil	sachelik	sagalík
big	clowe clow	klow	klo	klou	klou	klóu small	kickaray	kakeray	kikeri	kikeriy	gegeréi	kekeréi good	ongeel weel	ungeel	ungil	ungil	ungíl	ungil
man	arracat (lakad) ³⁸²	arrakath	lakad	lakad	lachad ³⁸³	lagád
woman	ardeil arthiel	arthiel	ardil	dil	dil	dil
child	nalakell	gualack	—	ngálek	ngal(e)k	ngálek
moon	pouyer	a puel	buyöl	buyúl	búiel	búiel
knife	oyless	oleiss	roläss	—	cholés	golés
fool	thingaringer	ringaringa	dangeringl	tingaringer / dengerénger		it. rudder	peesorse	posoas	—	bosó	besós	besós
stone	paathe, parth, pat	peath	bad	pat	bad	bad
rope	cray, kur-rail	keel	kil	kerël	kerräl	ker'rël
pot	collokara	olakang	—	—	cholegáng/golakáng

The examples presented above will explain the different ways of giving names, which we just discussed.

Concerning these names there is another peculiarity. In individual cases the final syllables of a number of them can be changed, thus also changing the purpose of the word; for instance the words Melekéiok and a Imeúngs, where Melekeióng and aImëóng do not indicate the place but the community of chiefs of this place.

This is not the case with other names. We heard:

Ngabiúl	and Ngabēi
Ngëruoluóbél	" Ngëruoluóng
Ngabúkëd	" Ngabóng
Ngartmúiël	" Ngartmóng
Ngarametúkër	" Ngarametóng

a Ulimáol	and a Ulimáng
Gurdmáu»	Gurdmáng
Mangal'láng	» Mangal'lákl
Gólei	» Golékl

Certainly these transformations can be judged similarly, just as the sound changes of individual words, when they collide with others, as for instance:

sei that one, but sel bitang that side, bitang side, but bital a blai side of the house,
kekeréi small góbak chief, but kekerél lóbak small gobak.

This sound change makes the study of the language especially difficult.

Further examples are:

Kekeréi Gosobulngāu Small G. = Kekerél Losobulngāu.
maltált gogéál the big lime rocks = *maltált ogeáng*³⁸⁴.
maltalt goreóměł the big woods = maltált ureóměł
dilúgěs gongós northeast = dilúgěs ungós etc.

We already presented above an example, kekeréi into kekerél, for the changes of final vowels of prepositions caused by contact. The compound names in the lists of constitutions provide many more, as for instance Geseberkmei for Gesebeĩ ra kmei (p.60), a Guó ra skěsáng for a Guóng . . . (p. 61), etc.

In the formation of the possessive, as well as in the verbs, there are so many examples in the following pages that it seems needless to prove it here in detail. For now just the word galíd "god" that becomes gěsúl "his god". As to the verbs, we only have to look at the verb merŭl, "to make", of which the imperative is leł'lí, etc.

Finally I have to mention that the entire archipelago speaks the same language. Only in a few words are there slight differences in the north and in the south. For instance people say:

in the north	English	in the south
iáog	drop of water	iáiǒg
búrǒg	bai's horizontal beam	brúgel
galáng	see death cult Part. VI	diágas
sěingí a ngoikāu	" " " " "	gorengí a ngoikóng
rong	taro	kúkau

The other differences are not worth mentioning.

As regards the origin of the language, it is one of the Austronesian languages. It will be the task of the linguists to give more detailed information in the expedition's volume about the language. I only want to note here that the distinctive existence of possessive suffixes is common to Micronesian and Melanesian languages.

Besides these, there are sporadically and rarely the prepositioned possessive words of Polynesia, aku my, kou your, lou his. More about this further down. The prefix ka is similar to the Malayan ga, etc.

There is a small but certainly noticeable amount of vocabulary in common with the Polynesian languages. This is so important because it indicates the rule for the pronunciation of the possessive suffixes.

WALL. II, p. 132 says, "a common rule for forming the possessive suffixes cannot be made, because it appears too diversely and arbitrarily." However, this is not correct. There exists a rule that can be deduced from the Polynesian endings of a word.

I give a few examples.

English	Palau basic form	possessive form	Samoa	Malayan	German stone	bad	bădúl	fatu	batu	Stein
land	pelú	peluál	fanúa	tanah	Land flower	bung	bknğál	fúnga	bunga	Blume
ear	ding	dingál	talinga	telinga	Ohr
father	gadám	damál	tamá	ama (Igorot)	Vater
mother	gadil	děłál	tíná	betina ♀	Mutter spirit	galía	gësúl	aítu	gantu	Geist hand	gim	geimál	líma	lima (5)	Hand
eye	mad	madál	mata	mata	Auge
ash	gab	gabul	—	abu	Asche
dead	mad	medél	mate	mati	Tot (von tieren)

Accordingly, we can assume that the possessive form is based on the original form of the word, while the Palauan word shed its final syllable.

Concerning other words I also mentioned líus "coconut" from níu, gad "liver" from ate, réng "yellow root" from *lega*³⁸⁵, měğ almond from talíe(?), ngíkěł fish from i'a, táod fishing spear from táo, vum cooking house from umu, mel'lómes bright from maláma, uriúl back from muli, etc. See also numbers and pronouns.

Only few foreign Europic³⁸⁶ words are found in the language.

I mention as such

from Spanish	banděráng	flag	from bandera
	kusaráng	spoon	from cuchara
	kagól	chest	from caja

v. M. M. also mentions soldáo warrior, plato plate, milo maize, dios god, from English	síkit	jacket	from jacket

	bókes	chest	from chest
	méses	matches	from matches
	beg	bag	from bag
	gīs	key	from keys.
	solrau	warrior	from soldier.

Further on, it is worthwhile to mention that a kind of secret language exists in Mangal‘láng, in Ulimáng and in Ngaregól on Pelíliou; it is created by shifting words.

In a certain sense there is also a children’s language. That the young ones cannot pronounce the g (=ch) is also mentioned below on p. 318. Otherwise they enjoy to shorten words, for instance ia bo o = ak mo melekóng I want to say, or mo mei = ak mora mei I am going home.

Concerning the structure of a sentence etc., I want to point to the reproduction of the original text of the natives, for instance in the sections about the construction of a boat or a house, in Part V, then in the story 202 and in the heroic chants and songs in Part VII.

In the following pages I will present a short introduction of the grammar. Doing this, I am following, despite my previous work, WALLERSER’s structure. This allows an easier overview when comparing; however the adverbs (VIII), the prepositions (IX), the conjunction (X), the interjections (XI), the affirmation and negation (XII) I present before the verbs; they will be at the very end.

I. Sounds and Characters.

I do not have any ä, instead, I use ě; further, there is no ö and ü. Instead of g I always use k; n is never used, but always ng. I use g = the ch of WALL. In addition to the u I also noted v.

Consecutive vocals are nearly always pronounced individually. Wherever there is a diphthong as for instance ei, it is always indicated with a connecting symbol, that usually also indicates the pitch, if there is not already an accent in the word, as for instance in gólei, Magēideuíd, etc.

a as in German.

The short ä is often used instead of ě; very often the two cannot be distinguished by their sound. Thus, garămek (from garam animal) can be written garěmék or even garmék, without hindering the understanding. We just have to think of [the German words] Meistěr, Fischěr, Berliněr, that common people likely pronounce Berlină (see ě).

Concerning ä see e.

b often in-between b and p, voiceless. The missionaries often write b, where I put a p; for instance belú instead of pelú (village), telgíb instead of telkíp (something), Bălau instead of Pélau (see Volume I, p. 185) etc.

d often pronounced like the soft spoken English th or the Spanish d. While pronouncing it one can see the tip of the tongue positioned at the upper incisors, slightly protruding between them. Formerly I wrote th, but changed to d, because of the simpler writing and because the sound often does sound like d. After all, we also have »Daumen« for thumb, »Tod« for death, »Distel« for thistle, etc. Thus, there is without any doubt a close relationship of the two sounds. The change of sound is characterized by: Samoamata "eye", Rálik-Rátak*medja*, Palau mad. Therefore the Polynesian t is equivalent to the d in Pelau, as the English mother³⁸⁷ is Mutter in German, etc. However, it is especially remarkable that the d seems to be changed into an s for the possessive form of some words. For instance galid "god" becomes *gēsúl*³⁸⁸, bladék "spirit" blesekél, diong "bathing pond" tisèkél his bathing pond. A special sis, a kind of Cordilyne is also not called sismagēi but didmagēi. This is still the object of special investigation.

e usually pronounced like eh, as for instance in Pelau, just like spoken in [German] See, Weh. A short version of it is much more common, then sometimes noted by me as ě. In that case it often is dubious if we should place it instead of ǎ (see a), of ĩ, õ, or ũ. Whenever the initial sound clearly sounded like a, i, o, u, then I inserted the short vowels.

In case of doubt I used ë instead of ä. However, it often replaces an ei, especially in the chants in chapter VII, thus mě for mēi, gelagáng for geilagáng today.

g pronounced similarly to ch in German, therefore WALL. also writes ch, while he uses g just like in German, as a soft explosive sound (see p. 312). That this is not the case can be seen for instance in the word kekeréi "small"; in the list above on p. 313. He writes only gegerei. Incidentally, we want to remark that the missionaries, too, without any logic, write Chesus, obviously because the previous Spanish Capuchins pronounced the Spanish word Jesus in this fashion. On the other hand, they write Jerusalem, which in Spanish is written Jerusalén.

We have to admit that g seems to be more adequate than ch: Considering that ch, especially when used several times in one word, elongates the word, as already mentioned above (p. 312), it also looks bad. It certainly rarely appears after an s, as for instance in the word dolsg where it then becomes a sch. Finally, the Spanish use the g in a similar way.

Nevertheless, the pronunciation is even more difficult. When WALL. says, "that ch should be pronounced like a good German ch", then I certainly have to contradict him. Often it is quite difficult to hear if g (= ch) or k, even when it is repeated. This can also be seen with the word lagád for man in the list on p. 313, where everyone else before 1910 had written sakal. In order to find out more about this when my translator was absent, I asked young boys and girls, who can pronounce k though not g (= ch). Often our children, too, prefer to say "Gua" instead of "Kuchen", thus this is a regular sound deletion. However, it still is peculiar that older Palauan men and women do the same in order to appear childlike.

In addition, it is interesting that g (= ch) is comparable to the Malayo-Polynesian k (especially the particle ga—ka), and that in this respect the Samoan language of children does not pronounce the k, as opposed to, for instance, in New Zealand where people say ariki instead of ali'i the "chief".

i just like in German; see ě.

The long ī (WALL. ii) is often pronounced with an ě sound at the end, as for instance kleblīl = klebliěl, aImelīk therefore is often written a Imeliik or a Imeliěk. However, it is nothing more than a long ī. The same applies to ū.

k see g and above p. 312. When pronouncing [this sound] the air is partly blown through the nose. Compare WALL., who says, "b and p, as well as g and k can often not be distinguished very well".

l often the connecting particle for abstract nouns; then it is pronounced voiced. Therefore, I do not write Baběldáob, but Babldáob. Further on, it is of great importance as an infix for nouns (see there). Wherever there is a double l, a check mark is inserted, for instance despadál'l, l'lal. It is also used to form a noun or the perfect tense; for instance klou big, kl'lóu size, melekói to talk, mel'lekói talked.

m often the prefix to form adjectives and verbs.

ng as in » to sing«. In my opinion a clear n does not exist. Where I made an exception, like in Ked ra tund, Ketund, I had reservations (p. 179).

In Palau the n is replaced by l. For instance "his eye" in Matupit matána, Palau madál, or "mother" in Samoa tiná, in Palau gadil.

o often also a short ō, as for instance in Goréör, SEMP. wrote Coröre. WALL., too, indicates an ö, of which I am not convinced.

p see b and k.

r mostly pronounced in a guttural fashion, as for instance in Gorak, in contrast to Gor'rak (see Volume I p. 204). Double r can also be found, just like the l, for instance mer'rangél "his younger brother".

r can easily change into l, for instance klou lúbak big chief (rúbak).

s often pronounced with a round mouth and a slightly sibilant sound, especially at the end, for instance besépēs fiber string, róis mountain.

It is noteworthy that the s changes into k in the possessive form of 2 nouns; that is to say kesól turmeric, poss. keklengél and dusál beadstead, poss. dukelél.

The word kachól or kakól chest, borrowed from modern Spanish, is also changed into kaselengél.

t see d.

u and v (German w) can stand next to each other and have to be distinguished. In this manner WALL. writes uiid for resin, whereas I clearly heard vuiēd. It is similar with the words vúes order, vurs disk, vuk pubic area. I also write Ngivál and not Ngial, as the latter would have been pronounced quite differently from the way I had heard it. I could not discover any ü.

ū often spoken like uu or uě, a bit nasal and high pitched.

II. The Article.

We find the widely used a, often merged with the word instead of an article. Thus, when talking the language with the natives, one can no longer imagine the word without its a. This is especially the case with names, we became familiar with through WILSON, as for instance the one of the king Abba Thule, correct *aIbēdul*³⁸⁹ and of the crown prince Arikóko, more correct a Rēgúgēr, both from the big house a Idíd in Goréōr. Then there is SEMPER's Arakalúlk, correct a Rēgēlúlk, whom I still met in 1907, thus 45 years later, under the name a Mád.

We actually never heard all these names without a. Yet, common nouns also seize the a. People always talk always about aiángēd the "sky" instead of iángēd, as well as aiólt the "wind", agúl the "rain", agát "smoke", aidúngēl "firewood". However, there is also bad "stone", rois "mountain", pelú "village", etc.

People nearly always say aiús "crocodile", auél "turtle", yet ngikēl short for "fish", dāgēsāg "frog", etc.

As a general rule, the majority of the nouns is used without the a. This is an indication that it cannot be equated with our article, which belongs to every word.

WALLESER mentions that the a changes in its plural form in front of living beings into ar, as in ar gad "human beings", ar dil "women", ar ngikēl "fishes". I can also add the peculiarity that this also happens in front of collective nouns, such as arpelú and argáldēbegēl. Then, however, this does not mean the villages and the clubs, but the "people from the village" and the "people from the club" just as arMelekéiok and ar Imelik, means "people from Melekéiok" and "people from a Imelik".

I also want to add to the forms ar ngara diál "people on the ship" and ar uā Alik "people like Alik", the expressions ar di gad "people only humans" (the populace) and ar bek lagád "people each human being" (everybody).

For further information, see Plural of Adjectives.

In one special case rubak in its singular form seems to mean "chief", arubak, however, means "chiefs", the plural form. This is not caused by the r at the beginning of the word, cf. a róis means "mountain", a ráel "path", but because rubak is already the plural, as will be shown in the next section.

In addition, we can also use bětók "much" and rokúi "all" in order to indicate the plural form.

Similar to the a there are also the prefixes i, ie and ng, nga in order to point out something or to place an emphasis especially on names.

For instance aIkelāu (root word kleāu, a tree), iegád instead of gad human being;

further, pay attention to the names Nggēiangěl, Nggēsár, NgatméI, Ngarsúl, Ngaregolóng etc.

Usually this last prefix ngara corresponds to sa in the word Samoa, as a combining preposition, for instance with the families there Sa-Tuiaana, Sa-Fata, etc. Maybe ngara can simply be explained like this: ng a ra golóng = "those from Golóng"; ngi actually means "he".

The prefix ke is used in order to indicate "people" of a certain place. Thus, Kekeklāu means "people from Keklau", Kesílang "people from China", etc.

III. The Noun (Singular and Plural).

As we have just mentioned, irregularities can be found in the plural form of nouns, a fact WALL. does not mention.

rúbak means "chief", but arúbak means "chiefs". The singular actually is góbak, while the community of chiefs, the council, is called *klóbak*³⁹⁰. Generally this word is only used as the name *Gobak*³⁹¹, yet, that it is also used per se for "chief" can be seen in chant 194, where around line 88 we can read: e bol ngelngí gobakrír "and carry their chief". Chant 200 starts with the word góbak.

In the last chant rubukúl = "their chiefs, their older relatives" can be found, just like a gobōkúl for "his chief, his head of the family". This is based on the many uses of the possessive suffixes, of which I will talk further below. Here I just want to point to the fact that go, a prefix of nouns, is changed into ru in the plural forms of many other words many other words. With the help of the following words, usually a form of address, I learned about this change:

// Krämer, Palau, Vol. 2. Plate 20//

(Watercolor by E. Krämer)

Dark-skinned Palauan man from the south, from Light-skinned Palauan man from the north of the archipelago

Verlag: L. Friedrichsen & Co., Hamburg

Colored collotype by A. Frisch, Berlin

sing.		plur.
góbak (poss. gobokúl)	older relative	arúbak (poss. arubúl)
gógad (poss. gogadál)	sister of brother and vice versa	ruegád (poss. rugadál)
gogalék	younger relative	(a)rugalék
gobagád	wood gnome	rubagád
gokdemáol (poss. gokdemelél)	ancestor	rukdemáol (poss. rukdemél)
gomúkldil	young girl	rumúkldil
goderúgěl	messenger	ruđerúgěl

As mentioned above, similar forms of plural are possibly

gadám ³⁹² (poss. damál)	father	plur. uádam fathers
gadil (poss. dalál)	mother	» uádił ³⁹³ mothers

The plurals of the following terms of address of relatives (man to man, or woman to woman) are irregular:
gudelék my uncle, my aunt plur. *armugudelék*³⁹⁴ (from guóděl old)

Completely irregular are:

teloáděl	peg for house constructions	plur. telotáod
kleblıl	clan	" kleblıl .

Thus, we have the following prefixes for nouns:

1. ga (compare with liat to see in Malayan, ka liatan view, Samoa fa'a ilóga sign = "to make see" from ilóa to know, to see).

gáingbul	[flower]bud	from bung flower
galāgad	body	from gád human being
gáldēbegěl	club	from bágěl big piece of money
galdegaiós	day	from gaiós the sun
galibútěk	narrowness	from obútěk narrow
galitogút	weakness	from magēitogút weak
galuóděl	age	from guóděl old
gaklmuk	the silent one	from lmuk to be silent
gadegūł	artist	from mangadegūł to think about work
galdegūł	art work
galdāgādúg	story	from mangadāgādúg to narrate
galdúl	heap	from mongúděl to heap
gamógām	urine	from mangamógām to urinate.

2. go

gólbed	stone pavement	from bad stone
gobogĭl	marriage	from óúbog to marry
gomelásag	construction	from melásag to build
gorongóděl	purlin[beam] on the roof	from meréngěd to bind
gosúrög	medicine for baths	from mesúrög to take a hot bath
gosáräg	pressure	from olsáräg to press
gotológöl	pusher	from gotilěg to push
gotóběd	guard on the path	from otóběd , tuóběd take out, go out
gosékěd	competitor	from olsékěd to rival
goltil	finishing	from melilt to finish, polish

However, we can also find the reversed form, thus it is

goberěvěd	heavy	and ber‘r ěvěd heaviness.
------------------	-------	----------------------------------

Especially remarkable is the different formation of nouns from the adjective and the verb.

WALLESER remarks only:

"Besides, nouns are formed from adjectives. They indicate the property itself and, like the other nouns, also have a possessive form. Usually an l is inserted into the first syllable; in doing so the vowel is omitted."

As I collected the nouns of more than 100 adjectives, including their possessive and verbal forms, I present it all here:

3. The adjective starts with b, and in order to form the noun an l is inserted behind the b:

adj.		noun		verb	9 times
bediu	stinking	bldiu	bad smell	omăkbediu	to stink
bagés	new	blegés	novelty	omégěs	to be new
bagagáu	empty	blágagau	emptiness	omagagáu	to empty
bangengěgei	mute	blangěngei		omangěngei
besebósěg	disobedient	blebósěg		omesebósěg
bekěu	brave	blekěu		omekěu
bégěbăkmad	content	blegěbăkmad		omăgěbăkmad
bokoderdúrög	obedient	blokoderdúrög		omăkederdúrög
búlak	lying	búlak		omúlak

4. The adjective starts with k, in order to form the noun an l is inserted behind the k:

adj.		noun		verb	15 times
kebái	infertile	klebái		mangebái
kebekákl	light	klebekákl		mangebekákl
kedóröm	sharp	kledóröm		mengedóröm
ketóm	blunt	kltóm		mengătóm

adj.		noun	verb
kǎtǎbíop	bald	kltěbíop	mangǎtǎbíop
kekeróus	diverse	klekeróus	omekekeróus
kekeréi	small	klékerei	mangkékerei
kedidái	high	kldidai	mangedidái
kekámángěł	long	klemángěł	mangámángěł
kedép	short	kldép	mangedép
kedelebú	fat	kldelebú	mangedelebú
kedúng	intelligent	kldung	mengedúng
kebelúng	stupid	klebelúng	mǎngebelúng
kiuěsál	steep	kliuěsál	mengíuěsál
kuhíkūł	crippled	kluhíkūł	mǎngulúkūł
5. kl for k after dropping the prefix me, ma			5 times
mǎkěkád	horny	klěkád	mengekád
mékngit	bad	klngit	omǎkngit
měkāmím	sour	klemím	mengemím
makeáld	warm	kleáld	mangáld
mesulául	tired	klulaul	omaksulául
6. kl(ě) is placed in front of the root word			5 times
maráng	true	klemǎráng	omakráng
marěk	ripe	klemárěk	omakmárěk
úngil	good	klungiáol	omakúngil
díol	pregnant	kldiūł	omǎkdíol
(dmókl)	cooked	kldmókl	mangadmókl
7. kl is placed in front of the root word after dropping the prefix mě			4 times
mesisīg	powerful	klsisīg	melisīg
masangákěđ	skinny	klangákěđ	oměksangákěđ
mesóbil	unmarried	klsóbil	oměkmesóbil
mesamāi ³⁹⁵	superior	klemāi	mesamāi
8. When an adjective starts with kl , then the l is doubled (l'l)			3 times
klou	big	kl'lóu	manglóu
klebókl	beautiful	kl'lebókl	manglebókl
klikīđ	pure	kl'likīđ	mangikīđ

Thus, only in 30 of 100 nouns (see 4. to 7.) k and l figure together and next to each other. How diverse and changeable its role is, can be seen in the 5 sections. The other ones are getting more and more varied.

9. l ranks third and is doubled

3 times

adj.		noun	verb
delebáob	cowardly	del'lebáob	malebáob
gálalakl	quiet	gal'lakl	mangalákl
talamál	wrong	tal'lamál	malamál

10. l ranks third and is doubled after dropping the prefix m

2 times

malamált	straight	l'lemált	omakmalemált
melilívět	stupid	l'lilívět	omaklilívět

11. l is missing in the adjective and is inserted in the third position 15 times

degór	steep	delegór	omakdegór
dengerengěr	stupid	deléngerengěr	meléngerengěr
dekíměs	wet	delekíměs	melekíměs
dulókl	lopsided	delulókl	omălókl
gamádag	unripe	galamádag	mangamádag
gabirúkŭl	bent	gelebirúkŭl	mangebirúkŭl
gerúngěl	whole	gălerúngěl	mangărúngěl
gobútěk	narrow	galibútěk	mangibútěk
guóděł	old	găluóděł	manguóděł
gědáol	holy	geledáol	mangedáol
tangangói	ugly	talangangói	omatangangói
sagarégariáol	foolish	salegaregariáol	mangeregariáol
tepelík	wild	telepelík	omaktepelík
tubagabágěl	wide	telubagabágěl	melubagabágěl
turtúruk	tame	telutúruk	mangurtúruk

12. l is missing in the adjective and is inserted in the third position, after dropping the prefix m

6 times

mageíduíd	round	gelíduíd	mengíduíd
măgeitögut	soft	gelitögut	mengitögut
maguágad	bitter	galuágad	menguágad
medegěrégěr	hard	delegěrégěr	melegerěgěr
medemedéměk	weak	delemedéměk	melemedéměk
magěgei	avaricious	galěgei	mengegei

13. Just dropping the prefix m suffices to form the noun

22 times

medidirt	dry	dirt	omakdirt
mekúdŭm	narrow	kúdŭm	mengúdŭm
makerásem	cold	kerěsem	mangarásem
madíngăs	replete	díngăs	omakdíngăs
magéd	shallow	géd	omekěgéd
magád	deaf, old	gad	mangád

adj.		noun	verb
marákt	sick	rakt	omakrákt
mārat	dry	rat	omakrát
merokós	sweet	rekós	omakmerekós
meríriau	loose	ríriau	oměríau
medúg	strong	dug	omekdúg
metěu	roomy	těu	melěu
mesīg	clever	sīg	omesīg
mesés	industrious	sés	omaksés
mesáik	lazy	sáik	omaksáik
madákt	cowardly	dákt	omakdákt
míkou	blind	íkou	omakmíkou
meáiu	smooth	eáiu	omakmeáiu
mogúiet	tough	gúiet	mengúiet
mogút	old	gut	mengut meeting	kldipl	mekldipl or mengídep speech	tokói	melekói to speak

14. m ranks second and is dropped

dmólog	deep	dólog	omōkdólog
směkěr	sick	sěkěr	olsěkěr

15. The noun is formed by doubling the r in the middle of the adjective 1 time

baráom	stinking	bar'ráom	omakbaráom
---------------	----------	-----------------	-------------------

16. The noun is formed by an r placed in the middle of the adjective, after dropping the prefix mě or gõ
3 times

makrěos	avaricious	kar'rěos	omakrěos
meritegetagáp	rough	kar'ritegetagáp	mengiritegetagáp
goberěvěđ	heavy	ber'rěvěđ	omekberěvěđ

17. Completely irregular

rongóděl	tight	rengéd	meréngéd
mad	dead	kodál	omăkemád
diosisú	similar	okesú	omakesú
mosidám	flat	űlsidőmál	olsidám
berékěđ	sticky	merekerékěđ glue	omerékěđ to glue

Thus, not counting the irregular forms, there are 14 classes. However, this does not mean that these are all the forms there are. Although the infixation of l in the second and third position is prevalent, dropping the prefix m is very important, together with this infixation and alone, so that you almost despair looking for an independent derivation of the noun's form by any rules; especially when you realize how many irregularities are caused by euphony even using good words, it circumvents (dropping the s, the syllables di, ke, etc.).

Here is a lot of material for linguistic studies.

Finally, I have to mention that there are a great many words for German nouns starting with ule and derived from verbs (see p. 343), for instance ulekáng "gift of food" from omakáng to fill; ulengetekíl 'l "salvation by head" from mangetákl "to carry with the handles".

I still have to mention a remarkable verbalization of a noun (concerning the nominalization of verbs see further below p. 335): ulekngál "coconut shell" from bung "blossom", bkngál "his blossom", is actually called »his withered one«. Basically these are participle forms.

Declination.

A declination as we understand it does not exist. The noun is not changed. Imperfect particles a, r, ng, etc. help; they give more feeling than form.

The dative is best expressed by mo ra, for instance: give it to the man, bom ngumo ra sagál, or: him = re ngi (see possessive pronouns).

As already mentioned by WALL., the genitive is expressed by the possessive form of the noun: for instance madál a bai front side of a bai, a bdelúl a gad the head of the human being (actual his head of human) etc.

As already mentioned above, these possessive suffixes play a part in the changes of the nouns, which besides the many forms of the verbs complicate the understanding of the language tremendously.

For different suffixes for the 1., 2., and 3. person singular and plural see further below at pronomina personalia.

The possessive suffixes of the 3. person are al, el, il, and ul; ol I did not encounter. This explains why words ending with o are generally rare, while for instance in Polynesian nearly all words end with a, e, i or u. As already mentioned above, this final vowel was dropped in Palauan; however, for the creation of their possessive suffix nouns retrieve it again.

al are attached by:

unmodified

gad	human being	gadál	medú	testicle	meduál ³⁹⁶
gadám	father	damál	ru	contribution of money	ruál
galagád	clan	galagadál	tu	banana	tuál
ding	ear	dingal	pelú	village	peluál
matáng	branch, fork	matangál

modified

gad	liver	gadengál	galdägädüg	story	galdëgëdëgál
gadil	mother	dalál	blul	ban	blurengál
bung	flower	bkngál	gim	hand	geimál el attached by:

unmodified:

bagadīl	excrement	bagadilél	gosebék	wing	gosebekél
bagal	dorsal fin	begelel	gotilëg	axe	gotilëgél
bars	a kind of tree	barsél	kasmágal	fight over adultery	kasmgalél
belógöl	dove	belägëlél	keblīl	family	keblilél
beróbör	hand	bereberél	klsül	lie	klsulél
besépës	string	besëpesél	ngabard	west	ngabardél
dël	peg	dëlél	ngakl	name	ngaklél
dëlomël	plant	dëlomelél	ngálek	child	ngalekél
dims	south	dimsél	rágal	branch	ragalél
galépëd	cudgel	galepedél	rámak	leaves-compost	ramakél
gamógam	urine	gamogamél	rásag	blood	rasagél
gasbógäb	plank	gasbogabél	rëngëd	district	regedél
gasmágäl	son in law	gasmagalél	sëkël	neck	sëkelél
geoátël	ridge	geotelél	tagáb	stinger	tagabél
gongīs	hoe	gongisél	togúl	belt	togulél
górsagël	bowl	gorsagelél	údës	navel	udesél
goruóru	fan	goruoruél	ulk	back	ulkel

el attached by modified:

baog	labia minora	begél	debúsög	trumpet shell	debsëgél
beókl	a tree	boklél	degóul	tobacco	digolél
ber‘rëvëd	heaviness	ber‘rëdél	deliúkës	portion	dikesél
bládek	spirit	bldekél	dép	sugar cane	depengél
blevëget	width	blugelél	dial‘l	ship	dil‘lél
blsips	hole	blëpselél	diël	break	delél
blsoil	dinner	blsilél	dilügës	north	dilagasel
bsibs	drill	bsebsél	díong	water hole	dirëgél
bsúg	star	bsëgengél	direk	mirror	derekél
búdog	peace	bdëgél	dirt	dryness	ditél
búiel	moon	bilél	doko	bladder	dekëvél
buld	skin	budél	dólog	depth	delegél
búog	areca palm	bugél	dor	umbrella	derengél
dáob	sea	debél	dubog	sapling	dbagél
debúl	grave	debelél	dúrumk	thunder	deremkél

dusal	bed	dukelél	gúsem	beard	gagemél
ěáběd ³⁹⁷	cloud	gěbedél	gutŭm	ground	gatāmél
galdíngěl	finger	galdngelél	(a)ī	cave	iengél
galdúkl	wall	galdeklél	idúngěl	fire wood	idengelél
galěol	weapon	galěvelél	ilúměl	drink	imelél
galtópt	top of the tree	gatāptél	iolt	wind	geltél
galuóděł	age	galudel'él	is	nose	isngél
gamágěl	betelnut chew	gamalél	iúngs	island	ingsél
garárou	enemy	garaovél	kagól	chest	gaselengél
gasiměr	door	gasmerél	kak	side	kekengél
gatú	cat	gattungél	kebókōb	fin	keběkābél
gáus	lime	gusél	kebúrs	mangrove swamp	kebersél
gėdogól	sleeping mat	gadegalél	ked	grassland	kedengél
geirógěr	hook	giregěrél	keregěr	beach	keregerengél
geiúiěs	bone	geuvesél	kerásem	coldness	kersemél
geúkl	throat	geiklél	kesamd	gills	kesemdél
gerévut	woman's dress	geritél	kěsól	turmeric	keklengél
gėvátěl	defense	gėvotelél	kingál	seat	kingelél
golbáol	spitting hole	golbolél	kirs	penis	kersél
góles	knife	golsěngél	kláp	taro	klapngél
golo	scale	galauél	klálo	thing	kloklél
gólogol	sand	gologelangél	klěáld	warmth	kleldelél
gomoágěl	river	gomogělél	klilt	bangle	klitel
gomogǎról	uterus	gomogǎrelél	kl'ľdelebú	thickness	kl'ľdebungél
gondáel	neck	gondalél	klasu	female lover	songél
gongisp	shovel	gongespél	klsib	sweat	klsběngél
góngolungěl	burden	galngelél	ksóus	file	kseksél
goriěk	broom	gorikél	kúkau	taro	kukungél
goróu	lightening	gorongél	lai	internode	lengél
gor'rtógot	seam on a	gǎr'rtagatél	lálag	puss	lagél women's dress		lild	tube	lidél
goról	birth	gěrél'él	líus	coconut	lisle
gorúsög	pounder	gorsegél	lkóu	hat	lkungél
gosáräg	pressure	gosěřégél	l'ľivet	thinness	l'ľilitél
gósonđ	comb	gosendél	lúok	nest	lukél
goteromóděl	cushion	goteromodelél	malk	chicken	mekél
gotúngěl	bag	gotungelél	mámed	dress	memedél
gotúrt	cockspur thorn	gotulél	medéu	bend	meduelél
gúl	rain	galél	meséi	taro field	meklegél

mesekíu	dugong	mesũkungél	táod	fork	todél
měúsõg	the calm	isëgél	táog	mangrove channel	togél
ngáis	egg	ngisél	tëu	vastness	tengél
ngáos	seat in the bush	ngosél	tekói	speech	telkélél
ngeáol	garden	ngëuëlél	telkáel	measure	telkélél
ngíkël	fish	kelél	terétër	commoncold	terterél
ngipd	slime	ngapdél	toágël	passage	togelél
ngirt	head cold	ngertél	tógëd	thorn	tëgedél
ngór	voice	ngëréel	túangël	door	tungelél
ngót	board for pounding taro	ngãtngél	túmetum	jaw harp	tumetmengél
póup	wall	pekpél	tungd	fish bone	tengdél
ptúbag	glans	ptagalél	uíd	juice	udél
ráel	path	rolél	uíngël	nail	ungelél
ráis	root	risél	uís	seam	ulisúl
ralm	water	lmél	usákër	loincloth	usekerél
reóngol	fathom	rengelél	utóug	hook	utugél
ródél	adopted	redelél	vúlog	broom	ulágél
ródog	fruit	rëdagél	vúkëd	net	ukëdél
rúel	leaf	lél	vum	cooking house	umangél
sëřs	garden	sersél	I still have to mention that newly
sils	sun	klsel	introduced words also usually end
singg	cross	senggél	with él ; as for instance
skors	cane	skersél	babi	pig	babingél
suálo	basket	suálél	bambu	bamboo	bambungél
tágarakl	hook	tagareklél	kagól	chest	kaselengél

íl attached by

unmodified:

bug	husband, wife	(a)bugíl	makamad	fight	makamadíl
dag	excrement	dagíl	sagál	man	(sagálíl his
gónged	feast	gongedíl			[friend)
gongos	east	gongosíl	sis	dragon tree	sisíl

modified:

bái	men's house	bil	klekeréi	smallness	klekerengíl
besós	rudder	bëdësíl	komúr	tail	komríl
blái	residence	blil	mlái	boat	mlil
but	back side	btil	ngqũ	fire	ngëvíl
dung	variety of taro	dngíl	rak	year	rekíl
gáiep	pigeon	gaepíl	rimald	mangrove root	rimeldíl
iláot	palm syrup	ilotíl	vúk	pubic ♀	ukíl

//330//

úl attached by

unmodified:

gab	ash	gabúl	gólbed	stone pavement	golbedúl
gadéng	shark	gadengúl	golug	oil	golungúl

unmodified:

bad	stone	bedúl	ker‘regar	tree	ker‘rěgěrúl
bedúl	head	bdelúl a. ptelúl	kivar	closet	kivurúl
běap	mouse	běpúl	kúk	nail	kěkúl
blngúr	breakfast	blengrúl	lag	shadow	logúl
búi	shame	biúl	lik	pad	lkúl
delepák	stomach	delepekúl	rat	drought	rtul
dúi	torch	diúl	reng	heart	rengúl
galíd	spirit	gēsúl	rubak	chief	rubukúl
galitogút	weakness	galitogõtúl	telau	earring	telúl
galsáng	trade	galsungúl	ter‘rír	turtle shell spoon	ter‘rúl
gat	smoke	gõtúl	uák	anchor	gokúl
gut	old age	getúl	uís	seam	ulisúl
kar	medicine	kerúl	ukár	bow	ukurúl
kăbúi	betel	kebiúl	uígöl	stalk	ugúl
kaluláu	whispering	kelulúl

IV. The Adjective.

First of all, I have to note that the adjective is not free of possessive suffixes and also forms plurals, as WALL. already pointed out. He gives examples for the comparison of adjectives, as for instance kididiúl a rois the highest mountain (kedidái high), *chadelegelekél*³⁹⁸ *a máměd*³⁹⁹ the blackest piece of cloth (gadelekėlek black) etc.

Incidentally, the comparative form of adjectives can be achieved by using bai more (WALL. bei), or kuk; kmal = very (WALL. kngmál)

Therefore: good, better, best, úngil, bai úngil, kmál úngil.

not very good díak l sal úngil.

The comparative form of adjectives by contrast, in the form common in Polynesian, for instance »this is good, that is bad« is not used in Palau.

Different from Polynesia, on Palau the reduplication of syllables is also used for a decrease. I still add the words mekeketékēt, a little bit long, mekeketékēt long time, to WALL's examples.

WALL. also states that, in order to form the plural, the prefixes me and di are used in addition to ar, just like it is with the nouns. For instance a *blai a meklóu*⁴⁰⁰ the houses are big, a mlaidimegegeréi rogúí the boats are all small (kekeréi small).

Thus, the adjectives and not the nouns are changed into the plural form.

V. The Numeral.

Like everywhere in the South Pacific, persons and objects are counted differently. As WALL. did not present many details concerning the latter, I want to present here a clearly arranged compilation.

Cardinal Numbers.

numeral	human beings ⁴⁰¹	taro	fish	coconuts	trees, leaves money, stone planks (WALL.) stones
1 tang	tang	těluóng	tang	geimóng	tegetóng
2 orúng	těruóng	ěruóng	gěruóng	těblóng	gěregetóng
3 odeĩ	tědeĩ	ědeĩuóng	gědeĩ	kedeĩ	gědeiegetóng
4 oáng	těoáng	ěuáiuóng	gěoáng	klaoáng	gěoáiegetóng
5 oím	těím	ěímuóng	gěím	kleím	gěímegetóng
6 malóng	tělólom	a lolom uóng	gělólom	klólom	gelólomegetóng
7 uíd	těuíd	ěuíd uóng	gěuíd	kleuíd
8 iái	těái	ěái uóng	gěái	kleái
9 ítíu	těítíu	ěítíu uóng	gěítíu	klítíu
10 mágod or truíüŋ	těrúüŋ	ětrúüŋ or telbúdok	telbúdok	tágǎr
11 truíüŋ ma tang
12 " "	airúng	20 lúiuŋ (WALL. llüoch)		100	dart
13 " "	kedeĩ	30 okedeĩ		1 000	těláel
14 " "	gaoáng	40 okeoáng		2 000	erěláel
15 " "	gaím	50 okeím		10 000	truíüŋ l těláel
16 " "	gailólom	60 okólom		100 000	dart l těláel
17 " "	gaiuíd	70 okuíd	Numbers above 1000 have probably been influenced by the Whites.
18 " "	gaiái	80 okai
19 " "	gaitíu	90 oketíu

Ordinal Numbers.

There are also differences in numbering the 10 chiefs of a village and their houses (blai), whereby got »the first one« is used. Yet it is not used for the paramount chief, who is called without further ado ptelúl "his head", the one of the village.

	human beings	houses (blai)
nr. I	got	gótłblai
" II	gongëörung (also gongisóis)	gongëtléblóng
" III	gongëdeî	gongëldëî
" IV	gongaoáng	gonglaoáng
" V	gongëím	gonglëím
" VI	gongëlólom	gongëlólom
" VII	gongëuíd	gonglëuíd
" VIII	gongëái	gonglëái
" IX	gongëtiu	gongëltiu
" X	gongëtrúüŕg	gongëltágär

Multiplicative Numbers and Indefinite Numbers.

1 time = tal blëlékl

2 times = ërúl blëlékl

3 times = ëdél blëlékl

further on: another one lüt r a tang, alone tingakltáng, each one bek, each one after the other *kauderáng*⁴⁰², one each dertáng, in pairs *telbogóbokt l dertörung*⁴⁰³ (by threes. . . . tëdei), one over the other gagëisóis (gonggisóis the second one), some bëbil, all röküi, many bëtók, few sësëi, a little bit telkíp, half tëdóbög.

Measurements.

The measurement telkáěl (melűk to measure) consists of the following parts:

the fathom⁴⁰⁴ reóngöl (poss. rengelík)

	1 fathom	tëreu	(WALL. terréo)
	2 "	ërëreu	(" chäréo)
	3 "	ëdeîreu	(" chädeiréo) etc.
r. shoulder	to the left fingertips dogedágëm (=1/2 fathom)
r. elbow	» » » »	tkuríkl
r. crook of the arm	» » » »	tkuelëmél ⁴⁰⁵
r armpit	» » » »	telgebas (WALL.)
r. earlobe	» » » »	mtelur a bitáng (WALL.)

//333//

1 length of the arm	bital e gëim
½ " " " "	telmedëu
1 length of the hand	telberóběr⁴⁰⁶
½ " " " "	telagím kómk or 1 width of the hand	telagim kómk
Width of 4 fingers	ëoálëgúgěr or gëoálëgúgěr
" " 3 "	ëdëlgúgěr or gëdëlgúgěr
" " 2 "	ërëgeíd or garulëgúgěr
" " 1 finger	tëlageíd
" " the thumb	tëlbogós
" " ½ a finger	telbisaüs
" " 1 rib of a coconut frond	tëluólogúr
" " ½ " " " "	tëtíudlogúr

the final and smallest measurement, about 1 mm.

WALL. mentions only a few of the finger-measurements, in contrast to the following foot-measurements:

telbákēs	one step (chärebákēs, chädeibákēs)
telueácher	length of one foot (chärueacher, chädëueácher)
telbárd	length of one foot plus the width of the other foot.

VI. The Pronoun.

Pronomina personalia. Personal pronouns.

	independent:	in front of verbs:
I	ngák (áku see possessive)	ak, k
you	kau (móu, kóu possessive)	ke, ko, m
he, she, it	ngí (ngóu, lóu possessive)	ng, l
we two (incl.)	kidltërúng	ked, (kid)
» » (excl.)	kāmám l tërúng
we three (incl.)	kidl tēdei lagád⁴⁰⁷	kid, aki
» » (excl.)	kāmám l tēdei lagád
we (incl.)	kid , also kidrőkúi , we all » (excl.)	kāmám , also kāmámrőkúi we all you	kemeúl or kemeúl rőkúi	to, ko, kom
» two	kemeúl tërúng
they	tirekói⁴⁰⁸ or tirekói rőkúi	te, tē, t
they two	tirekél tërúng .

The latter pronouns are also used as suffixes, as can be seen with the following verbs, so sauák (soak) I want, sauám you want, etc.

gatic I do not want, sebagék I can ngoikák take me, meskák bring me (from ngu to bring), etc.,

more about it in the chapter about verbs, where the transitive forms are especially noteworthy.

Pronomina possessiva. Possessive Pronouns.

Independent are _____ "my" áku we kióu

"your" móu, kóu you móu

"his" ngóu, lóu they tóu

yet only when strongly pronounced in a big speech, not as an answer. Thus, for instance a demon says in the revelation: sel áku bad! "This is my stone", or "I have the stone". However, when you ask someone: m bedúl tagáng? "To whom belongs the stone?" (actually: his stone who?), then he can only answer: bedúk! "my stone".

Thus, in chant 42 it is akudóud instead of ududék "my money".

In chant 200, around line 40 is written mou dúdul "you wear working skirts".

Without any doubt this is a relict of a Malayan-Polynesian form.

In the Maori dialect aku means "for me"

mou means "for you", and in fact the Maori as well as the Palauans place these pronouns in front. In Samoan it is lo'u or la'u »my«, 'o a'u »I«, while in Malayan only aku is used for both. (besides hamba, sahaja).

In Samoan one can say:

la'u fale my house

or also 'o le fale o a'u "the house of mine"⁴⁰⁹

lōu fale "your house"

or also 'o le fate o 'oe "the house of yours"

We can assume that the possessive suffixes developed in the Micronesian and Melanesian languages from the pronoun's postposition as a dialectic shortcut.

While in most of these languages the possessive suffixes did not assume absolute dominance, and often they reached only certain groups of words. In the Palauan language, however, they rule in such a fashion that sometimes it was difficult to find the independent noun or it was only possible with a lot of effort (for instance mad »the eye« is not used, only madál, etc.).

In addition, besides the above-mentioned relicts, the suffixes spread to all kinds of words, because there are no independent pronominal possessiva and rarely used personal forms.

In case somebody wants to say independently "this is mine" then there are only two means to do so: "my item" kloklék from klalo "item".

or "my animal" garmék (from garm animal).

For human beings we always say "my father", "my wife", "my friend", etc.

The forms are the following:

kloklék	my (thing)	garmék	my (animal)
kloklém	your "	garmém	your "
kloklél	his "	garmél	his "
klokléd (incl.)	our "	garméd	our "
kloklám (excl.)	" "	garmám	" "
kloklúu	your "	garmúu	your "
kloklír	their "	garmír	their "

Dual and trial are formed by adding těrúng, těděi, (just like above).

With the endings ak, ik, and uk, mentioned above, in most cases an m is added for the 2. person plural. For the 3. person plural an additional i is inserted, when necessary, specifically when a vowel is next to iu or ir, or in case of harmony. WALL. cites the following examples belumúu and belurír, chochemúu and chocherír, rengmúu and rengír (belú land, choách bone, reng soul).

Possessive suffixes are added to nouns, adjectives, and pronouns, as well as to adverbs (WALL. bab on top, běbúk above me) and to verbs (see meténgěł = to step down = tengelél his descent, olták to ship = tekíl, tuóběd to go outside = tebedél, degór to stand up = degerúl, tmaút arrive = tutél, ongér to reply = ongerúl)

We have to assume that the infinitive of a verb has adopted the meaning of a noun, as we can say: his descent, his reply, etc. On the other hand, it seems to be possible to make everything possessive, if necessary.

The Definite Pronoun and the Relative Pronoun.

WALL. assumes this to be the particle el (after vowels l; in front of consonants often le and ele). There are numerous samples from texts and songs.

Interrogative Pronoun.

Which one? Who? tagáng? Which one(s)? teruatagáng

Which man did it? tagál gad a měrúl?

Which woman? tagár a dil?

Who is here? Kau tagáng? (You who?)

What? ngaráng? What !? ngarangeráng?

What is this? tiangeráng?ngára séi? What does this mean? ngára l tutelél?

How his name this? ngarángklél tiáng? (of items) short: keltangklél?

Which his name? tágangklél? (of persons)

How many? tělang? How are you doing? kau ă ngaráng?

How long will you stay? uakél tegetél ă ngaráng l m kiei?

Why? klísakl (usually followed by măng). What for? mongararang?

Where? ngarkér? Where abouts? gói mor

Where do you come from? ke mlar kel mei? (several ko)

Where do you go to? ke mor ker? (several ko). When? goingaráng?

The Indicative and Indefinite Pronoun.

This ngikáng (human being),	tiang (object),	plur. tírekang and aikáng
this with me	tíei	" gělei
that ngíkei "	séi (sel) "	" tírekei and aikei .

All these words are known in connection with others words in the form ngíkal sagál "this man", sel klálo "that object".

I myself, you yourself, he himself dingák, dikáu, dingi

ngěei a man, tarělei many people another human being, a tára ragád (1 human being a tálagád)

some běbil, many other arběbil

aruā Rekesiváng = Rekesiváng and others everybody béklagád.

VIII. Adverbs.

1. Time.

yesterday	gělísěp	I quickly	urěgědák yesterday night	kesús	you »	morěgědau ⁴¹⁰
day before yesterday	aidelísěp	he »	lorogedí
two days before yesterday	aidelsěběl	soon nearby	kměd
today	geilagáng ⁴¹¹ , leuěi	just now	dirík, kilěěd
tonight	klsús	late	dílop, dúop ⁴¹⁰
tomorrow	klukúk	slowly I	mokokák, you mokokáu,
tomorrow night	klsús ra klukúk		he mokoki
day after tomorrow	ngiáos	already di : he came already	ngi di mla mei
in three days	ngiosél	first	ngarúgei always	diplogóel, tedím	last	ureúl
now	gělagalagělagáng	formerly	arguóděł
soon, quick	merěgěd	erstwhile	airagár henceforward	gáragar

no longer dikěáng

// 337//

2. Place (incl. IX. Preposition).

right	kadíkm	distant from the pointer	tilagāng or right handed		nearby to the other	tilagakíd left	katúr	near to both	tiakíd left handed	klasékl	distant from both	sěkíd beside	gálablapl	near to the pointer	tiěkíd
here	tiang	opposite seeker	tíei (tiě) nearby	kměd	faraway	goróid beyond	sělbitáng	hither	mei⁴¹²
there	séi (sel) sěkíd	away, gone	mong
this side	tíal bitáng	is here	ngarengí
that side	sělbitang	is existent	ngarengí along	ngarbitáng

from me ngaramedák, you . . . dam, him . . . dal, us . . . dad, you . . . demiu, in front of (things) ngarangělong ra [they . . . demir ahead moladělěg (go back boruriúl)

in the back uriúl, behind me ulék, etc.

behind (things) rebāi ra

(to) the top bab, ngarbab (poss.: běbúl on the top) over ngarbáb or for instance over the mountain moimóng ra rois or beyond the woods on reběbúl a _____ [ngarběbúl goreóměl

to, up ngára

down, low meténgěl

(to) the bottom ngarióu, ióu outside ngaríkl, ikr (a ikrél his exterior, ikrák back to me)

under gěungěl

within gelsél

between delongelél

back lmūt

instead a logúl

IX. Prepositions (see also Adverbs of Place).

to (direction to where) ra, rě, e.g. to me rangák, to you rakāu, rěkāu, he came to the house at lunchtime m̄la ra blai ra gosbádě with băng . . . , for instance with me băngkék, with you băngkém, with him bangkél through *tmóio*g (through the house *tmóio*g ra blai) against omtók, against the bai los bedúl a bai, tmúruk or bol túruk to tackle unsuccessfully against, to fight, to sail against the wind dmángěs

// 338// opposite *re bedúl*⁴¹³, face to face gagaragaraū

back to back kakeíkr

around (the house) melivékl ra blai

from . . . to m̄la ra, from Ng. here Ng. l mei

because of: description with "reason, root" ugul

for instance he was punished because of R.,

R. a ugul mang ngulabals

or a ugul mang ngulabals a R.

in the house gelsél a blai, this means in the middle into the house kmu ra blai

in three days ra tēdei klebēsei in three days (nights).

for mora, I am doing it for N. ak merúrengí l kleklél a N.

(actually: his thing of N.)

close to kměd , e.g. close to me kměd rangák

at the side ngarbitáng, for instance at the side of N. ngurbitár N.

X. Conjunctions.

also dirékl

and ma, me (I and you ngak a ma kau) or málǒgup (I or you ngak málǒgup ě kau)

also: ngak ngkáu

but ě then soláe

for, because ě lě, a dmung

as if tokór (see story 204)

than: this is better than that tiang a bai ungil r' sei

N. is better than R. N. a bai ungil ra R.

while for instance as long as I live here *kl e mangatél a dēlanggăklék*⁴¹⁴ until that dimerék mo, until everything finished l mo merék

like for instance like you uakáu(also: similar to you) like me uangák

like him uangi

when mang

perhaps kol, for instance, is it perhaps true or a lie?

kol maráng ng klsūl?

in order to } you gather betelnuts to chew.

in order to } m súgei á búǒg, mē dolámăg

in order to } a, mē: I believe he is coming a rengúk, a dmúng mei

in order to } (my belief, he comes here)

so that } Cook, so that we can eat molongoies, me dongang whether . . . or I do not know whether he came or not.

// 339//

ngdiak 'kubengei, l kmung m lei ngdiak

The conjunctions exist only in part. For instance: in order to, until, and when. A sentence illustrates this. In German it goes like this:

Because we all assemble for work now, until everything is finished, and when it is finished, then we ask the master builder, what we are supposed to do.

In Palauan it is translated as follows:

ē lē kerdi kldipl kung ē melásăg ma le merekóng ē ked ē kuk

- - We only assembly then to axe and it finished, we then okér ra dăgălbai l kmu: ked a mekeráng?

ask the master builder say: we do what?

XI. Interjections.

olokói admiring ē rúbal o God! ēr'ra friend !

XII. Affirmation and Negation.

Way of Doing.

yes	ói	no longer	dikěáng
no	diák	ng di kěák marákt I am	no longer sick not	diák, lak	" " kěám " you are	" " "
so	adang	" " kěál " you are	" " "
perhaps	keléng	nearly, about	mo
maybe	kol [tokói]	hardly	kelělák (maybe not) certainly	maráng ("correctly" maral	together	dmak, dilak very	kmál (WALL. kngmál)	again	lmūt, mēklí finished, enough	merekóng, r'rokúì	one more	lmūt r atáng more	bai, (a little bit) oikál	not yet	direkák

less	kesái, sései	only	dí, ("and only" makdí)

(VII. WALL.) Verba.

So far we have shown how many difficulties are present in the Paulan language, but all this is far surpassed by the conjugation of verbs. Greek seems to be child's play in comparison to this.

Only long years of scientific research and a thorough study of the language will enable you to learn the language. However, you probably have to be born there and have to grow up among the natives in order to master it and the numerous irregularities. The missionaries still have the best opportunities and in fact what WALLESER can offer us, after only a few years, is absolutely remarkable. In his grammar he devoted 22 pages to explain the forms and at the end he included an index of 557 verbs, the infinitive, the simple past with and without suffix of the 3. person singular and plural, as well as the present tense, then the passive in present tense and simple past with (l), finally the gerundive, and the participle in singular and plural. However, their existence has to be explained and proven by way of practical examples. To me it seems that their application, see my texts and chants (chapters V and VII), is by far not as strict as we are used from Greek and Latin. I leave it to the linguists to deal with it, and to the reader to deduce the rules of the conjugation from the following examples.

// 340//

For me it is enough to present 38 verbs with their conjugation, as I had noted them before the publication of WALLESER's work. The most common uses of speech are attached to each verb. When presenting the personal pronouns I already reported about attaching possessive suffixes to verbs.

The infinitive is characterized by prefixes; I chose 368 verbs⁴¹⁵, the prefixes of which are distributed as follows:

	130 times	for instance obés to forget, obúruk to swell, obáng to glide down, ogoregúr to laugh, okér to ask, okoád to argue, oklúkl to cough, oldéu to scream, olekér to shout, olengít to beg, omogúr to count, omakáng to feed, omkár to heal, ongér to reply, ongór to sigh, oréngēs to hear, orík to chase, osík to seek, osngós to sneeze, osēsús to sneak, otér to burp, ótup to scorn, ouréng to wish, ousúbes to forgive, outelíl to breathe, ovatkéu to greet;
me	100 times	for instance medákt to fear, medengeîto know, mekīs to wake up, melím to drink, melekói to talk, merül to make, meriáu to take down, mesúběd to inform, mesiáu to serve, melái to take;
mang (meng WALL.)	45 times	for instance mangablád to deceive, manggás to scratch, mangíděr to pick up, mangíl to wait, mangalíl to soothsay, mangárm to try, mangúl to honor;
ma	25 times	for instance malatk to remember, magél to give birth, maráel to go, másag to go up;

mo mong	20 times	for instance mogaběgăb to turn, móngol to carry, molokó to blow, to smoke, morúsög to pound (taro);
mu	3 times	for instance mungum to cook, múiūs to stir;
g	10 times	for instance gemát to praise, gemáot to wade, gongúl to snore, gomogólo to scale;
d	9 times	for instance degór to stand up, dn god to make tattoos, dmáu to be used to, dmung to talk, dūbog to grow;
t	5 times	for instance tuóběd to go outside, tmu to enter;

// 341//

r	4 times	for instance rebórōb to squat, remīd to lose, ruépět to fall;
k	4 times	for instance kesíp to sweat, kíei to sit;
l	4 times	líang to take, lmangěl to weep, lmūt to come back;
s	3 times	sisuāu to whistle, suépěk to fly;
au	twice	aubángěl to follow, āurobai to shit;
ng	twice	ngu to take ⁴¹⁶
u	twice	uatkéu to greet, usáo to take action.

1. Special Forms for the Auxiliary Verbs To Have and To Be Are Missing. 1. to have, to be "to have" for instance is replaced by ólab "to take, to hold"

for instance akubáng I have it; see also 2. ólab.

"to be" is either not given at all, or in the following form:

akngá⁴¹⁷ra	I was	in . . . (see story 196, 4)
komngá "	you were	"
a lěngá "	he was	"
a děngá "	we were	"
komngá "	you were	"
a lěngá "	they were	"
ak ě kirél	it is my turn
ke kirél	it is your turn
ng kirél	it is his turn, etc.

For verbs, mo means "to be", mang "to have, to make",

for instance moklóu to be tall, manglóu to make big.

2. Ólab To Carry, To Hold, To Bring Along

_____ 2. to hold

(more common the trans. form óbang, obal)

akúlab	I carry	akubáng	I hold it
		kóbang	you hold it
		ngobáng	he holds
		kedóbang	we hold it
		kióbang	we hold it
		komóbang	you hold it
		tóbang	they hold it
Perfect		Future
ak ulebál	I have carried	ak mo obal	I will bring it.
kúlebal	you have "	Imperative
ngúlebal	he has "
		obal mei	bring it here!

// 342//

Figure of Speech:

ak mo tuóběd toba gotilěg I am going outside holding the adze (Part V construction of a blai)

loba galebúgěp she took the g. = piece of money (see story 197, line 20)

kelém óba kul mei maybe you bring it here after all kelém obap kul mei maybe you bring her/them here after all kodobengi úgei take it in front (see story 17, 1. Text) lobenterír take him with them (see story 17, 2. Text).

Verbs Used As Nouns With Attached Personal Pronouns.

3. To Want

Present Tense.

		intrans.
		positive	negative
sauák ⁴¹⁸	I want	gatík	I do not want	gatikók	I do not want now
sauám	you	gatím		gatikóm	you do not want now
sauál	he	gatíl		gatikól	he does not want now
sauád	we (incl.)	gatíd
sōmán	we (excl.)	gatimám
sōmíu	you	gatimíu
sōrír	they	gatirír

transit.

ng sauák I want it

Perfect Tense

kílok	I wanted	ng dímlak gatík	I did not want
kilóko	you wanted

kilong'ng	he wanted
kilokedě	we wanted
kilokóm	we wanted
kilomíu	you wanted
kilotě	they wanted

demonstr.

akilok lūlí	I wanted to do it
kilóko lūlí	you wanted to do it
kilong ng lūlí	he wanted to do it

4. To Be Able To

sebagék	I can	ng díak l seabagék	I cannot
sebagém	you can	ng dímlak l seabagék	I could not
sebagél	he can	ng dímlak ěa l seabagék	I really could not (after having tried in vain)

//343//

5. To Work*kouréör* (demonstrative it is replaced by merül »to make, to do; see there)

Present Tense

posit.			negat.
ak uréör	I work	ng diak 'kuréör	I do not work
kouréör	you	ng diak mouréör	you
ngouréör	he	ng diak louréör	he

Perfect Tense

ak uluréör	I have worked	ng dímlak 'kuréör
k uluréör	you	ng dímlak mouréör
ng uluréör	he	ng dímlak louréör

Future Tense

ak mouréör	I will work
ng diak bokurül rengí	I will not do it

6. To Remain, To Sit*Kíei* (of things mesěgěł)

Present Tense

posit.		negat.
ak ě kíei	I sit	ng díak ě kíei
ke kíei	you	ng díak m kíei

Perfect

ak ë kíliei I have eaten

Imperative

bóm kiei sit!

7. To Break Mangám

Present Tense

intrans.

posit.		negat.
ak mangám	I break	ng díak 'kungám	I do not break
ke mangám	you break	ng díak mongám	you do not break etc.		etc.

trans.

posit.		negat.
ak ă gomúr	I break it	ng díak 'klgëmur	I do not break it
ke gomúr	you	ng díak 'kengëmur
ng gomúr	he	ng díak ë lë gëmur
ked gomúr	we (incl.)
aki gomúr	we (excl.)	ng díak 'kim gëmur
ko gomúr	you	ng díak 'kom gëmur
të gomúr	they	ng díak 'kel gëmur

// 344//

Future Tense

trans.

posit.		negat.
ak mo gomúr	I will break it	ng díak bo kegomúr	I will not break it
ke mo gomúr	you	ng díak bom kegomúr	you
ng mo gomúr	he	ng díak bol kegomúr	he

Perfect Tense

intrans.

posit.		negat.
ak e gilám	I have broken	ng dímlak 'kagam	I have not broken

trans.

posit.		negat.
ak e geilemúr	I have broken it (I)	ng dímlak 'kegëmur	nicht (I)

ak e geilám	I have broken them (∞)	ng dímlak 'kegēmúr	nicht (∞)
Imperative
bomangám	break !	gomúr	break it (I)
		guám	break them (∞)
		lak o mongám	don't break

8. To Bring, To Give *ngu*⁴¹⁹

Present Tense

intrans.

	posit.		negat.
ak ngu	I bring	ng díak ngu	I do not bring
ke ngu	you bring	ng díak m ngu	you
ng ngu	he brings	ng díak lě ngu	he
ked ě ngu	we bring	ng díak 'ked ngu	we
kim ě ngu	we bring	ng díak 'kim ngu	we
kom ngu	you bring	ng díak 'kom ngu	you
tě ngu	they bring	ng díak tě ngu	they transit.

ak ngul mei	I bring it (I) here	ng díak 'kngul mei	I do not bring it (I)
ak ng(m)ail mei	I bring them (∞) here	ng díak 'kng(m)ail mei	I do not bring them (∞)

Example: Goréör e me le ngāi aikél mlil G. brings these its boats (chant.194, li.46).

Perfect Tense

transit.

ak ngilu	I have taken it (I)
ak ngilai	I have taken them (∞) (Example: chant 204 ^b , verse 37)
ak ngi kau	I have taken you (story 200, line 56)

// 345//

	Imperative	Question
bomngu	bring it (I)	ng klisákl mang díak m ngul mei?
ngul mei	bring it (I)	Why don't you bring it (I)?
m ngail mei	bring them (∞)	ng klisákl mang dímlak m ngul mei?
		Why did you not bring it (I)?
memngu tiei	bring this away	ng klisákl mang dímlak m ngail mei?
		Why did you not bring them (∞)?
ngul mei meskák	or omeskák ⁴²⁰	bring to me

(»I bring to you«, »you bring to me« etc. is also expressed in a brief manner ngak meskâu, kau meskák, etc.)

ngul mei meskâu	or omeskâu	bring to you
ngul mei msang	» omsáng ⁴²¹	bring to him
ngul mei meskíd	» omeskid	bring to us
ngul mei meskamám	» omeskamám	bring to us
ngul mei meskemíu	» omeskemíu	bring to you
ngul mei msëterír	» omsëterír	bring to them

ak ukér ra mekníg l bilskák rairagár (Goréör's speech to Ngarekobasáng)

I am asking about the bad stuff that you gave me in former times ng milskák he has given me ng kmál dímlak beskâu he certainly has not given you

Further Forms:

ak mangái	I am lost (taken); neg.: ak m langái
ak mēngěóng	I am taken
ngěóng	taken (chant 194, ca. line 32)
ngeül goréděm	they took your marriage money (chant 206, verse 3)
ngeül Ngartúkür	they took Ngartúkür (story 73)
ngaurang	has taken (chant 193, line 13)
bělongá re ngí	in order to bring her/them to her (see story 17 ^a , 2 chant)
kngoió	I have received it (chant 195, ca. line 26)
ke ngoiό	you have taken (chant 204 ^b , verse 42)
ki ngoi kau	we have taken you (chant 200, line 5)
ked ě ngoióng	we took it, ked ě ngoiáng we have taken it
	(see construction of a bai, footnote chapter V)
ngoikák	take me (chant 203, verse 4)
ngoióng	take him (chant 203, line 129), ngěkóng chant 204 ^b , verse 44)

//346//

In numerous cases the expression is carried out by the verb

9. melai To Bring, To Take

Present Tense

	posit.		negat.
ak melai	I take	ng diák 'kulai	I do not take
ke melai	you take	ng diák molai	you

ng melāi	he takes	ng díak lolāi	he
Future Tense
ak mo melāi	I will take	ng díak bo kulāi	I will not take Perfect Tense
intrans.
ak mel'laī	I have taken	ng dímlak 'kulāi	I have not taken
Imperative
	melāi	take !

Other Forms:

l'lóia ra monggóngg	placed into the sheath of leaf (chant 226)
lóia ra úgul	place it on the trunk (chapter V construction of a blai)
lilía	brought (chapter V construction of a blai)
te mlang	they took (chant 231)
a di lak 'kláia	when I cannot give (chant 204, line 13)

10. To Drown rumós

Present Tense
ak rumós	I drown	ng díak 'krós	I do not drown
ke rumós	you	ng díak mrós	you
Perfect Tense
ak remós	I have drowned	ng dímlak 'krós	I have not drowned

10. To Eat mangang (transitive of the root kál, poss. kelél, food)

Present Tense
trans.
posit.		negat.
ak mangáng	I eat	ng díak 'kúngang	I do not eat
ke mangáng	you eat	ng díak móngang	you
ng mangáng	he eats	ng díak ë lóngang	he
ked mangáng	we (incl.) eat	ng díak ë dóngang	we
aki mangáng	we (excl.) eat	ng díak 'kimóngang	we
ko mangáng	you eat	ng díak 'ko móngang	you
tāl mangáng	they eat	ng díak lóngang	they //347//

intrans.

ak ko koli I eat it (I)

ak kekmáng I eat it (∞)

Perfect Tense

ak mla mongang or ak m langang I have eaten

ke mla mongang

ng mla mongang

trans.

ked e mla mongang

ak mla kolí I have eaten

aki mla mongang

or ak mla kmang

ko mla mongang

tã mla mongang

akekilí I ate it (I) akekilang I ate it (∞)

Future Tense

ak mo mangáng I will eat

ak mo kolí I will eat it

ng díak bo kekělí I will not eat it

Imperative

bommóngang eat !

kolí eat it or bomkelii

Examples:

Why don't you eat?

klisaákl mang díak ě móngang ?

Why have you not eaten it ?

klisakl mang dimlak m kelí ?

Do not eat it !

lak om kelí !

12. To Fall ruépět (falling ropatáng)

Present Tense

posit.

negat.

ak ruépět I fall

ng díak 'k répět

ng díak m répět

ng diak r répět

Future Tense

ak mo ruépět I will fall

ke mo ruépět you

or

ak robutúng

Perfect Tense

ak rirépět I have fallen ng dímlak 'k répět

I have not been falling ng dímlak m répět

you

		Imperative
m répět	fall!	lak m répět	do not fall!
morepěti	let it fall!	lak morepetí	do not let it (I) fall!
		lak morépet	do not let it (∞) fall!

//348//

13. To Ask okér

Present
intrans.
posit.		negat.
ak ukér	I ask	ng díak 'kukér
kokér	you	ng díak mokér
trans.
ak ukér 'rengi	I ask it (I)	ng díak kukér 'rengi
ak ukér	I ask them (∞)
Perfect Tense
intrans.
ak ulekér	I have asked	ng dímlak 'kukér	I have not asked
k ulekér	you have asked
trans.
ak ulekér rengi	I have asked it (I)	ng dímlak 'kukér 'rengi	I have not or		or	[asked it
akekirír	I have asked it (I)	ng dímlak kekirír	(I)
akekilér	I have asked them (∞)	ng dímlak kukér	(∞)
Future Tense
	ak mokér	I will ask
	ke mokér	you
ak bo kukér 'rengi	I will ask it	ng díak bo kekerír	(I)
		ng díak bo kukér	(∞)
Imperative
bomokér, okér	ask !	lak omokér	do not ask !
m kerír	ask it (I) !	lak mokér 'rengi	do not ask it !
m kér	ask them (∞) !	(lak m kerír	unusual)
	I want to ask	sauák l okér

14. To Gomaráel, mong (to come mei, to come again lmūt, to go away remīd)

Present Tense

posit.			negat.
ak mong or mamóng	I go	ng díak 'k bong	I do not go
ke mong or bábong	you go	ng díak 'ko bong	you
ng mong or mamong	he goes	ng díak ě lě bong	he
		ng díak ě dē bong	we
		ng díak ě ki bong	we
		ng díak ko bong	you
	ng díak tē bong	they

//349//

Future Tense

ak maráel	I will go	ng díak 'k uráel	I do not go
		ng díak mōráel	you
		ng díak loráel	he
		ng díak dōráel	we
		ng díak 'kimoráel	we
		ng díak mōráel	you
		ng díak tē loráel	they or tē díak ě loráel	they do not go

Perfect Tense

ak morólung or ak m amaráe		ng díak 'k urólong	I have not gone
	I have gone
ke morólung	you	ng díak morólung	you
ng morólung	he	ng díak lorólung	he
ak morólul mo ra pelú		I go into the village
ak mlar maráel		I have gone
bong, bamaráel, babóng	go !	kabóng	good (go and do it!) !
mo borongí	go to him !	borugél	go ahead! (chant 203 verse 6)
mokiulék	go behind me !	mgerdau	go away !
ng di kě ak bong	I do not go anymore!	díak igóng	I cannot come !
		dibús	away, not here !
ak ma debó ra Ngarárd		when we go to Ngarárd	(chant 203 verse 4)

or: tě diak l' lūtl mei

come back m lūt

ak dirik mūtl mei I will be back right away

I have come back ak moe l mūtl mei

Ngivál lútang Ngivál goes back (chant 194 verse 25)

meng lilūt l mẽ meng meláis and again she deloused (story 202)

17. To Hearoréngěs* (see WALL. I, p. 153 and 154)

Present Tense

intrans.

posit.

negat.

ak urengěs I hear

ng diak 'kuréngěs I do not hear koréngěs you ng diak moréngěs you

ngoréngěs he

ng diak loréngěs he kedoréngěs we kioréngěs we komoréngěs you toréngěs they

trans.

ak rongesí I hear it

ko rongesí you

// 351//

Perfect Tense

ak mla reméněs or ak riréngěs I have heard

Future Tense

ak moréngěs I will hear

ak morengési I will hear it (I) ak moroméngěs I will hear (∞) ng diak bok réngěs I will not hear ng diak bok rengəsi I will not hear it

Imperative

oréngěs hear ! rongəsi hear it !

18. To LetMagír*

ak magir I let ak magèrēi I let it (see 22. omeliáng)

bagërei (bom magërei) let it be, it does not matter (mostly used in the north of Babldáob)

19. To Place Mangéd to place something movable on a small spot for instance a ball, an orange, etc.

Present Tense

intrans.

ak mangéd	I place down	ng díak ungéd	I do not place down
ke mangéd	you	ng díak mongéd	you
ng mangéd	he	ng díak longéd	he

trans.

ak 'kmëdí	I put it down
ke kmëdí	you
ng kmëdí	he
mangedí	see chant 205

Perfect Tense

intrans.

ak mla kmedí I have placed

trans.

ak mla komedí I have put it down or a kě kilëdí

kldóiěl (WALL. kldóel partic.) placed down other form: omkedürës (p. 22.)

Imperative

m këdí put it down

//352//

20. To Learn Mesúöp

ak mesúöp	I learn	ak melsúöp or ak mla mesúöp
ak suöpí	I learn it	I have learned
		ak mla suöpí I have learned it
suöpí	learn it (I)	suüop learn it (∞)

20. To Lie Omúlak, Mangasúl

ak umúlak	I lie	ak mla umúlak	I have lied
komúlak	you lie	ak mla mõngöšül	I have lied

(for »you lie« also blulekngém or *klsuëlé*m »your lie« from blúlak and klsül »the lie«)

a de söldau ng díak do ngesül if we are soldiers we should not lie, e klisūl a mekngít l tokói l ng ngoi kid l mora mekngít because to lie is bad behavior and leads us to meanness.

22. To Lay, To Set Omeliáng (of items only mesëgěl, see also 6. to stay and 18. to let)

Present Tense

intrans.

	posit.		negat.
ak líang	I put	ng díak 'kliang	I do not put
mliang	you	ng díak 'komliang	you
nglíang	he	ng díak l'líang	he

trans.

ak loiáng	I put it (I)	ng díak bagërei ⁴²⁴	I do not put it
ak logáng	I put them (∞)	ng díak bagei	I do not put them or ng díak 'klogáng

Future Tense

intrans.

ak mo meliáng	I will put	ng díak bokliang	I will not put
----------------------	------------	-------------------------	----------------

trans.

ak mo magërei	I will put it (I)	ng díak bok bagërei	I will not put it
ak mo melagáng	I will put them(∞)	ng díak bok bagei	I will not put them or ak mo logáng		or ng díak boklagáng or ak mo magei

Perfect Tense

intrans.

ak liliáng	I have put	ng direkák 'kliang	I have not put
-------------------	------------	---------------------------	----------------

//353//

trans.

ak mla lóiang	I have put it (I)	ng direkák bagërei	I did not put it or ak mla magërei
ak mla logáng	I have put them (∞)	ng direkák bagei	I did not put them or ak mla magei	or	ng direkák 'klogáng

Passive

ng mo mesëgěl	it is put	ng díak bol mesëgěl	it is not put
----------------------	-----------	----------------------------	---------------

Imperative

		intrans.
bomliáng !	put!	bomlia tia ra	put this on that
		trans.
(ke lóiang) loietí bagëreĩ put it (I) down (chant 204 ^b , verse 43)
mobad!	lay down!	m lagá!	put them (∞) down !
ke di bad ra blim!	You lay down in your house!
a loi kongë	if you did not want to have it (see story 80)

23.To DoMerül

Present Tense

		intrans.
	posit.		negat.
ak merül	I do	ng díak urül	I do not do
ke merül	you	ng díak morül	you
ng merül	he	ng díak ë lorül	he
ked merül	we (incl.)	ng díak ë dorül	we
ki merül	we (excl.)	ng díak ki morül	we
ko merül	you	ng díak ko morül	you
të merül	they	të díak lorül	they
		trans.
	ak merürengí	I do it (I)
	ak merül	I do it (∞)

Perfect Tense

ak mla merül	I did it	or ak rirül
ak mla merürengí	I have done it or
ak luliáng	I have done it (I)	ng dímlak ak lel'lii	I have not done it
ke luliáng	you (just finished)	ng dímlak am lel'lii	you
ng luliáng	he	ng dímlak a l'lel'lii	he or
ak mla luli	finished earlier)	ng dímlak kë a kim lel'lii //354//
	or	ng dímlak ke de lel'lii
ak mla remül	(∞ much)	ng dímlak kam de lel'lii
or ak lirili		të dímlak ke lel'lii e komel 'lú re gotoběd you made a road sentry (chant 194, verse 27)

Future Tense

ak mo merül or ak lel 'lí I will do it ko mo merül you will do (chant 194, line 9)

Imperative

merül	do	m lel 'lí	do it
		bomrelü	do it
	or also	bom merürengi	do it
		lak o merürengi	don't do it

Examples:

ke mekeráng? What are you doing? (also ke merül ngaráng ?) ng măkerakú? What is he doing there? (chant 194, line 48) kěd a mekeráng? What should we do?
a di merá geitél he can do according to his likening (chant 195^b, line 21)

24. To Say Dmúng

Present Tense

intrans.

	pos.		negat.
ak dmung	I say	ng díak dung	I do not say
ke dmung	you	ng díak m dung
ng dmung	he	ng díak l dung

trans.

ak dulí	I say it	ng díak deli	I do not say it
	(ak dulang I am saying has the same transitive form ak dulí)

Perfect Tense

intrans.

ak dilung	I have said	ng dímlak dung	I have not said
------------------	-------------	-----------------------	-----------------

trans.

ak dil 'lí	I have said it
-------------------	----------------

Imperative

ng du rengák	tell me !	ng deli	say it !
ng du rengí	tell him !

Figures of speech:

kmu, kmung, dmul kmu for »said, told« in constant use

see story 202 and texts in the Part V about the construction of a house

Why did you not say so? ng klisákl mang dímlak m delí ?

Oh man, what you should say, you do not say !

uasagaláia, gom dílu, di mdúng (di = diak) (story 195)

I give you the news ak mesúběd rekau (short ak subědau)

you give me the news ke mesúběd rengák (short ke subědák) give me the news ! msbedák !

Why did you not give me the news ? ng klisákl mang dímlak m bědák ? (story 203, line 129)

Why don't you tell me the news ? ng klisákl mang dímlak mugaískák⁴²⁵ ? (actually m dung gáis rengák)

No news for us? díak a gaiséd?

lak mobés ak dilung do not forget what I have said

ng díak 'kubés gom dílung I do not forget what you have said

25. To Speak, To Tell Melekói (transitive forms are formed with "to say" dmung)

Present Tense

	posit.		negat.
ak melekói	I speak	ng díak 'kulekói	I do not speak
ke melekói	you	ng díak molokói
ng melekói	he	ng díak lolokói

Perfect Tense

ak mel'lekói I have spoken

Imperative

melekói speak !

26. To Sleep Mageiváiu (see WALL. I, pp. 142—147 mechiuáiu)

Present Tense

ak mageiváiu	I sleep	ng díak mageiváiu	I do not sleep
		ng díak ko mageiváiu	you
		ng díak ě lě mageiváiu	he

Perfect Tense

ak mlěmageiváil have slept

Imperative

mageiváiu or bomgeiváiu sleep !

lak omageiváiu do not sleep !

27. To Cut Melólog (half tědóbog)

Present Tense

intrans.

	posit.		negat.
ak melóbög	I cut	ng díak ulóbog	I do not cut

trans.

ak doběgi	I cut it	ng díak doběgi	I do not cut it
ak duóbog	I cut them (many)	ng díak dóbog	I do not cut them

Perfect Tense

intrans.

ak mla melóbog	I cut it	ng dímlak 'kulóbög	I did not cut
-----------------------	----------	---------------------------	---------------

trans.

ak mla doběgi	I cut it	ng dímlak 'k doběgi	I did not cut it
----------------------	----------	----------------------------	------------------

Passive

ak deleběgěl	I am being cut	ng díak k deleběgěl	I am not being cut
ak meldóbog	I was cut	ng dímlak 'k medóbog	I was not cut

Imperative

melóbog	cut !	doběgi	cut it !	m dóbog	cut them (many) !
----------------	-------	---------------	----------	----------------	-------------------

28. To See Omés (see WALL. I, pp. 150—152)

Present Tense

intrans.

	posit.		negat.
ak umés	I see	ng díak 'kumés	I do not see
komés	you	ng díak ě mōmés	you
ngomés	he	ng díak ě lōmés	he
kedomés	we	dōmés	we
kiomés	we	kimōmés	we
komomés	you	mōmés	you
tomés	they	tě díak ě lōmes	they transit.

ak umés rengí or ak mesáng I see it

Future Tense

intrans.

ak momés I will see ng díak bokumés I will not see //357//.

trans.

ě k isáng I will see it ng díak bokisáng I will not see it

ě mēsáng you ng díak ě bomēsáng you ě l tēsáng he ng díak ě boļēsáng he ě dēsáng we ng díak bokisekau I will not see you

ě mēsáng you

ě lēsáng they

Perfect Tense

intrans.

ak mla omés I have seen ng dimlak 'kumés I have not seen

trans.

ak mla mesáng or ak milsang I have seen it ng díak 'kilsang I have not seen it kilsáng see chant 194, line 72

Imperative

bomōmés, ōmés see !

bomosáng or omés rengí see it !

Figures of Speech:

mě musál tal mesólk lagád so that you see an emotional man lēsengeī, kemesengeī they see it, you see it (chant 194, line 23 and line 49) compare 36. medengeī to know and above future tense trans.

29. Degór

Present Tense

posit.

negat.

ak degór I stand

ng díak 'k degór I do not stand

ke degór you ng díak m degór you

Future Tense

ak di logór I will stand

Perfect Tense

ak mla degór I have stood ng dimlak 'k degór I have not stood ke mla degór you ng mel (mla) degór he

Imperative

bomdegór stand up!

lak m degór do not stand up!

30.To Look For Osĩk

Present Tense

intrans.

posit.

negat.

ak usĩk I look for ng díak 'kusĩk

I am not looking for

kosĩk you ng díak mosĩk

you ngosĩk he ng díak losĩk

he //358//

trans.

ak sĩkí I am looking for it

ak usĩk rengí I am looking for it

Future Tense

ak mo sĩk I will look for ng díak bok sĩk

I will not look for

ak mo sĩki I will look for it

Perfect Tense

ak mla sĩk I have looked for or

ak ulsĩk I have looked for kulsĩk you

ngulsĩk he

Imperative

msĩk search ! msĩkí look for it !

31.Melím

Present Tense

posit.

negat.

ak melím	I drink	ng díak 'kulím	I do not drink
ke melím	you	ng díak ë molím	you
ng melím	he	ng díak ë lolím	he
		ng díak ë dolím	we
		ng díak 'ki molím	we
		ng díak ë molím	you
		të díak lolím	they

Imperative

melím drink ! ngilmí drink it! lak o molím rengí do not drink it!

32. Obés (o pronounced sonorously)

Present Tense

intrans.

	posit.		negat.
ak ubés	I forget	ng díak 'kubés	I do not forget
kobés	you	ng díak a mobés	you
ngobés	he	ng díak a lobes	he

(trans. with rengí)

Perfect Tense

intrans.

ak ubesóng	I have forgotten
kobesóng	you
ngobesóng	he

//359//

trans.

ak ubesó rengí	I have forgotten it
akubés besóng	I have forgotten all

Imperative

obés forget ! kobés rengi forget it !

(also to go away)

ak remīd	I go away	ak rīdung	I am going (chant 203, verse 3)
		te rīdang	they went
ak mla remīd	I went away (ak ma remīd story 202)

ak rirīd	I have gone away
ak urīdī	I have lost it	rirīd	gone
kurīdī	you
ngurīdī	he	bamrīd	go ahead!
kedurīdī	we
akiurīdī	we
komurīdī	you
turīdī	they

34. Mangīl

Present Tense

	posit.		negat.
ak mangīl	I wait	ng diak 'kungīl	I do not wait
ke mangīl	you	ng diak mongīl	you
ng mangīl	he	ng diak ng longīl	he

Past Tense

ak m mlēngīl	I waited
ke m mlēngīl	you

Imperative

mangīl	wait !	mgeielák	wait for me!
(also mdál "later" can be used)		lak ë mongīl	do not wait!

35. Lmangěl

Present Tense

	posit.		negat.
ak lmángěl	I cry	ng diak 'klangěl	I do not cry
ke lmángěl		ng diak m lánğěl	you
nga lmángěl		ng l 'lángěl	he
ked ë lmángěl
ki l 'lmangěl
kom l 'lmángěl
të lmángěl

//360 //

trans.

mek lengelí	I cry for it
kelongelák	you cry for me

med lengelí we mem leneglí you longelú (chant 194, verse 22) they

Perfect Tense	Simple Past
ak lilángěl	bomlángěl cry!
ke lilángěl	lak a m langěl do not cry!
ng lilángěl

36. Medengeĩ

Present Tense
intrans.
	posit.		negat.
ak medengeĩ	I know	ng díak ‘ kudengeĩ ⁴²⁶	I do not know
ke medengeĩ	you	ng díak módengeĩ	you
ng medengeĩ	he	ng díak lódengeĩ	he
ked ě medengeĩ	we	ng díak kedódengeĩ	we
ki medengeĩ	we	ng díak ki módengeĩ	we
ko medengeĩ	you	ng díak ko módengeĩ	you
tě medengeĩ	they	ng díak ě lódengeĩ	they
trans.
ak medengelí	I know it	ng díak ‘ kudungelí	I don’t know it
ke medengelí	you	ng díak modengelí	you
ng medengelí	he	ng díak lodengelí	he
Future Tense
ak mo medengeĩ	I will know (trans. medengelí)
Perfect Tense
ak ng mlě medengeĩ	I knew	(trans. medengelí)
ke mlě medengeĩ		ng dímlak ‘ kudengeĩ	I have not known

Examples:

sauak l mo medengelí	I would like to know it
ng tagá medengelí?	Who knows it?
ng díak ā medengelí ⁴²⁷	Nobody knows it
dikamko	do not know (story 85)
díak lěko, diakmko	you cannot know (story 80)

37. To Show*Ologólt*

ak ulogolt	I show	ak mla ogólt	I have shown
ak ulogoti	I show it	mogotí	show it !

38. To Meet*Olsiuókl* (WALL.)

ak siuëklâu ra	I meet you in . . .
ko siuëklák	you meet me
ko mo siuëklám	you meet us
ked ě kebětěg ra tiáng	we want to meet here
meng dio osú a pkúl	and the knees meet (chant 196, verse 6)

Index of Verbs.

	nr.	p.		nr.	p.
to work	5	343	to say	24, 25	354, 355
to remain	6	343	to sleep	26	355
to break	7	343	to cut	27	356
to bring	8	344, 346	to see	28	356
to drown	10	346	to be	1	341
to eat	11	346	to sit	6	343
to fall	12	347	to sit down	22	352
to ask	14	348	to speak	25	355
to give	8	344	to stand	29	357
to go	14	348	to look for	30	357
to have	1	341	to carry	2	341
to hold	2	341	to drink	31	358
to hear	17	350	to forget	32	358
to be able to	4	342	to loose	33	359
to come	15	349	to wait	34	359
to let	18	351	to cry	35	359
to put	19, 22	351, 352	to return	16	350
to learn	20	352	to know	36	360

to lie	21	352	to want	3	342
to make	23	353	to show	37	361
to bring along	2	341	to meet	38	361
to take	9	346	to return	16	350

Supplement

(Lit.)

General Literature

without the Spanish literature (Sp. Lit.) which was already mentioned in Vol I pp. 175—176.

Many hints I owe to Dr. HAMBRUCH in Hamburg, who also found there the maps of MCCLUER (see Volume I, p. 119, footnote 3) and to DAHLGREN's industrious activity. I also found some information in the collected literature about the Caroline Islands of Captain M. BROSE, published in the Deutsche Kolonialzeitung, volume 16, 1899, pp. 234, 241 a. 259; however some of his information is incorrect due to mistakes, as for instance Eisenreich's Gaea XXV is not called "Aus der Palau-Gruppe" but "Aus der Pala-Gruppe", which refers to the well-known massif in the Dolomites.

Finally I still must gratefully note all the support provided by the libraries in Berlin, Stuttgart and Tübingen, concerning the procurement of materials which were difficult to get.

I also have to point to the small book of LAURIDS BRUUN "Van Zantens glückliche Zeit, Ein Liebesroman von der Insel Pelli" supposedly referring to Palau, however it is full of mistakes and impossibilities. The same is true for Pechstein's drawings. Better descriptions can be found in SEMPER and TETENS (see further down), also in OTTO FELSING's "Sturmvogel", RICHARD DEEKEN's "Rauschende Palmen" etc.

The titles of the books are chronological arranged. Several texts of individual authors are sorted by date; to simplify matters they are also orders by roman numerals I, II, III, etc.

Lettres édifiantes et curieuses écrites par des Missionnaires de la Companie de Jésus. (L. éd.) New Edition. Toulouse 1810. Volume XV.

STÖCKLEIN, JOSEPH, Der Neue Welt-Bott oder Allerhand so Lehr- und Geist-reiche Brief / Schriften und Reis-Beschreibungen, welche von denen Missionariis der Gesellschaft Jesu aus Beyden Indien und anderen Über Meer gelegenen Ländern seit Anno 1642 bis 1726 in Europa angelangt seynd.

5. — 8. Teil 1704 — 1725. Augspurg 1726.

9. — 15. Teil 1726. Augspurg 1727

LE GENTIL DE LA BARBINAIS 1728. Nouveau voyage autour du monde. Paris p. 241. (Volume I, p. 73)

(CHARLES DE BROSSES) 1756. Histoire des Navigations aux Terres australes. Paris. In Vol. II (supplement), pp. 443—491, letters from the Jesuit missionaries CLAIN, GOBIEN, CANTOVA, etc., which are also in the Lettres édifiantes et curieuses (see Volume I, p. 14, footnote 4).

GEORGE KEATE 1788. *An account of the Pelew*⁴²⁸-Islands, situated in the western part of the Pacific Ocean, composed from the Journals and communications of Captain HENRY WILSON, and some of his officers, who, in August 1783 were there shipwrecked in the Antelope, a packet belonging to the honourable East India Company. Second edition. London.⁴²⁹

Nachrichten von den P. Inseln, German edition by GEORG FOSTER, Hamburg 1789.

The 5. edition of KEATE's oeuvre, Nottingham 1796, has the addition "with addition of Cpt. MAC CLUER's voyage". — (see the following)

JOHN PEARCE HOCKIN 1803. A supplement to the account of the Pelew-Islands compiled of the journals of the Panther and Endeavour, two vessels sent by the honourable East India Company to the Islands in the year 1790 and from the oral communications of Captain H. WILSON. London.

German: J.P. HOCKINS Bericht von den neuesten Reisen nach den Pelew-Inseln, besonders des Capitän MC CLUER und seiner Gefährten. In Bibliothek der neuesten Reisebeschreibungen von SPRENGEL und EHRMANN, 23. Vol. Weimar 1805.

An account of this expedition by AMASO DELANO in Narrative of voyage and travels. Boston 1817.

ALEXANDER DALRYMPLE, A collection of charts of ports etc. in the indian Navigation, London 1781—1794. 6 volumes, of which 4 are texts. The 3 maps of MC CLUER (Volume I, fig. 10, 11, 12) are in Class XV Marianes, Baskees and Philipinas nr. 23—25.

JOHN MEARES 1790. Voyages made in the year 1788—89. London.

JAMES WILSON 1799. A missionary voyage to the Southern Pacific Ocean 1796—98 in the ship Duff. London (pp. 299—302).

OTTO VON KOTZEBUE 1821. Entdeckungsreise in die Südsee und nach der Beringstraße zur Erforschung einer nordöstlichen Durchfahrt 1815—18. Weimar. 3 volumes. In the third volume.

ADALBERT V. CHAMISSO "Bemerkungen und Ansichten auf einer Entdeckungsreise" etc.

A. KRUSENSTERN 1827. Receuil des Memoirs Hydrographiques St. Petersburg. (p. 325. Les Palaos ou îles Pelew.)

LOUIS DE FREYCINET 1827. Voyage autour du monde exécuté sur les corvettes des S. M. l'Uranie et la Physicienne 1817—1820. Historique Paris 1827—29. 2 volumes.

JULES DUMONT D'URVILLE 1830. Voyage de la Corvette L'Astrolabe 1826—29. Paris 1830—33. Volume 1—5.

Besides Atlas der Hydrographie.

1841. Voyage au Pole Sud et dans l'Océanie sur les Corvette l'Astrolabe et la Zelée 1837—40. Histoire du Voyage. Paris 1841—46. Volume I—X (T.V pp. 208 and 209).

HORACE HOLDEN 1836. A narrative of the Shipwreck captivity and sufferings of HORACE HOLDEN and BENJ. H.NUTE, who were castaway in the American ship Mentor on the Pelew Islands in the year 1832 and for two years afterwards subjected to unheard of sufferings among the barbarous inhabitants of Lord North's Island. Boston. p. 133. Published by J.B.B. EYRIÈS, the editor of the Nouvelles Annales des voyages in this journal. Paris. Vol. I, pp. 257—295, vol. II, pp. 129—167, with a supplement of EYRIÈS pp.168—176.

A good review of the original text is in The North American review, vol. 43, Boston 1836, pp. 206—226, where on the last page the liberation of the ones who were left on Tobi is announced (see Volume I p. 135).

ANDREW CHEYNE 1852. A description of the Islands in the Western Pacific ocean. London.

L. H. GULICK 1862. Micronesia. Nautical Magazine 1862, p. 174 and Journ. of the Americ. Oriental Soc. Vol. III. New-York 1853.

RUSSEL ROBERTSON 1876. The Caroline Islands. Transactions of the Asiatic Soc. of Japan. Vol. V, part 1. 1876/77. pp. 41—63.

KARL SEMPER I 1871. "Falsche Benennung eines Inselvolkes" und

(SEM.) "Palausprache". Korrespondenzblatt der Deutsch. Ges. f.

Anthrop., Ethn. und Urgesch. 1871. pp. 14 and 63.

II 1873. Die Palauinseln im Stillen Ocan. Leipzig.

III 1880. Die natürlichen Existenzbedingungen der Thiere.

Leipzig.

N. VON MIKLUCHO-MACLAY I 1878. . . . Archipel Pelau. Ivestija

(v.M.M.) Imperatorskago Russkago obsjestva (Mitt. d. Kais. russ.

geogr. Gesellschaft) 1878. Vol. 14, p. 289 (see Volume I, p. 149).

II Anthropologische Notizen, gesammelt auf einer Reise in Westmikronesien und Nordmelanesien im Jahre 1876. Zeitschr. f. Ethnologie 1878. Vol. 10, p. (99) (see part V Anthropologie p. 298).

JOHANN S. KUBARY I 1873. Die Palauinseln in der Südsee. Journ. Mus.

(KUB.) Godeffroy. Heft IV, pp. 1—62.

II 1885. Die socialen Einrichtungen der Pelauer, in: Ethnographische Beiträge zur Kenntnis der carolinischen Inselgruppen. Berlin 1885.

III 1885. Die Todtenbestattung auf den Pelauinseln. Orig. Mitteilungen aus der Ethnogr. Abt. der kgl. Mus. zu Berlin. 1885. Jahrgg. 1. Heft 1, pp. 4—11.

- IV 1885. Die Verbrechen und das Strafverfahren auf den Palau-Inseln. Ibid.
- V 1888. Die Religion der Pelauer, in: A. BASTIAN, Allerlei aus Volks- und Menschenkunde, vol. I. Berlin 1888.
- VI Das Tätowiren in Mikronesien, speciell auf den Carolinen, in: JOEST Tätowiren. Berlin 1887 (see Journ. Mus. God. Heft VI).
- VII 1895. Über das einheimische Geld auf der Insel Yap und auf den Pelauinseln, in: Ethnographische Beiträge zur Kenntniß des Karolinen-Archipels. Leiden 1895. pp. 1—28. I pl.
- VIII 1895. Die Industrie der Pelau-Insulaner; ibid. pp. 128—298. 37 plates.
- IX ? Manuscript in the possession of Mrs. JULIA SWIATLOWSKA (see Volume I, p. 143).
- CHRISTIAN LUERSSEN 1873. Ein Beitrag zur Farnflora der Palaos- oder Pelew-Inseln. Journ. Mus. Godeffroy. Heft I 1873.
- OTTO FINSCH I 1875. Die Vögel der Palaugruppe. Journ. Mus. God. Heft VIII 1875. (Here former literature about the Avifauna.)
- II 1900. Das Klilt-Armband der Pelauer und zur Klarstellung desselben. Vol. 77, p. 153.
- III 1914. Südseearbeiten. Gewerbe- und Kunstfleiß, Tauschmittel und Geld der Eingeborenen. Hamburg.
- A. WICHMANN 1875. Zur geologischen Kenntniß der Palauinseln; ibid. p. 251.
- G. RIEMER 1878. Excerpt from a diary, concerning the voyage of the S.M.S. Hertha to East Asia and the islands of the South Pacific 1874—77.
- Photo album with a short introductory text (photos from Palau nr. 229—240) (see Volume 2 plate 12, nr. 1—2).
- Südseetypen 1880. Anthropologisches Album des Museum Godeffroy. 25 plates and 75 original photographs and text. Hamburg 1880.
- J. D. E. SCHMELTZ und R. KRAUSE 1881. Die Ethnographisch-(S.K.) Anthropologische Abteilung des Museum Godeffroy in Hamburg. Ein Beitrag zur Kenntnis der Südsee-Völker. Hamburg 1881 (pp. 405—429 and p. 485).
- A. B. MEYER 1881. Bilderschriften des ostindischen Archipels und der Südsee. Leipzig 1881 (contains SEMPER's drawings of the Palau-Bai, of which a colored sample is also in K. WOERMANN's Geschichte der Kunst, Leipzig 1900, in vol. I, p. 56; MEYER's anthropological work, see section IV, p. 298; in addition bow and arrow section V 2^b).
- GREAL 1882. L'exploration des îles Palaos par les P.P. CORTYT et du BÉRON. Bull. de la Soc. Géogr. de Lille. Vol. I.
- FRANZ HERNSHEIM 1883. Südsee-Erinnerungen 1875—1880. Berlin 1883.

E. W. DAHLGREN 1884. Om Palau-öarna. Ymer, vol. 4, pp. 187—214 and 310—337.

//366//

A. RENOARD 1885. Les îles Carolines. Bull. De la Soc. de géogr. de Lille. Vol. 4, pp. 468—81.

J. W. EAST 1885. An expedition to the Pelew Group of the Caroline Islands in 1882. COLBOURN's Unit. Serv. Magaz. Vol. 114, part II, pp. 304—314.

S. STEINBERG 1889. Vom Schiffsjungen zum Wasserschout. Erinnerungen aus dem Leben des Kapitäns ALFRED TETENS. 2. Ed. Hamburg 1889.

YNGVAR NIELSEN 1889. Om Pelau-øerne. Norsk. Geogr. Selskab. Årbog. Vol. I, pp.83/85

HUGO ZÖLLER 1891. Deutsch Neu-Guinea und meine Ersteigung des Finsterre-Gebirges. Stuttgart 1891 (pp. 291 a. 365).

A. SENFT 1905. Bericht über eine Reise nach den Palau-Inseln vom 18. Juli bis 22. Aug. 1904. Deutsches Kolonialblatt 16. Jahrg. p. 49.

1906. Bericht über seine Rundreise durch die Westkarolinen und Palauinseln; ibid. 17. Jahrg., p. 281.

Dr. BORN 1907. Die Palau-Inseln; ibid. pp. 286—289.

The other government reports are mentioned in Volume I, pp. 155—160.

ERICH KAISER 1907. Beiträge zur Petrographie und Geologie der deutschen Südseeinseln. Jahresbuch der Kgl. Preuß. geolog. Landesanstalt. 1. Vol. 24, Berlin.

LEO FROBENIUS 1904. Das Zeitalter des Sonnengottes. 1. Vol. Berlin 1904.

F. VON LUSCHAN 1908. Sonderausstellung des Kgl. Mus. für Völkerkunde im Kunstgewerbemuseum. Amtliche Berichte aus den Kgl. Kunstsammlungen. 29. Jahrg. April 1908.

A. THALHEIMER Beitrag zur Kenntnis der Pronomina personalia et possessiva der Sprachen Mikronesiens, Stuttgart 1908.

PAUL HAMBRUCH I 1909. Beiträge zur Somatologie von Madagaskar, (HA.) Indonesien, Bismarkarchipel und Mikronesien. Forschungsreise S.M.S. Planet 1906/07. Vol. V, pp. 31—55.

II 1916. Südseemärchen aus Australien, Neu-Guinea, Fidji, Karolinen, Samoa, Tonga, Hawaii, Neu-Seeland u. a. Jena 1916.

Reichsmarineamt I 1913. Südseehandbuch. IV bis VI. Teil. Die Karolinen, (R.M.A.) Marshallinseln und Marianen. Berlin 1913.

II 1911. Karte der Palau-Inseln Nr. 180 Tit. XI Nr. 401.

III 1911. Pläne der Palauinseln Nr. 516. Tit. XI nr. 401^a. Malákal-Harbor, S. E. approach to the harbor of Malákal, island of Angaur, Schönian-Harbor.

P. RAYMUND 1911. Die Faden- und Abnehmespiele auf Palau. Anthropos, vol. 6, pp. 40—61.

//367//

P. SALVATOR WALLESETER I 1911. Grammatik der Palausprache. Mitt. des (WALL.) Seminars für Orientalische Sprachen zu Berlin. 14. Jahrg.

II 1913. Palau Wörterbuch. Hongkong 1913 (Typis Nazareth).

Aus den Missionen der rhein.-westf. Kapuziner-Ordensprovinz auf den

(Aus d. Miss.) Karolinen, Marianen und Palau-Inseln in der deutschen Südsee. Druck der Waisenlehrlinge in Oberginingen, Lothringen, 1908—1914 (see Volume I, p. 159).

WILHELM MÜLLER 1917. Yap. Volume 1 und 2. Hamburg.

AUGUSTIN KRÄMER I 1897. Über den Bau der Korallenriffe usw. Kiel 1897.

II 1908. Studienreise nach den Zentral- und Westkarolinen. Mitt. aus d. deutschen Schutzgeb.
Heft III, p. 169.

III 1908. Ornamentik und Mythologie von Palau. Korrespondenzbl. der deutsch. Ges. für Anthrop., Ethnol. u. Urg. 39. Jahrg.

IV 1914. Palau als Naturschutzpark, with illustrations. Deutsche Kolonialztg. Febr. '14, p. 159.

V 1914. Westmikronesien und Palau im Besonderen. Asiatisches Jahrbuch, p. 47.

//p. 431//

Verlag von L. Friederichsen & Co., Hamburg.

The following volumes of the “Ergebnisse der Südsee-Expedition 1908—1910” have already been published:

II. Ethnographie:

A. Melanesien

Volume I

Der Kaiserin-Augusta-Fluß

by Dr. Otto Reche

Abteilungsvorsteher at the Hamburgische Museum für Völkerkunde.

4°, X u. pp. 488 with 475 fig. in the text, 88 collotype prints and 1 map. 1913

Price: bound M. 84.—.

Reduced price for those who buy all volumes of the “Ergebnisse” M. 67.20

B. Mikronesien

Volume 1

Nauru

by Dr. Paul Hambruch,

Abteilungsvorsteher at the Hamburgischen Museum für Völkerkunde.

I. half-volume 4°, XI a. pp. 458 with 108 illust. In the text, 19 collotype prints a. 1 map. 1914. M. 56.—.

II. half-volume 4°, VIII a. pp. 314 with 338 illust. in the text a. 8 collotype prints 1915. M. 42.—.

Reduced price for those who buy all volumes of the “Ergebnisse”

M. 44.80 or M. 33.60.

Volume 2

Yap

by Dr. Wilhelm Müller (Wismar)†.

I. half-volume 4°, XI a. pp. 380 with 332 illust. In the text, 70 collotype prints a. 1 Figure. 1917. M. 70.—.

II. half-volume 4°, IX a. pp. 430 1918. M. 84.—.

Reduced price for those who buy all volumes of the “Ergebnisse”

M. 56.— or M. 67.20.

Volume 3

Palau

by Prof. Dr. Augustin Krämer.

I. half-volume 4°, XVI a. pp. 252 with 48 illust. in the text, 2 in color, 11 collotype prints a. 3 Figures. 1917. M. 42.—.

II. half-volume 4°, pp. 367 with 4 colored and 16 collotype prints, 57 illust. in the text, besides 50 Figures of villages and 11 family trees. 1919. M. 60.—.

Reduced price for those who buy all volumes of the “Ergebnisse”

M. 33.60 a. 48.—.

Volume 4

Kusae

by Dr. E. Sarfert.

I. half-volume 4°, XXVIII a. pp. 298 with 159 illust. in the text, 1 in color a. 44 black plates a. Figures. 1819. M. 60.—.

Reduced price for those who buy all volumes of the “Ergebnisse”

M. 48.—.

In print:

Map and report of the voyage by Prof. Dr. Thilenius a. F. E. Hellwig.

The publisher's additional increase in price is added to the books, the additional increase in price of the product line is not.

¹*ngarbábabove*, dáob sea. MC CLUER: Bablethoup; CHEYNE: Babelthouap; KUB: Babeltaob;

v.M.M: Babeltaob; COELLO: Babeldzuab; SENFFT: Babelsoap.

²*gogeál* the high rocks, gútũ the earth.

³KUB. Aoltaob; ngarióu under, just like Pelíliou = pelú land, ióu under.

⁴KUB. dassapadaland gejukl; bitáng "part", iángěd "sky".

⁵In 1910, a lonely white trader was living here; the only one in the whole archipelago.

⁶= "to be rúbak".

⁷= "his head"

⁸*gosotul* subst. of meséb, ngaũ fire.

⁹On Samoa and Neu Mecklenburg I found similar circumstances. Especially in Melanesia, the settlement of the mountains before the one on the coast can be taken for granted.

¹⁰About the anthropological one of bright and dark see part IV.

¹¹The sun god, see story 168. More in part VI, Galid.

¹²1. 1. 1911, from the Miss., 1912, p. 33.

¹³Only counted as one inhabited village; but can just as well be registered as two alive and 3 uninhabited ones.

¹⁴Mentioned in story 211.

¹⁵See map 4 from Galáp-Ngabúkěd-a Ulimáng.

¹⁶Called "Point of the Rats". See story 150, Ngartagaběap.

¹⁷only pandanus trees, typical for this grassland-like country are there. In such a tree the sea needle of story 184 in part VII got stuck, when he jumped over land in competition with the hermit crab.

¹⁸From alksid you reach Gólei in the northwest in 15 minutes and in the south in the same time the hill Delóbok. From here to Mangal'lang also about a 1/4 of an hour. The hill Delóbok should not to be mistaken for the isthmus Delobokagól. From the hill you have a beautiful view to the north and south.

¹⁹He was one of those who had been building at night on the bai in a Delóbok, see story 5 a. 40, part VII.

²⁰Also called Ngadég, see story 29; the galíd of this mountain are supposed to have had fish bodies and not human bodies like on the Ngeráod and Ngulítěl. More in the chapter 'Galíd' in part VI.

²¹see story 17 of Tipětíp ak mǐěg.

²²A third island Nguruleáng, which has also been mentioned before (KUB. map 1, Ngarulewáng) lies on the west coast opposite of the mountain a Réngěd.

²³"Bay", poss. metkerél.

²⁴KUB. repeatedly talks about eight, which is not correct, as Ngrīl does not belong to the federation.

²⁵*úgul*, the ground, the thicker end of a stem; úgul a gětiut the tack, when the boats are tacking; see story 11 about Boi. A real bed of the mast is near the rubak-bai in Mangal'láng, see there.

²⁶The place where the stone of pict. 2 is standing can be seen pointed out by an arrow in pict. 1.

²⁷from galalákl "quiet, not moving" (see Ngorót story 9, part VII).

²⁸In the chant 204 verse 4 of the Ugél re Gulsiáng it is called Gades ētuēlēi.

²⁹Obviously assembled from Jáu Remáng (see chant 205), from the northern gable a stone path leads down to two bathing places; opposite of the path aniliud-pavement called Remáng, see chant 204 verse 2.

³⁰The bai is well built; inside there are aimul-bound beams over 2 m from the floor planks, whereas in most of the other bai you hit them with your head.

³¹see story 16.

³²mentioned in story 204, verse 2.

³³*gomasto* twist, goměsóngěl base for twisting, súld coconut fibers.

³⁴Indeed, in 1913 I heard that he had become a Guóng.

³⁵Once this compound had more houses Merés, Togodebeí, Otebúl etc. Title of the house Klagad l bai. See story 204. The surrounding bushland was also called Merés.

³⁶see story 205.

³⁷From Iáu Remáng .see above p. 15.

³⁸In 1907 it was still standing, but in 1910 it had already collapsed.

³⁹Also the name for the Kekerél tói, see Vol. 1, p. 202, footnote 1.

⁴⁰The channel, a Idóng in the south of it, has been determined by me by dead reckoning.

⁴¹indeed they only received the female title Gěbingaragalás back.

⁴²about 1-2 baskets.

⁴³In chant 205 of Ngirailangaláng, verse 2 it is called klúpěd-channel (= táog), there the 2. channel a Idorengrīl is also mentioned (in the map a Idóng).

⁴⁷Informant.

⁴⁸Kub.VI p. 25 meant only the eastern side.

⁴⁹Already in 1909 rather crumbling, with posts in form of figures; according to Kub. VIII p. 248 a two-storey goutáng bai stood in Ngabiúl in the honor of the god. It was situated at the rubak-bai just like in Irai (see Ngrīl).

⁵⁰see chant 205 of Ngirailangaláng.

⁵¹the placenta is called rágad, thus it cannot have any relation to biul, which could have a meaning as a poss. from bui prudence.

⁵²from kingál seat.

⁵³*bedógě* fulfillment.

⁵⁴*eis* sounds like e.

⁵⁵at the cut south of Mangal'lang, see above p. 10.

⁵⁶see above p. 13.

⁵⁷also pronounced Gēsáng or Gědáng.

⁵⁸P. Raymund writes Gollei; I also heard several times Gól'lei, though Gólei seems to be the most common.

⁵⁹Here seems to have been the Metúl where the Ngáruangěl people were supposed to have first landed. Stroy 20.

⁶⁰. . depicts galid Medegeĩpélau, because the boathouse became famous due to him. see story 197.

⁶¹Formerly called Měángělbai, see story 36.

⁶²P. Raymund, p. 55, calls a cat's cradle tangelbath raChollei, and says that in former times the stone has been forked, though today it is rounded. As you can see this is not the case.

⁶³In KUB.mapnr. I Artebian lies on the northeastern part, between Ngarabaŭ and Gólei; at SEMP. II p. 135 called Artebiang. This can only be Ngatmél.

⁶⁴To be distinguished from the island Gor'rak or Ngarakedlúkl next to alraĩ (see Vol. I, p. 204).

⁶⁵According to Sem: III p. 45 it is supposed to have been dug by the Spaniards in 1830. Semp.says to have seen its rims in 1862 far above the high water mark. This he considered proof for the lifting. (see Kr. I p. 52). I could not confirm this observation.

⁶⁶v. M. M. writes: "The settlement was destroyed, many people were killed and all their belongings were plundered. When the attackers had no more ammunition they started shooting with splinters of bottles, causing terrible wounds. They only left after they had made sure that the inhabitants of the island were dead or had fled. The Aibadul himself ordered that the last remains of the destroyed settlement should be burnt". KUB. VIII p. 296 says that the inhabitants of Nggeĩangěl, who were scattered over Babeldáob, felt humiliated when they were called by the name of their islands, because of this humiliation.

⁶⁷The big taro, Caladium, called br'rák by the Palauans. Kr.

⁶⁸Also KUB.V p. 20 in his listing. On p. 28 he says: A few names like Tukeram show by their incomprehensible form a very early origin. — This name points to the Central Carolinian Islands. Compare also story 10; see also Ngaráus distr. IV.

⁶⁹In 1906 the god's priest (Ngiralūl) was exiled to Saipan, because of incitement to revolt.

⁷⁰see Gólei, a landing place with the same name.

⁷¹R. M. A. I part IV p. 59: 13 sea miles and 6 sea miles circumference.

⁷²Concerning their privileges, Kub.II p. 72 and Kub.VII p. 215.

⁷³"About Ngúrang" the uninhabited village (see pict. 37, Vol. 1 p. 229).

⁷⁴(see story 19 about the 7 Ketord). The mountain is an important aid to navigation, see W. Müller Yap p. 444.

⁷⁵see Vol. I p. 241 pict. 48 and above at ālebúkūl the story of the bush ghosts.

⁷⁶see story 182.

⁷⁷Remark Vol. I p. 236 135(?) is a mistake.

⁷⁸Compare with story 38 of Gobagád ruaū.

⁷⁹Probably tabadál'l dil "Trailhead of the Woman".

⁸⁰see the landing place Melangláng on Nggeiangēl.

⁸¹on map 3 p. 41 Ptilērung.

⁸²one other tomb, see story 57, where today is the bridge, the 2. near to bai D. Měangēldil.

⁸³KUB: IV p. 61 calls her Merúul pélau, which would mean "The Maker of Palau".

⁸⁴Somewhere here was a red stone called ngisél a delarók "Egg of the Money-Bird" in reference to Ngorót, story 9.

⁸⁵at Ngěóng, as the rock face near a Urúng is also called, a tree Ptágesēól'l, see story 98.

⁸⁶The place is also called Ngategúr, where one of the two graves of story 57 is.

⁸⁷Whether all of it or only a part of it is called a Il'loi or ālui (see story 203 of Madlútk) could not be confirmed.

⁸⁸this correlates with KUB. II p. 112, who says that Ng. has no Mulbékel and Ruk like the other districts but only a ruk-dance of inferior quality called Tamangél a wak (temengél a vág).

⁸⁹at Túblai there are also delasêg, the fishes kelát, kěmēdúkl, gorovídēl, gadúi, and gēsál. The family god was Reméng as at āldíd. KUB. mentions also the village god of Goréör, Ugērērák, as god of Ngabúkēd. This has to do with the Ngáruangēl descent of the newer a Idid-line (see story 20).

⁹⁰Side of heaven, geographically called despadál'l.

⁹¹see above p. 52.

⁹²Former blai Goisaváng; see story 20 where it is said that it is keblil of āldíd on Goréör and Gor. At. 1 Gen. I where Rbogó ra Goisaváng or Goioáng marries Bílung 4 and becomes the ancestral father of the new a Idid-line.

⁹³see story 60.

⁹⁴see above and story 20.

⁹⁵also called Romerbab – "Romei above" – in contrast to bl. 24 Romerióu.

⁹⁶Sounds like gogumí.

⁹⁷From bandera, flag in Spanish.

⁹⁸see Ngardolólók and story 161.

⁹⁹In 1907 this bai showed a telltale signs of fire (see Vol. 1, p. 155). I heard the reason was the punishment of the Spanish warship Villalobos ca. in 1892: The padre wanted a kluk of rubak Ngiraróis for workers from Ngaregolóng, but he did not want to give anything. When the warship arrived, he ran away; then they burned his house, 2 other ones, the rubak-bai, a boat house, etc. Ngiraróis had taken the kluk from a man Bidir in the house of the padre.

¹⁰⁰see story 14 where the name, which is Yapese, is mentioned for a taro patch in a Ulimáng.

¹⁰¹KUB. Ngarulumúong, once a piece of land where wine cutters were working, see page 56.

¹⁰²Once a blai in Galáp, where the female devil was living, the word is still to be found with the female title woman of blai 1.

¹⁰³situated a little bit lower than the main path.

¹⁰⁴Inland, not far to the south of the trailhead is a stone path leading up hill; it is supposed to have lead to a rubak-bai.

¹⁰⁵after the famous club of Goréör.

¹⁰⁶*lei* = lius coconut.

¹⁰⁷Mentioned by SENFFT p. 50. "In the windows of the upper floor or, to be more precise, outside of them, there are roughly carved figures, of which one is decorated with a top hat and a up-turned mustache."

¹⁰⁸Compare Ngësáng and Roispelú distr. V.

¹⁰⁹Near the hill Ngarapkngê, ruk-dance is here a good word for "Fight" with Nggësar and Ngarsúl, compare Bars ra kesaû in Ngariáp distr. IX.

¹¹⁰in Vol. 1 p. 229 pict 36 and map 3 incorrectly indicated as Gúrang.

¹¹¹According to KUB. Agol is divided into Ripkal, Ngedop and Ngessal, all 3 belonging to the land Galáp.

¹¹²KUB. VI p. 19 mentions Ira komgúul for Ngaramedei, see there and Kabelik ♂ as well as Dirakamim ♀ for Gol. On p. 32 he also mentions the aforementioned for Gol.

¹¹³The name comes from godoglul or gedegul "sent" (see story 239), mongedegul more like "to bring in order", that means "people were diligent in the appeasement of hardships and disputes".

¹¹⁴Ngartúkür is not included, see district III.

-
- ¹¹⁵From the mountain Geleós on the northern tip of Babldáob in S 28°W. The galíd was a big bird, that endangered here the boats; the nearby double-point Debúsög gurúr is named after a hollow gurúr-tree, that sounds in the wind just like a debúsög-trumpet.
- ¹¹⁶A galíd from Ngaramásäg (see story 186a) "Eye of Iegad", see Vol. 1, p. 241 and plate 11. The rock, approximately 30 m high and 25 wide (tuff with pieces of lava), is hanging over just like a balcony. During a flood it must be a beautiful sight.
- ¹¹⁷During the great flood (story 19) a shark (gadéng) and a ray (rul) remained lying here, both turned into stone.
- ¹¹⁸Kub. V p. 51 says: "Morgórok obogim is a very old deity, who has its house in the big rock in the land not far from Radman who robs the fish traps of the coastal inhabitants as well as the syrup stored in the apagey. Therefore, all around the rock, you can find a lot of apagey shards". — It is a matter of the female thief Meregórog bokú, who has been mentioned in the section about Ngivál and who lives there on the ked.
- ¹¹⁹Origin of the name is unknown; a Peluál a smaû is mentioned at the Olebetápe Islands (Vol. 1, p. 200, footnote 4) "the Land of Smaû". Rub. nr. V of Ngardolólók.
- ¹²⁰see story 194, footnote 68; on the slope the bush Dëlólok.
- ¹²¹Compare Nagbiúl in Ngaregolóng, etc.
- ¹²²From here a stone path leads steeply down to the landing place Ngërruráng. The channel forks; the western branch is called Ngeruráng, and is accompanied for some distance by a stone pier; the eastern branch is called Ngaregáp. See chant 194, footnote 34 a. 43.
- ¹²³The range of hills stretches to the southwest towards the coast; there in the mangrove belt are two single mounds, Nagdélei with pointa Itebaldmaû and Delóbok. I could not research how and if they are connected. A third hill a Gomúl lies to the south of the river mouth.
- ¹²⁴Our living quarters in 1907.
- ¹²⁵In former times this was the name for a house where Ngirakloultaóg exchanged a piece of money that got its name from this event (story 61).
- ¹²⁶KUB: V p. 38 says about the foundation the following:
- "An old tradition tells us how for instance the puffinus became a bird of the gods. According to this tradition the puffinus lived in the old Kloukoygul on Eylmalk, where he was raised in a house. He showed his gratitude by going out to sea fishing, thus providing the family of his protectors with fish. But once, upon returning from the sea, he could no longer locate the well-known house. Koryor had attacked Kloukoygul and had destroyed it; the land was now empty. For a long time the Kokhayo was flying around looking for his mother until he finally found her in Engkasar. A song commemorates the joyful recognition of the separated ones. The inhabitants offered him love and devotion; even today he is often fed and tamed. The Kadám in Radman stands in close connection to the past of this stretch of land. According to a legend he is supposed to have come on the back of this bird, though on the other hand this is not supposed to have been the case. Because once upon a time a kite game was performed in Kolékl, where a woman held tight to the tail of one and was thus carried to Radman, where she was set down, had children and founded Radman and Gurdman. The kalild of Kolekl found her again and settled next to her as Iramerda. The deity has its picture in a kite built from buuk-leaves and bamboo. The Augél le kalid in Ngarupesáng is represented as a wooden dysporus that is also called Kadám and that is hanging, together with a vehicle dedicated to him, in the bai a rupak." The first story of the gogáio-puffinus has nothing to do with the one about the kite, the kadám, the frigate bird; as well as nothing with the dysporus of a Ugél'lëgalid; see also KUB. II, p. 122. The connection with Nggësár see at Ngërutói.

¹²⁷Similar remarks also there p. 134 and 142.

¹²⁸Compare blai 18 in Melekéiok.

¹²⁹*bug* = dil woman.

¹³⁰From otongi "to put in between".

¹³¹*bug*—dil.

¹³²From mangám "to glide out of the hand" because they took the title Gádlbai from Gurdmaû, because the galid-money was spent here (see above).

¹³³Where the name comes from not known, probably from a piece of land or a deserted place of the same name near the boathouse Gokemí. According to some other information the villages of the district are supposed to be the "posts" tangál of the house Melekéiok, whence the name Ngatangál or Ngatëlngál.

¹³⁴KUB.II p. 56 Arapagéklbekl, "These from the New War Canoe". The woman are called ar Tóged leî, the young ones ar Bútileî.

¹³⁵KUB.V p. 17 names for this Mar Aygól Engkasar.

¹³⁶"blossom of the iron wood tree".

¹³⁷according to P. Raymond p. 46 a former village.

¹³⁸In front of the house a small summer house was situated on poles in the water, connected by a foot bridge; the natives called this place Klúpěd ra ldesél, most likely in former times a landing place, as klúpěd = táog is "channel".

¹³⁹Plotting the position from the head of the pier: Pkulatáp rival 356°, Pkulngësáng N.

¹⁴⁰B and C are called this, because Ngëruliang and Ngaremegaû from Ngivál constructed them.

¹⁴¹On the ilíud stood a tet-cabinet with the same name for the village-god, see below p. 101.

¹⁴²KUB. II p. 131: "In Mologoyók Ngomoróyol (gomeróèl) is surrounded by a small and delicate grove of kossuk-(késuk) and gordon-(gerdau) trees. This is considered to be the abode of god Kolegoyók, who consumes the blobáols (head trophies). This god belongs to the old gods, and he is symbolized by a small stone, which resembles a human face." v.M.M. says that olegoik-offerings are brought to the kalit-stone and that the stone levitates from the ground when members of the club have captured a head people in the village do not yet know about. A stone, Mangachu, is also supposed to be there; it has a human appearance and eats the hair of those women who pass it unkempt. Finally there is also a stone-kalit of Kodalmelek, which is called Kalit-klo-klou (klou "big") by the natives.

¹⁴³"Stone Path of the Woman"; our residence while we were in Melekéiok.

¹⁴⁴From olegíb to sail around a point, and Ngërámës, the village nearby.

¹⁴⁵According to the legend, a woman called Meloódau ra mesíkt lived there (melaû to wave, mesíkt the Pleiades). As soon as the Pleiades appeared at night, she was sitting in front of the house making her magic (gólei) so that they would come slowly, because otherwise sickness would come into the world: the young ones became gray and lost their teeth, etc. She appealed to god Derungul'lau, the navigator of the Pleiades. One night she turned into stone and thus the magic was lost (see story 94 and 95). According to KUB. VIII p. 227 the god of the Pleiades is supposed to have had his seat in Narámmes (Ngërámës) on 4 stones, the bearing of the boat.

¹⁴⁶at the times of MC CLUER it was still there; see map in Vol. 1 p. 118.

¹⁴⁷This "Sand" gol is probably the sand of Ngëráng, which KUB. V p. 61 thought to be Dorangol.

¹⁴⁸Túrang is a term of endearment for goddesses; the jump headfirst seems to be in connection with story 14 and 58.

¹⁴⁹see story 137.

^{150 a.151}The kleblil names of blai nr. VI Derebeî and Ibúngel'lagáng (IX).

¹⁵²political group of distr. II Ngarárd.

¹⁵³see a similar event in Ngrîl distr. 1.

¹⁵⁴According to KUB. I p. 33 4 families from Ng. are supposed to have settled in Melekéiok; this is not correct (see also his later account in story 29 part VII). There he writes that once Melekéiok was comprised of two sides, the northern upper one where Arngúul ruled (see rub. nr. 12 a Rengûl) and a southern lower one where Atmagey and Sagaruleo ruled.

¹⁵⁵Compare story 58, footnote.

¹⁵⁶see part V construction of a house.

¹⁵⁷Front- and back-gable, see the sitting order on the ilūd-pavement above at the description of the place p. 89.

¹⁵⁸There is supposed to be a deep hole in the water at Ngardolólók, more correctly at Ngatanggaû, distr. IX.

¹⁵⁹A little bit of this also at KUB. V p. 23 and 26.

¹⁶⁰see chant 201; according to KUB. II p. 139-140 all 8 bai and houses had been burnt down and dynamited. KUB. VIII p. 226 says that one bai had been substituted by Naramakhan (Ngaremegaû in Ngivál (see above p. 88).

¹⁶¹Already mentioned by MC CLUER as Erikli.

¹⁶²According to KUB. II p. 76 he stays in the ulangáng = spirit hut, where he remains 30—40 days.

¹⁶³from oldak to come together, unite, dúi title, uldékl or gongróél hut.

¹⁶⁴from melóbog the cut off, thus obviously a fare well meal.

¹⁶⁵KUB. II pp. 76-77 says about the courses of food: The female relatives prepare the food for the chief in the bai, which is sent into the bai. First the Obsisebél a dny (more correct olsisebél a dúi from olsiseb, to place something into something KR.) which consists of meat dishes as well as cooked and raw taro. Then later on follows the Blahedelél a dny (more correct blagedelél from blagiděl slice of taro) made of Apelsiyek (a blsík, a dish of taro with coconut oil). First comes the Gal umumrúmus consisting of sweet dishes, Tósok and Tolumar (Unintelligible KR.) Then follows Gal giritakl (kal food, keritákl see above and Gal ongelteláng dny (kal ongeltél a dúi from mangēólt to cool in the wind) and finally the Oltobotél a dny (oltobodél from oltóbéd to bring out, see Ngabúkéd). This is a bigger feast where the Ortókol (see above gotógel miġg) is distributed. Then seclusion until the blebáol is done. Even then he is not allowed to go to the beach, until a hongét (gonged), a big catch of fish has happened. His family receives a share of it, the second one his lawful friend rubak nr. II. All men related by marriage come now in order to pay their horau (gorau—contribution). The last catch of fish búulley (bulēi) is also a special event. The big net, filled with fish, is tied together and shall be brought on a bier to the Bay el pelú. The neighboring villages are called with trumpets. Payment for the fishermen. Ceremony of Aneu a lius (ómu to break lius coconut) with the bat dek (deg) or pang (bang) as magic over the net. "Without looking at the nut, he throws it to the ground, and if both halves are lying with the opening up, it means that the new chief will live for a long time."

Then the nut is bound together and brought to rubak nr. II, who will keep it as a reminder that he owes a fishing trip. Then the fish are distributed.

¹⁶⁶From mangatakl, to carry a basket with a long handle.

¹⁶⁷Compare with KUB. II p. 81 and Goréör.

¹⁶⁸A so-called Gosalmelég is also mentioned as a monster in the north; see story 204.

¹⁶⁹KUB.I p. 25 writes it Godal Melek.

¹⁷⁰According to KUB. V. p. 26 the blai also came from Nggeĩangěł.

¹⁷¹Rubak nr.V from Ulimáng; see log on the north gabel of the rubak-bai Gosobulngáu in Melekéiok. Beside the galid-house Gosúgěł tet is depicted, which stood in Melekéiok (see above p. 89).

¹⁷²More in detail about the dances in part VI.

¹⁷³KUB. II p. 65 Arudelbil; all women of the settlement are called ar Togěđ leĩ

¹⁷⁴Fish, see index part III.

¹⁷⁵The title was brought to the Bilung of Goréör, when she was Diraúďěs, the wife of aRăklaĩ; she is one of Idíd's clan women (see Gor. At.I, Gen. II).

¹⁷⁶*kauogáro* to marry each other.

¹⁷⁷In former times independent as Ióu l pelú, Ngėrugóp see p. 94.

¹⁷⁸see above p. 97.

¹⁷⁹Dilmorórou in story 58, see blai VIII of Goréör.

¹⁸⁰Pronounced almost like Ůúďěs, means "navel"

¹⁸¹see story 113 of Garagár and Gėlagáng.

¹⁸²Others say in Ngátpang.

¹⁸³KUB.: Ardír a Keytugey.

¹⁸⁴KUB.: Gobak ara Aybadákal of Royospela.

¹⁸⁵KUB.: Makadel atomagây. He is said to be from Ngivál; but the title belongs to Melekéiok. see above.

¹⁸⁶Gėbilrulúkěđ At. I Gen. IV.

¹⁸⁷*aRăklaĩ* 8 Těmól, At. 1 Gen. IV.

¹⁸⁸Diragelsóng and daughter Dirageiteĩ.

¹⁸⁹KUB. II p. 40: "there are some circumstances that make the Obokúl (title-holding man KR.) keep the title with him and then the oldest woman is called Kouróđ, just like the council of the oldest women ara Kourođ (from "rođ" in uróđok and rođoliy, fertility, multiply)". I learned that all woman of a blai together are called arurót, but only at I and II. In Melekéiok Gourót is a secondary title of the family I Udēs.

¹⁹⁰Now in Berlin; see story of Ngardmaû (KUB. V p. 39).

¹⁹¹The one depicted by KUB. VIII plate XXXIII 5 was still there in 1907.

¹⁹²KUB.II p. 116 Kobokobákel.

¹⁹³In 1907 a Mebúk was the priest, at the time of KUBARY an important fish-priest Iranathkibukul (Ngirangëtibúgël) was here; he died around 1895 (KUB. VIII p. 128).

¹⁹⁴see the end of chant 195.

¹⁹⁵Bad bai; the iliud-bai is kldok and situated at the end of the stone path; KUBARY stayed there a long time.

¹⁹⁶Made of raw wood and without any decoration (teleót).

¹⁹⁷see Ngarengasáng.

¹⁹⁸Instead of rivál also pronounced livál.

¹⁹⁹"The house of Meregórog bökü," a female thief who stole everything, just like Diltegógo in story 30. Therefore, she is often depicted in the bai with long fingers. Compare Ngardmaû p. 74 and story 8 of a Ugélkeklaû. P. RAYMUND, p. 53, notes Morrochóroch Obogú came from Ngabúkëd; the long hands are depicted in the string game. Gomispís, a galid-place, was also here on a hill (s. 34 Ngëráir).

²⁰⁰A short remark concerning this event can be found at KUB. II p. 98.

²⁰¹In story 60 a landing place Kelebís at a place 26 aImakáng is mentioned; in story 8 about Kelebis near Keklaû.

²⁰²Once oppressed by Ngarebökü, see story 90.

²⁰³see story 58.

²⁰⁴As I did not visit this area, I have no knowledge about the course of the Ngarebökü River. It is possible that there is a basin in the west of the Ngarségël hill, through which the river takes its course.

²⁰⁵There is supposed to have been a galid-place Gomispis nearby here (see above p. 120, footnote 1.).

²⁰⁶Pronounced like Gaisár.

²⁰⁷Name of Ngardmaû (Ngërutói) s. there.

²⁰⁸Means: "The Combs of the měás-Fish", i.e. his poisonous spine on the back; compare Ngarmíd on Goréör.

²⁰⁹Not called bítal blai aIdúp, but bítal blai Ngerebís.

²¹⁰aIpel'lú in story 98.

²¹¹Also a name in story 146.

-
- ²¹²In the channel the rocks Ngomeóngĕl are situated, where a boat perished and shipwrecked (see story 102).
- ²¹³He was called metĕúl díong Ngingd. You could only have a bath here when two or three men from each side were present. Then one of each side took a bath, but never without a patrol sitting there, otherwise, without any doubt, one would have tricked the other and taken his head.
- ²¹⁴KUB. V p. 18 calls the female goddess Kad er bub.
- ²¹⁵s. story 208.
- ²¹⁶s. chant 208.
- ²¹⁷see the hero Ngiramoai. Story 198 and 199.
- ²¹⁸In 1910 he lived in Ngarengasáng.
- ²¹⁹Südseehandbuch des Reichsmarineamts IV–VI. part, p. 59.
- ²²⁰*bakaĩ* syrup pot.
- ²²¹v.M.M. says that the stone woman Milad is still in Ngaramlungúi; the face and the breast as well as the other body parts can be seen on the stone. I heard nothing about this stone. v.M.M. himself was not in a Imeúngs.
- ²²²*bug* = dil woman.
- ²²³see story 9 from Ngorót, formerly called turūdeł: "Destroying While Playing".
- ²²⁴Compare Ngarderár in aImelik.
- ²²⁵ = gĕbíl.
- ²²⁶see story 8 and story 111.
- ²²⁷Sister Gasaŭ married a Ulúi from blai Gorúgei in Old-Ngarekeaĩ.
- ²²⁸separated in 1910.
- ²²⁹see bl. 25 Goréör.
- ²³⁰The natives report that once an alligator snapped a man off this bridge, which is also depicted in a picture story in Ngimís (see story 119).
- ²³¹According to one information, this one is supposed to have been nr. I and ibedagál was nr. II, though he held the power.
- ²³²see Nggamaséd p. 152; dam obviously = gadám "father"; KUB. V p. 18 mentions Eyluay a Ngéukl as goddess. Compare Dam lĕ galíd in Keklaŭ p. 67.
- ²³³Just like bl. II in aIraĩ (see there), this blai had the right to carve the kingfisher bird for the feast.
- ²³⁴name see a Imeúngs.
- ²³⁵"Passage-mountain", because in the east is Rois Gámliangĕl and in the west the rock Ngarabiúl, situated similar to an acorn (biúl from búi shame [or private parts]). This rock is visible from far in the south (Vol. I p. 227 pict. 32). You can see it especially well from the bridge Ngarekamâis on Goréör jutting up crooked like a wart. Next to it you can see the Roisbóng near Galëgúi as a vaulted hillock, which drops steeply towards the east.

²³⁶crooked stone.

²³⁷"Moon-Mountain" because the moon and the sun were created here (see story 6).

²³⁸also called Buk ra Ngabáng, after the pyramid-like hill, which can be seen beautifully in pict. 36.

²³⁹*ngilásä* means the "wreck" of a ship, formed from másag "to walk up". Here an empty shell: galëgëd a crab.

²⁴⁰Crinum plant. See above p. 162.

²⁴¹WILLIAM GIBBON heard the following information from the oldest woman in älmelík; her name was Dirurugerúdël (nr. III) äľüäue.

²⁴²South of the western head of the stone path is a place called Golakáng "Pot". Nobody knew where this name came from. Then, when a road was dug, a pot covered with a coral slab was found. It is said to have been brought from Peliliou. See story 129. A piece of this pot is in Hamburg.

²⁴³Another god Ngiraideĩ seems to have been venerated in the meantime; see story 206.

²⁴⁴Not Golertóng, as on the map.

²⁴⁵Rubak nr. 19 of a Imeúngs also has this name see p. 142)

²⁴⁶More correctly written tungd = the spikes on the back of the fish.

²⁴⁷see also the isolated lime rocks that the galid threw onto the volcanic land; their names are Debúl and Ngalángël in Vol. 1 p. 195.

²⁴⁸Name (spathe of the coconut flower), Tangregói's stranded boat (see story 100).

²⁴⁹KUB: II p. 110 Hohomiy, compare Melekéiok.

²⁵⁰The bai was already photographed by KUB. (demonstrated in S. K. p. 537 nr. 179 and 180). It was an ordinary bai, only the foundation was double. On the gable was a carved dilugai-figure, above this one a painted one (see Vol. 3, cult of the Gaild). Next to it, there was an enormous tet-shrine for the village god also photographed by KUB. (nr. 181) (see also there).

²⁵¹Compare Ngarbagéd-Bai.

²⁵²According to KUB: II p. 111, it is said that in addition to Angkey, his wife Amlahél (Mlagél) also comes inside. Both of them are kept in a cave of the mountain Madálabai (see Nggasagáng). When the dancers are coming out the wooden image of the god Medegeipélau and his mother Duói is added (see p. 43).

-
- ²⁵³KUB.calls Ardialul the first chancellor of the country a Iraĩ. Photography from 1873 documented in S.K. p. 539 nr. 173, there nr.170 also Ngirigiklang.
- ²⁵⁴see story 140 about the rich and poor rooster, the rooster (malk) of Ngeráod and Bések.
- ²⁵⁵also pronounced a Ikrebai.
- ²⁵⁶Landmark for the men fishing for shark is the Dup near Ngatkíp, see there. These fishermen are only allowed to chew desúm-gras.
- ²⁵⁷More about this in story 143. The first arrivals already found settlers in Ngarabesék on the mountain Rois rabése, but they were not be welcomed by them; this is the reason why they jumped down from Golidĩl.
- ²⁵⁸Concerning III and IV see story 141 Ngisél a sogósog.
- ²⁵⁹KUB.V p. 18 Kaymagémet, 9 Amlahél.
- ²⁶⁰On the channel the place Mlotórog, where club Ngaratatiróu performed its first act of strength, lifting up a fallen almond tree (story 161).
- ²⁶¹thus it is usually spoken, though it should be written madál a i or ü. A similarly named rock is south of Ng arsúl near Ngarebekál (p. 136).
- ²⁶²Around 1800 there seems to have been a stone path leading from a Meungs to *a*Ugulaiás, which had been brought to Ngarekamaĩsunder Ibēdul 7.
- ²⁶³Landing place on the north coast; in the west is a double-rock, point Derómel, which probably is called Pkul ai ngerengárk; the western point is Pkul a ilemúngel.
- ²⁶⁴More correctly written Ketungd, see above p. 179.
- ²⁶⁵Consisting of two parts; see Vol. I p. 189.
- ²⁶⁶named after the 'bamboo-drainpipe', which is there.
- ²⁶⁷Another explanation for the word is oreór to frighten, goréor a means to scare, obviously by the power of *a*Ugél'lēgalíd; see story 195^b verse 2 at the end.
- ²⁶⁸The last picture seen from the land shows that in 1907 the boathouse had no roof.
- ²⁶⁹Here lived the notorious club Ngaratatiróu (story 161); it also seemed to have inhabited bai G. a Dngorónger, which later on became the home of club Melemótom, which was mentioned in story 194.
- ²⁷⁰Once I heard this bai being called Ngetibar l bai, but I have no explanation for it. In S.-K. p. 537 it is written that it was called Dybatel bay (according to KUB.), this seems to be the same name.
- ²⁷¹S.-K.,p. 537, says that Armitelbaj was been built (ca. 1869) by Ajbatul, who finally was been chased away, and that he had built it at exactly the same spot where he had shot his brother and predecessor. This information is not correct (see Vol. 1 p. 143).
- ²⁷²Collisions are easily possible here. Therefore, somebody coming stops in front of the corner

-
- and shouts ki me kóng "we are coming". Somebody just passing by says pěbóng "come" and makes way to the outside. Otherwise the make way regulation is not common.
- ²⁷³Now in Hamburg; pict. see part vol. 3.
- ²⁷⁴In 1910, still new with a beautiful painted gable, therefore often depicted (see RAYMUND, KR. IV, etc.).
- ²⁷⁵I was also told that only the blebáol-heads in the crossbeams depict this memory.
- ²⁷⁶By mistake the point turned into an island on map 26a; the mangroves towards the land have to be imagined nonexistent.
- ²⁷⁷as the crow flies, because the dam is smoothly bent to the west, from tree to tree. It does not seem to be very old, as can be seen above on p. 202, at Ngarekobasáng.
- ²⁷⁸KUB. Arekamai.
- ²⁷⁹see also KUB. I p. 37-40.
- ²⁸⁰Coconut and taro cooked with syrup.
- ²⁸¹Almond míēg together with syrup are baked into the form of a dugong.
- ¹⁸²Below at the kebl̄l of bl. nr. I, which are important for the bestowing of a title it is mentioned that bl. a Ibluk in Ngarebódēl gives him the Melis, who also had to offer ologúi — wiping of the anus.
- ²⁸³From oldak to mix.
- ²⁸⁴*godóim* meat, tu banana; further fish, taro, etc.
- ²⁸⁵compare also above p. 144 the reception of the title Ngirturóng in distr. V, from blai II in Goréör and the addition of Ngáruangēl in story 20.
- ²⁸⁶mostly pronounced as Ugerërak.
- ²⁸⁷In former times it was called Kldngūl remerīl, to be distinguished from Kldngūl ra tēgamding; see above.
- ²⁸⁸See both taro patches of fam. I Klóu and Kekerél Ngarabilobáog in the map of the village, in the south as I a and I b nearby the bath Kesól, see p. 209 and see above p. 213.
- ²⁸⁹Ngar sounds here like Ngor. see p. 209.
- ²⁹⁰from English.
- ²⁹¹now stands on government land in Madalañ.
- ²⁹²Because Ngiratēkēki IV is the head, therefore albedul I is the deputy of IV. tekaūl ra gamágatēgēki [gamágel is the chew, name for the 10 rubak and for the 10 club eldest].
- ²⁹³KUB. I p. 7 mentions a house of the king called Koratelblai; this seems to be blai Gorágēl, which points to Bilung 8.
- ²⁹⁴Mostly Áibedul, with the stress on the a; from bedul "the head".
- ²⁹⁵Seems to come from the word pilun in Yap, which is used for those who have a lot to say

-
- (compare MÜLLER Yap I p. 234); compare Rüngulbai in Ngarekeaî distr. VI. p. 166.
- ²⁹⁶see the "Samoa Islands" I vol. p. 17.
- ²⁹⁷Nauru, Ergebnisse der Hamburger Siidsee-Expedition 1908—10, vol. p. 192.
- ²⁹⁸Wall.burg.
- ²⁹⁹After a bai in Nggeîangël.
- ³⁰⁰Just as with 6. Kingsós, Regúgër Láug, his wife Rois reported that as a child she had still seen the 6. Galungál, when the old and weak woman had to be carried everywhere according to her command.
- ³⁰¹The name of a blai in a Gal (p. 71), which was populated from Ngáruangël (story 20), belonging to the clans from aIdid, see above p. 216.
- ³⁰²compare Ngabúkëd Túblai.
- ³⁰³a dui title poss. a diül. 7 of these titles are still known: Ngiramangiaū, Ngirakidël, Ngaregól, Gaspángel Ngarekobasáng, aRguld a Iraî, Ngirturóng a Imeúngs, a Guóng Mangal'láng, Ngiraibúog Ngarbagéd. Under Ibëdul Kingsos he brought the people from Ngardolólók to aIraî (see p. 186 and story 161).
- ³⁰⁴derudëm, the totem-fish of fam. II.
- ³⁰⁵Kldngül Ngiramerīl.
- ³⁰⁶aIkelaū did not marry into all these families, only sometimes into Ngaramerīl and Blósog. Also the others should not do so. This marriage restriction does not apply foruriúl blai "secondary houses".
- ³⁰⁷Phot.from 1873 by KUB., shownby S.-K. p. 538, nr. 151.
- ³⁰⁸KUB. I p. 38, he took a photograph of him, provided by S.-K. p. 537, nr. 136.
- ³⁰⁹Phot.see plate 13¹; old phot. by S.-K. p. 539, nr. 152.
- ³¹⁰Old photographs of Rupasak from 1873 in S.-K.p. 539, nr.154 and 174.
- ³¹¹She took the place of a mother to my wife and during our stay in bai a Dngeróngër, nearly everyday she brought something to eat. The watercolor in plate 1 is after life and very authentic.
- ³¹²KUB.Irakogomur. Old photograph from 1973 provided by S.-K. p. 539, nr.155 and 175.
- ³¹³According to a different statementNgiradongól̂ has to be placed in Ngurusár. Then Goukerdéu would be a brother of the three. It was said about one Goukerdéu in Ngariëlëp that this one seemed to be Mad and had sired 16 children.
- ³¹⁴Title of blai nr.VIII, near to which the place is situated.KUB. I p. 12 says that her image is the shark.
- ³¹⁵The father of Ngëlengí was from Ngëruluóbël, the mother from Peliliou, altogether there were four brothers and sisters. Later on the mother married Gëtiëgád from Iebúkūl-Goréör, who died. Then Ngēlengí married Bárau from Iebúkūl, a relative of Ngardókou. When he left the marriage, he gave his son Sebald to Ngardókou. In 1909 Ngēlengí also had a son, called Profesáng, named after me. But he died after some moons.

³¹⁶Was killed by dynamite, Ngirturóng nr. II from almeúngs, distr. V.

³¹⁷Title from Ngaramlungúi (Ngaremeténgēl), p. 50.

³¹⁸Mesúngil seems to be KUB.'s Maúngil (see K.-S. p. 538, nr. 146) who in 1873 was about 15 years old, but already very worn out; she was said to have been very pretty.

³¹⁹KUB. I p. 13 mentions a certain Keráskēs, as the king's relative and head of a club (see club I and bl. 42).

³²⁰Lives now near Ngirabiól in Ngarebódēl. Kálei lives in bl. 40 and bl. IX. A second wife left him.

³²¹On the left hand side of the image is the edge of a small flat place where in 1907 bai Kekerél Losobulngaū was constructed for Berlin (see Litt. at v. LUSCHAN).

³²²Lives in bd. 40 Gēgeráng in Goréör.

³²³Not to be confused with pierNgarekamaĩs located nearby.

³²⁴"Combs from themēás fish."A type of Teutis with a poisonous back-barb, like in Ngareóúdēl, Ngramíd, and Nggēsár.

³²⁵The name comes from aUgēlpelú (see story 195^a).

³²⁶In 1907 I heard the name Modmorúr. Here the net for sardines is called ingērú.

³²⁷see story 154.

³²⁸Next to it a sun house (gaiós).

³²⁹In 1910, the titleholder was also rubak nr. III altpík in Ngardolólók (Pelíliou). Blai Taulbuk of the priest also belongs to this house (story 195^a).

³³⁰Only a small spirit hut (ulongóng) was still there.

³³¹as in Ngarekesauáol, Ngarmíd, etc.

³³²legend of the turtle; such were planted here.

³³³see Vol. 1 p. 203. Name see below at history.

³³⁴This blai is also akeblíl of bl. II of Goréör.

³³⁵Compare Ngarekesauáol, Ngarebódēl and Nggēsár.

³³⁶means "Edge of the Blade of Grass", used as a nickname for men and women when they do not hold a title, in the sense of "filling in"; thus not a good title.

³³⁷"Stem of riu". Today a riu, an enormous Leguminosa tree, Dolichondrone spathacea K. Sch., with white pipe shaped flowers, as big as a finger, stands right next to the bai on the trailhead. In 1907, the bai was under construction, the former was called Bagés lëgáng.

³³⁸Belongs to kleblil of bl.I aldid in Goréör. His title Tulik rests now with bl. 12 Golngauáol in Regeñüngël.

³³⁹Means "Distributor", but here it is a title belonging to house II.

³⁴⁰*saū*, a small sweet scented grass.

³⁴¹see bl. V Goréör.

³⁴²*gäreál* the shark teeth; see the story 164 from Maluád lëgúr which partially takes place in a Meúngs and where a channel is called Ngaranguál.

³⁴³From pelú land, ióu below (see Vol. 1 p. 197).

³⁴⁴The strait between Ngarabāká and Ngesebús is called Toi ra malát a ěárs on map 2, "Passage of the Ripped Sails". But in story 16 it is said that the strait between Ngesebús and the next island Ngaregëu to the north is meant; this is the reason why it is indicated in map 29 north of Negesebús. Obviously in this area under land the boats are easily surprised by wind gusts (see Vol. I p. 197).

³⁴⁵One night we slept here, but there were so many mosquitoes that we could not stay, therefore we moved to bai F. Merés, compare story 163.

³⁴⁶according to story 73, Ngarabéóug is situated south of Ngariáp.

³⁴⁷see story 9 about Ngorót, "to bring all opinions into one".

³⁴⁸SEMPERII p. 326 says about this stone path: "The exit of the wide village-path towards the sea is defended by a wall as high as a man. It has a small entrance with a corridor between the walls, which bends at right angles three times and allows only one man to pass at a time. Then the wall extended on both sides parallel to the beach until it was lost in the swamp and the thick mangroves." On October 31, 1783 the English must have seen the same wall: They reported that the town was defended by a stone wall thrown up across the causeway, which leads up to it; that this wall was ten or twelve feet high, with a foot-bank of stone raised behind, upon which they could stand and throw spears at their enemies. That the water near the town was so very shallow, that canoes could only go in at high tide. — see KEATE p. 204 and Vol. 1 p. 116.

³⁴⁹*Dangdangkabeúl*, a man of this house, gave people everything to eat and to drink and did not want anything for himself, except the feces and the urine. They were ashamed of him and pushed him into the cave Ngaramélt in Ngatanggaū (see Ngariáp), where he turned into stone. Without any doubt this is Dengdangbiúl p. 96.

³⁵⁰see Melekéiok p. 90, footnote.

³⁵¹SEMP. II p. 285—86 reports it exaggeratedly bad. On the height he found breadfruit trees and old walls, where Ngaregól is said to have lived for some time during the war;

see 10. Gomiütēl.

³⁵²Seems to be "Clöbbgöll Inatoluck" SEMP.II p. 297.

³⁵³Meaning "water hole" this means hole in the ground of the water; see Ngaregamaî.

³⁵⁴Burnt down by the Spaniards.

³⁵⁵Now in Goréör.

³⁵⁶see the islands Doremëgól near Keklau.

³⁵⁷Surveying S. M. S. Planet 1909.

Footnote 358 (page 287) could not be found on the repective page and is mentioned in the text.

³⁵⁹*másag* the black Acanthurus-fish, or from omásāg "to cross", or ng másag "to climb up".

³⁶⁰P. PLACIDUS ("Aus d. Miss." 1913, p. 29) refers without any doubt to SEMP., when he says:

" Palau is an infertile land and the information that once it had been heavily populated is a big fairy tale. The land does not yield a lot and cannot nourish more than 10.000 people. If 40—50 000 are supposed to have lived in Palau, as some assert, then they all died of hunger". — He is quite right in saying so. But more than 10.000 certainly lived here, as has been shown.

³⁶¹In the Nouveau dictionnaire de Géogr, univers.de Vivien St Martin 1890 I find 506 square kilometers (source BEHM and WAGNER), which, even including the Gogeál, is too much. The Kolonialatlas from 1912 reports 450 square kilometers.

³⁶²see also the article "Das Aussterben der Naturvölker and Mittel zur Abhilfe" [The Extinction of Indigenous People and Corrective Measures" in the "Woche", 12. Jahrgang, nr.37, for the Kolonialkongress.

³⁶³see blai 13 Goréör.

³⁶⁴HOCKIN p. 19 and 20 and part 1 p. 120.

³⁶⁵Thus it was reported, though from hearsay, by the government doctor of Yap, Dr. BUSE in the Medizinalbericht aus den Deutsch. Schutzgeb. [Medicinal Report from the German Protectorate} 1909/10; 200-300 natives are said to have died.

³⁶⁶see the most important skin diseases of the South Pacific, appendix to my monograph "The Samoa Islands". SEMPER II p. 361 says that the color of the skin is masked by disfiguring skin diseases (Ichtyosis!), this I have to deny.

³⁶⁷see Z. f. Ethnologic 14 (1882) p. (162).

³⁶⁸Monatsberichte der Aka. d. Wiss. zu Berlin [Monthly Reports of the scientific Academy in Berlin], 1881 p. 1133.

³⁶⁹HA. I. See also there p. 25-30 "Einige Bemerkungen zu den anthropologischen and photographischen Arbeitsverfahren auf der Planetreise" ["Some Remarks Concerning the Anthropological and Photographic Procedures"] by A. KRÄMER. Further I want to point to the publications of Dr. HAMBRUCH "Ein neuer Ohrhöhenmesser nach Prof. KRÄMER" ["A New Measurement of the Height of Ears according to Prof KRÄMER"] in the Korrespondenzblatt der D. G. f. A. E. U., 1909, p. 1.

³⁷⁰General albinism goróu (means also "lightening") is seldom, but it happens often in form of patches on hands and feet.

³⁷¹in v. M.M. II, which has similar anthropological explanation, BROCA 43 is a reference to the back of women, which is especially exposed to the sun when working in the taro fields.

³⁷²Curly in the general sense (see picture at R. MARTIN Lehrbuch der Anthropologie, Jena 1914, p. 189, only appears rarely, as for instance at women's temples, and straight is only the children's hair. In v.M.M. I there is a more detailed explanation: "In addition to the ones with straight hair you can also meet people, who underneath their bulbous wig, behind the ears or on the neck, have long thin strands of curly hair, which are formed like a cork screw and whose end have not more than 4 to 5 mm in diameter.

³⁷³"I never heard anything about crushing the nose, as it is done in Yap, but in any case the nose is already so flat, that quite often on the broad (flat) back of it you can see vertical wrinkles. I found this so characteristic that I send a sketch of such a nose attached. When laughing, smelling, as well as being unsatisfied, etc. these can be seen and are even noticeable as thin lines in a quiet face.

³⁷⁴In the work I, note 8, the perforation is linked with the entrance into the realm of the dead; more about it in part VI 1.

³⁷⁵see A. KR. Hawaii, East Micronesia, and Samoa, Stuttgart 1906, p. 294.

³⁷⁶see part-volume I, p. 175. The list is on p. 149 of the text, some figures of speech are also included. All of it is so bad that it is impossible to use.

³⁷⁷In 1874 STEINTHAL spoke about SEMPER's collection (Z. f. E. 6. p. 72), however, according to my knowledge, it was never published.

³⁷⁸When SEMPER II, p. 48, talks about the simple structure of the local language, then it only proves that he did not spend much time dealing with it. This can also be seen in the records of his book, pp. 202—204. Nevertheless this gives a first impression of the grammar. He tries to provide some rules, pp. 369—70, yet does not provide more than the possessive suffixes that MC CLUER had already indicated, using plick and plim as derivations of ply, the house. When SEMP. I says to Schwerin in his 1871 lecture about the Palauan language, "I spoke the language very well, better than the common people", then this shows more than clearly his prejudice concerning such a possibility. He also

-
- noted 21 consonants, while WALL. only indicates 12 (I found 11, because for me WALLESEr's g and k are one and the same).
- ³⁷⁹Wherever this is not the case, WALL. is always indicated.
- ³⁸⁰WILS. 1783 wrote gattam and gatheil; uádam seems to be the plural.
- ³⁸¹WILS. writes Cootoom, also colocol.
- ³⁸²He meant argád »human beings«, besides he mentions lakad.
- ³⁸³see more below, in section IV about the adjective.
- ³⁸⁴see part-volume I, p. 196.
- ³⁸⁵*gad* liver does not have the form gadél but is gadengél; réngis not rengál but rengúl.
Concerning the latter, see part volume 3, painting and soul.
- ³⁸⁶I use the word Europic for everything belonging to the white race, while European means only from Europe.
- ³⁸⁷Remember the well-known changes, German: Mutter, Lat.: mater, Engl.: mother, Span.: madre, French: mère.
- ³⁸⁸Maybe the solution can be found in the fact that in Austronesian dialects "spirit" is also anis, on Ralik-Ratak anidj. There medja is the "eye", on Palau it changes to omés "to see".
- ³⁸⁹The article a often acquires the stress, so that for instance in aíbēdul, aíōlt it rests entirely on the diphthong ai. Nevertheless, I wrote a Ibēdul etc.
- ³⁹⁰Therefore people sometimes say trúiüŋ l klóbak »the 10 chiefs«. There also is an exclamation e rūbal similar to our »Oh God«.
- ³⁹¹seedistrict I Mangal'áng, nr. VIII, a Iebúkūl, nr. I, etc.
- ³⁹²KUB. II, p. 79 believes gad means »human being« and amis the exclusive possession; this is a mistake. uádam can be found in its singular form in the chant of story 11.
- ³⁹³*ar dalál* is used for the female chiefs in a village.
- ³⁹⁴A similar form is in chant 194, chapter VII, ca. line 70, where armoklóu stands for "big people". armeāu is used for people of one place = the naked ones.
- ³⁹⁵*sómir* superior to them.
- ³⁹⁶*medú* breadfruit is changed into medungél.
- ³⁹⁷Also written iápēs.
- ³⁹⁸Other examples for possessive suffixes on adjectives:
- | | |
|--|---|
| mokokák I slow, | mokokāu you slow |
| from meregēd quick | urēgēdák I fast, morēgēdāu you fast |
| uriul back, poss. ulél . | |
- ³⁹⁹CHEYNE already recorded this word as mammuth.

⁴⁰⁰According to WALL."the big house" is translated a klou l blai or a blai a klou"the house is big". However, besides the l, gad also draws in the a, for instance kloul a chad. Yet, in my opinion legad is just as well established as a closed word, besides the word gad"human being", so that this is no exception.

⁴⁰¹Men tálagad, tērúlagád, tedeĩlagad, . . . many bibác lagád.

⁴⁰²Reciprocal from oudertáng, to pick up one by one; see footnote 2.

⁴⁰³WALL.mentions especially the distributive numbers: dertáng or dersetáng one each, dersěrúng two each, dersuedeĩ three each, and so on, and the verb akoudertáng I take one of each; akoudertágār I take ten of each.

⁴⁰⁴WALL.teliútoch a span (with the thumb and the middle finger),

" teliutocholétem " (" " " " index finger),

" telbusúngel " (" " " " bent index finger).

⁴⁰⁵WALL.tuguulemél.

⁴⁰⁶WALL.ardáll weak string (with weakly outstretched arms).

⁴⁰⁷*lágad*"human being".

⁴⁰⁸WALL.: tir they (only for persons; for objects ngi).

⁴⁰⁹Though not fale a'ú, as in Malayan rumah sahaya.

⁴¹⁰hurry, otherwise you will be late morěgědāu a ka dúop. see above p. 330.

⁴¹¹often it sounds like gělagáng.

⁴¹²In front of other words it sounds like mě; for instance *mě ngul*bring here!

⁴¹³see chant 194.

⁴¹⁴*dělangókl* to reside.

⁴¹⁵For more detailed information see the intended index of words in chapter VIII.

⁴¹⁶WALL.relat. of melái, see below 8 and 9.

⁴¹⁷In chant 196, verse 4 derived from ngu"to take": see also ngara p. 320.

⁴¹⁸WALL.soák; this is how I wrote it down in chant 235. Without any doubt it often sounded like this. However, sauák seems to be the right way of writing it, only in the plural there is a long o.

⁴¹⁹see above p. 341, footnote 2.

⁴²⁰Also bom 'meskák, shortened beskák; in poetry also meskók.

⁴²¹*msáng* »gave to him« (story 202): also bsá »give to him« (chant 200), debsá(chant 206).

⁴²²for instance I come to akikó ra

⁴²³If you meet at night, one person says: kiměkóng"we come", the other one steps aside and says: běbóng"go and pass".

⁴²⁴*bagěrei!* put it down! also "it does not matter" (seems to come from omkedúrěto put, mokodusí put it, ulekudúrěs lying etc.) see also 18.

⁴²⁵In chant 203, line 122 mugiskák.

⁴²⁶Shortened in daily conversation aŭgai.

⁴²⁷Not lodengeli; ā seems to be "any thing".

⁴²⁸Pronounced Pelú and not Pélju; see part-volume I, p.183.

⁴²⁹Many drawings from this book are in DIEZMANN's Malerische Reise.